Mrs. Margaret Waley Sentenced to 20 Years

CONVICTED IN WEYERHAEUSER KIDNAP CASE

Will Be Sent To Women's Prison Farm at Milan, Michigan.

TACOMA, July 17.—Mrs. Margaret Waley was sentenced to 20 years in the federal women's detention farm prison at Milan, Mich. today by Federal Judge E. E. Cushman, for her part in the kidnaping of nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser.

Mrs. Waley was convicted Saturday on charges of violating the Lindbergh kidnaping law and conspiracy to kidnap.

Her husband, Harmon Waley, is serving 45 years in McNeil's Island prison for his part in the northwest's greatest kidnaping.

The Utah girl who "got into trouble" because she followed her ex-convict husband in crime, showed no emotion.

Twice the 19-year-old wife attempted to plead guilty with her husband but her plea was refused by Judge Cushman when both her attorney and her husband said she had no early knowledge of the kidnaping.

12 Counties Are Represented at Agent Conference

Twelve counties were represented at the general conference of county agents and assistants in cotton adjustment at the Eastland Tuesday, C. Metz, head, county agent, stated Wednesday.

This district is known as the eastern section of district three. The county agent stated.

T. B. Wood, district agent, with headquarters at College Station, presided.

Speakers included Fritz Liske of the state cotton board, William M. Moss, also with the state board, and W. L. Hardy from Washington, D. C.

MISSING MAN RETURNS TO RANGER HOME

While his many Ranger friends were fearing for his safety, radio stations were broadcasting the fact that he was missing and perhaps dead and two news associations and several daily newspapers conducted a search for him, or his body. A. F. Hartman, reported missing enroute from Douglas, Ariz., calmly drove his car into Ranger Tuesday evening and went to his apartment in the P. & Q. building, unaware of the fact that he was the object of a statewide search.

Today he was being greeted on the streets of Ranger by his many friends and was being hailed as "the dead man."

Hartman left Douglas, Ariz., as reported in news dispatches from El Paso, on July 10. Several days later a steel lock box, containing papers that identified it as Hartman's, was found in a coal car in the El Paso freight yards. A check-up revealed that he was not in Douglas, El Paso or Ranger, and the search for him started.

Hartman said today that the box was stolen from his car while it was parked in El Paso. After leaving El Paso he continued on to the X Ranch of the Reynolds Land and Cattle Company, where he stayed a short time, continuing on to Monahans, where he stopped for two days before continuing his trip on to Ranger.

Hartman believes that the box was stolen by thugs who followed him from Douglas, where he cashed a large check, as the box stolen was in the bottom of a large carton in his car and the things on top of it had not been stolen, indicating that the thief or thieves were after the box only.

Hartman said, also, that the missing interests in which he is interested in Arizona, looked very promising, but that they were shut down at this time because of strikes.

Paroled Convict Kills One Man, Injures Others

ELMIRA, N. Y., July 17.—George Moore, 50, a paroled convict, went on a rampage with an ax today, killed the man who befriended his wife while he was in jail and wounded two others. He escaped.

His victims were Frederick White, 50, killed; his son, Louis, 15, reported dying, and Mrs. Moore, 48, suffering from a fractured jaw.

The woman told police her husband broke into the house last night. He went to her bedroom carrying a knife and an ax. He struck her with the ax, shattering her jaw.

New Procedure Is Investigated In Hot Oil Cases

AUSTIN, July 17.—New procedure in the drive for oil law enforcement was instituted today by the attorney general's department.

Receivers for six refineries were en route to East Texas today to take charge until confiscated oil has been sold. Heretofore the procedure of appointing a receiver and ordering a sheriff's sale has been used. Now the two are combined.

Mr. Roosevelt, as a lawyer, recalled laughingly that it is an old trick of the defense when its case is weak to ask that it go over to the next session of court.

He feels that is what is happening in congress now in the drive for adjournment without enactment of his measures, such as the tax program.

For the third time he repeated he wanted the tax measure put through at this session, though he had not discussed it recently with congressional leaders.

ROOSEVELT IS CONFIDANT OF PASSING BILLS

WASHINGTON, July 17.—President Roosevelt convinced he has a strong case, revealed to the conference of press men today that he is determined on enactment of his program this session, especially his tax measures.

Mr. Roosevelt, as a lawyer, recalled laughingly that it is an old trick of the defense when its case is weak to ask that it go over to the next session of court.

He feels that is what is happening in congress now in the drive for adjournment without enactment of his measures, such as the tax program.

For the third time he repeated he wanted the tax measure put through at this session, though he had not discussed it recently with congressional leaders.

Slayer of Child on Trial July 17

Confessed killer of 11-year-old Lillian Galloway who he had lured her to his Detroit apartment, Merton Ward Goodrich, above, will go to trial on July 17 on a charge of first degree murder, after pleading not guilty at his recent arraignment. The wandering musician, captured in New York after nine months' flight, is a former inmate of the Lima, O., hospital for the criminal insane. His wife also is a prisoner.

that reminds me...

Los Angeles has as its guests the members of the American Bar Association represented by attorneys from all over the nation. They are passing resolutions, making suggestions and criticizing just like human beings do when they get together in convention. Chief among the impressions are that they are a body of congress. The only difference is that they have no members telling them what to do and can consider the matters in hand as they see it, more seriously and with better understanding. They have no constituents back home to worry about if they say or do the wrong thing that they won't be sent back to the next convention. Incidentally they all pay their own expenses and draw no salaries while in session. Keeping up with this convention and the important things that they have to say about our government and methods is worth while. If any of the attorneys attending this convention have senatorial or congressional ambitions and should become elect, they would certainly do their government a great favor by adhering to the swing of the manner in which the American Bar Association does things unfettered and unhampered by political influences. They won't go haywire on things the people should benefit by.

Huey Long doesn't stop until he has every barrier out of his way for absolute dictatorship power in his own state of Louisiana.

Mayor T. Semmes Walmesley is the target for his ousting proceedings. The history of his past wabout of undesirables in his estimation indicates that the mayor must eventually bow to the will of Senator Long. All of the mayors colleagues on the city board have quit his parade and joined the crowds that follow Long. What a man! What a man!

Wonder how many American girls in the United States envy the girl who is to marry a Chinaman in Columbus, Ohio?

It seems that the Chinaman lost a purse and the girl working in a 5 and 10 store found it and turned it in. Now as a reward for her honesty she's got a Chinaman. The Chinaman remarked when he found out about the girl, "Such a girl should be rewarded. I should like to help her get a better position." The better position was an opportunity to mix the yellow and the white race. If the Chinaman's father objects, they still have the route of African custom to rely on—to follow the dictates of their hearts.

Relief from the excessive heat was much in evidence Tuesday.

During the night there was more comfort than for two weeks past. Folks seem to look the part of refreshment as they greeted each other this morning as a result of having taken advantage of the cool night by having a good night's rest. Hot nights are insomnia breeders and no fooling. Some of these days every house will be air cooled and conditioned and the price of the necessary to accomplish it will be in the reach of everybody. Air conditioned homes and business houses are one of health's greatest assets and the invention will prove eventually a boon to mankind. Some live wide-awake business interest in Eastland could do much to increase business by installing an air conditioned apparatus in their establishment. Other small towns have falling in line—costs money, but it's worth the price.

RAILROADS MAY REDUCE COACH FARES

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Possibilities that railroads might be forced to reduce fares to 2 cents a mile was seen today in a proposed report to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Irving C. Foch, examiner for the commission, reported the present regular basis passenger fare structure of 3.6 cents a mile is unreasonable.

He recommends the commission establish 2 cents for passenger fares in coaches and 3 cents in Pullmans. Koch also said:

"That experimental fares in the southern and western districts seeking added passengers and low fares are reasonable and lawful. That Pullman surcharges for passengers who ride in sleeping cars are unreasonable and should be eliminated."

Voting Precinct Mistake Corrected

Correcting an inadvertent error made in 1933, county commissioners have ordered that field notes fixing boundaries of No. 1 voting precinct be changed to those for No. 27. 27 were ordered changed to those for No. 1, according to an order of the court on file in the county clerk's office Tuesday.

Both boxes are for voters of Eastland and the adjoining territory.

CROSS ROADS REVIVAL HAS GOOD CROWDS

Good attendance is still in evidence at the Cross Roads revival, being conducted by Rev. H. H. Stephens, with an increase being shown in the attendance each evening.

At the services Tuesday night Rev. Stephens preached on the subject, "The Three I Am's of Jesus" and the sermon was well received by the entire congregation.

An increase is also reported in the prayer hands which meet nightly, the attendance Tuesday night being 78 as compared with 64 who met on Monday evening.

The meetings are being conducted in the open air at the Cross Roads church and the public is cordially invited to attend each service.

Abyssinian Row Will Go Before League Council

LONDON, July 17.—Consideration of the explosive Abyssinia crisis in the League of Nations was regarded as assured today when the government decided to send Anthony Eden to Geneva Tuesday to attend a meeting of the council.

When the council last met it was agreed to meet July 25 to consider the crisis if negotiators had not liquidated border clashes or named an impartial chairman to cast a deciding vote on them.

The big powers tried hard for weeks to sidetrack council consideration. Recent diplomatic activity had been indicated at trying to support Italy, however, and the news of Eden's assignment was regarded as notification this course had been adopted.

School Transfers Must be Made by Aug. 1, Reminder

Students who attended rural schools this year and contemplate transferring to another must make arrangements by Aug. 1, Mrs. W. H. Mullings, assistant county school superintendent, reminded Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Two women were called before congress today to tell what they knew of the burning of telegrams in a Warren, Pa., telegraph office and representative Ralph Brewster's part in the house utility fight.

Testimony of Gladys Loding, blond telegraph clerk in the Warren office and Mrs. Frances Dustin, secretary to Brewster, occupied the senate and house inquiries.

The senate inquiry was directed at revealing the details of the dispatching of some hundreds of telegrams from Warren to Rep. D. J. Driscoll, Dem., Pa., protesting against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Miss Loding and other witnesses testified the messages were signed by names taken from a city directory and original copies were mysteriously burned on the eve of the inquiry.

How You Can See How Peace Theories Work

Whatever else it may do, the dust-up between Italy and Abyssinia is at least providing us with a practical test of some of our fine-spun theories about the way to work for a warless world.

An example or two can be found in the discussion of the matter held recently in the British House of Commons.

Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, suggested that England would welcome any offer of American cooperation in the effort to avert war; but he warned the Commons not to expect too much, adding:

"Let us foster friendship and maintain in our intercourse a realistic attitude toward each other. We must expect no more from our American friends than they are willing to contribute."

This, of course, was simply a reminder that isolationist sentiment is so strong in America nowadays that Washington cannot be expected to make more than a gesture. And that, in turn, calls attention to a fact that friends of peace often overlook: when you try to stop two persons from fighting, it may be necessary for you to do it by force if they won't listen to reason.

In other words, Anglo-American intervention in this quarrel would have scant effect unless everybody clearly understood that in a showdown the two nations would use guns to enforce their views.

Since it is perfectly obvious that neither cares to do that, the sensible thing is to warn everybody to "expect no more from our American friends than they are willing to contribute."

All this, boiled down, simply means that the world is not yet ready for League of Nations Kellogg treaties, and so on. In the last analysis, these things must rest on force, or at least on the threat of force.

If it be known in advance that the force won't be applied, they collapse—as, in point of fact, they already have collapsed.

Then there is that other stunt, dear to the idealist, of embargoing the shipment of munitions to warring nations. The Commons were told that Britain has banned such shipments to Abyssinia, but has not needed to do so in the case of Italy, because Italy makes her own munitions and doesn't need to buy any.

In this case, the ban is less a move for peace than a deft bit of aid to Mussolini. It will not help prevent the war; it will merely make Italian victory more certain.

Here, then, are two bits of "peace machinery" getting a practical test. The one fails because no one cares to apply it properly; the other turns out to be a first-rate help to the party that is forcing the war.

Italy's African Affair May Be No Picnic

The very old and somewhat out-of-date empire of Abyssinia is about to fight with streamlined, modernized Italy, and if the sports fraternity were making book on the affair the odds would be at least 10 to 1, with practically no takers.

Yet the long shot does have a way of galloping home, occasionally, and if the views of an anonymous military expert writing in the London Spectator recently are correct, Italy stands a very broad chance of coming an inglorious cropper in the fighting in Africa.

This writer makes the point that Abyssinia is apt to be an easy place to get into, but a hard one to get out of. The Italian army, he says, ought to be able to drive its way into Addis Ababa, Abyssinian capital, without trouble; once there, however, its troubles would begin.

All the Abyssinians need to do, he continues, is to retreat. To catch and defeat them the Italians would have to cross a rugged mountainous country larger than Morocco—and it took most of France's great colonial army many years to make the Moroccans kneel under.

All this is interesting chiefly as a reminder that wars are seldom fought according to the textbooks. On paper, a modernized and well-disciplined army like that of Mussolini's should have no trouble at all with a horde of semi-savage levies such as Haile Selassie can muster. In actual fact, such encounters often turn out differently.

Augustus Caesar of Rome discovered this 1900 years ago, when Varus got the flower of the Roman army entangled in the Teutoburger forest in Germany, where the barbaric tribesmen annihilated it. Cortez nearly met the same fate in his first drive at the Aztec empire.

The British regulars were no match for the Pennsylvania Indians when Braddock was trapped near Fort Duquesne. The crack cavalry regiment of the U. S. army was overwhelmed when the plains Indians got it in a blind alley at the Little Big Horn.

You could cull a column or so of similar instances from the military histories, but the examples that have been given so far are enough to make the point—which is that making war on a horde of poorly equipped barbarians is a much riskier business than it appears on the surface.

Mussolini's troopers will need all the good generalship and the good luck they can command, if the African campaign is to be the triumphal procession it is expected to be.

Alpinists Open Canadian Camp

BANFF, Canada.—The three-week encampment of the Alpine Club of Canada has opened in the Mt. Assiniboine area with camp pitched on the shores of Lake Magog.

As usual, the camp is open to non-members who qualify for membership by ascending such peaks in the Assiniboine area as the climbing committee approves. But there is ample time for recreation other than climbing. Even Alpinists require preliminary hikes. Each day's activities are concluded with a nightly camp-fire meeting where songs and stories alternate with talks on geology and climber's technique.

Special interest centers on one of the hikes to Assiniboine Pass and down to Cascade Rock, where a waterfall drops 1,500 feet sheer from the snow above. The precipices of Cascade and Gibraltar Rocks rise 2,000 feet above the trail. Directly opposite are the secret hollows of Cave Mountain, which are to be explored by veteran Alpinists.

Chesterfields are mild—mild but not flat. That's one reason why. And they have plenty of taste—without being harsh. That's another reason why. Everybody knows They Satisfy — just about all any cigarette can do.

Monte Carlo Is Seen As Reno Of the Continent

By United Press
MONTE CARLO.—Monte Carlo may be made into a European Reno, should the Casino fail. Divorce fees would offset the rapidly dwindling gaming receipts.

The United Press talked with Maitre Felix Bonaventure, prominent Monegasque lawyer, and the leader of the opposition party within the principality.

Bonaventure said: "It's evident now that there will be no more golden eggs from the Casino goose. So we Monegasques have to look around to see what we can find in place of gaming revenues."

"My party is in favor of exploiting the position of Monaco as a sovereign state. The first thing that comes to my mind in this connection is legislation to make divorce easy. Look at the sums the State of Nevada is realizing from the divorce traffic!"

"Yes, one—the party in power, it still believes in the omnipotence of the 'factory' (Casino). But this party will be out in time. In fact the party that was 'out' five years ago, when we were 'ins.' They were the ones who stood in the street and hooted the Prince at that time! In Monaco if you can rake up a couple of hundred citizens to shout, you have a political majority."

"And then there are other sources of revenue. Pictures and books banned in other countries for political or other reasons, are some of them. I am, of course, exaggerating when I suggest that we could even go so far as to permit a 100 per cent nudist colony on our shores, but we really could! That will give you an idea."

"So we were not worried about the future. Come what may we are not going to starve to death."

M. Theophile Gastaud, another prominent Monegasque, is not of Bonaventure's opinion, as far as it concerns the desperate financial situation of the Casino.

"I still have faith in the Casino. Of course, they need money just now; they are trying to raise 40,000,000 francs ($2,643,000) on a bond issue. If the public should not buy the bonds, I am told that Sir Basil Zaharoff will come to the rescue. I understand that he has promised to do so."

George was first case work supervisor in Eastland county, later leaving to attend a social welfare institute in Dallas, then later called by the Texas relief commission to do special work for the Lamar county relief board.

SUN-TAN advertisement featuring a woman in a swimsuit and the brand name in large letters.

JO DARLEN, finishing her first year in college, learns her father is out of work. Jo gets a job as bookkeeper in a small marine supply house. She is engaged to BRETT PAUL, athletic star. DORIS MARSH, handsome, wealthy, comes to the store to buy equipment for the summer colony he is establishing at Crest Lake. Jo works overtime, assisting with the order, and Marsh asks her to handle the order. She agrees. When Brett telephones Jo tells him she has extra work to do this summer. Marsh takes her to a fashionable restaurant. He tells her about his summer colony at Crest Lake and offers Jo the job of business there. Scarcely able to believe such good luck, she accepts. One day, following Marsh's instructions, Jo buys the clothes she will need at Crest Lake, charging them to a newly opened account. Brett comes to see her, tells her he knows about her new job. Brett is very angry. Marsh went on. "You were buying new clothes, weren't you?" "Why—why, yes." "And this millionaire you were dancing with last night, just to help out your employer—he paid for them, I suppose?" Under Brett's withering and sarcastic questioning Jo grew angry. "Yes, he did pay for them," she said slowly. "I'll tell you the whole story if you'll try to believe me instead of—of Babs Montgomery." Still Brett did not move from the door, and still his eyes were clouded with a half-puzzled anger. "I'd like to hear it, I'm sure." Briefly Jo told him how she had met Douglas Marsh, told him about her new job at Crest Lake, and why she had needed a new wardrobe. But all the while she knew that Brett wasn't quite believing her. All the while he stood there watching her as though she were a girl he had never before seen, as though she were someone he was trying to place. And when she had finished he said only, "You expect me to believe that?" "I don't expect anything," Jo retorted hotly. "I'm telling you the truth, Brett. And if you won't believe me I'm—I'm not sure I care." His eyes widened. "So that's it? You'll admit you don't care, now that you've met this bird with lots of dough?" He smiled bitterly. "I'd heard that girls would change like that, overnight—but I'd never believed it much. And least of all I'd never have believed it of you." "Brett, that isn't it. You know that's not it. But it was a chance for me to—really get along by myself and to help the folks, too. I might be able to save a little and start school again next year." She faced Brett suddenly, put her palms against his shoulders. "You know me better than to talk like this, Brett." "I only know this, Jo. A guy doesn't come along and offer $300 a month and a flock of clothes to a girl he's never seen before, unless he's got something in mind." Jo sighed, and her hands fell helplessly to her sides. "There was no way to make Brett see Douglas Marsh as she saw him. If she tried to tell Brett how fine Marsh was, then Brett would only believe she'd fallen for Marsh completely. "Brett, whatever you think of Douglas Marsh, can't you trust me to take care of myself?" she asked. HE looked down at her. "I thought it could. But I'm not so sure, now that I've seen the way you've fallen for this racket. For two cents I'd write your father and have him stop you from going into this thing!" The determination in Brett's tone startled Jo. If he wrote her father, Jo knew, Arthur Darien would certainly prevent her from going to Crest Lake. He would be as quickly suspicious as Brett was of Jo's eyes narrowed, and her chin tilted upward a little. "You haven't the right to advise my father about this," she said quickly. "Because—because you and I are finished." Brett looked at her a long time, silently and contemptuously. Then he said quietly, "All right, Jo. Goodbye." The next moment the door had shut and he was gone. Jo heard his heavy, angry footsteps down the hall, heard the clang of the elevator gate as Brett let himself into the automatic car. For one uncertain instant she was about to follow Brett, crying out to him that she hadn't meant what she'd said. But in a sudden wave of clarity her brain told her she must stand solidly now on her own two feet, alone. Fortune had been good to her, unbelievably good, and she mustn't turn back the gift because her emotions wouldn't let her see clearly. If Brett really loved her he would believe in her; he would come back. And if he couldn't believe in her then she had lost him . . . forever. In a sudden burst of tears she threw herself down upon the davenport and buried her head in her arms. Even when she was no longer sobbing, even when the wells of her grief were dry, she lay there, staring at the pattern of the davenport. When she was no longer sobbing, when the wells of her grief were dry, she lay there, staring at the pattern of the davenport. The flying scenery began to take on the lush green charm which was so characteristic of that part of the state. Jo was delighted when at last she heard the conductor call out "Crest Lake Station! . . ." and she could quit the hot green mohair of the train chair. Crest Lake Station was at least two miles from the lake itself, and Jo was relieved to see Douglas Marsh standing by the tiny yellow building, scanning the length of the car for a glimpse of her. She saw a dark green roadster, smaller and less expensive than the one he'd driven in town, standing by the roadside. "Hello, Mr. Marsh," she greeted him. He broke into a wide, relieved smile. "Thank Heaven you're here! You know, I've had the most frightful feeling that you still might kick out on me. Have a nice trip down?" "Only fair," Jo admitted. "There were three children—all with very sticky fingers—who took a strange liking to me. I adore children, really, but—" she broke off, laughing. Marsh nodded. "I know. You adore children, but not on trains, not three at a time, and most certainly not with sticky fingers. That day train is a bore. But you'll feel grand when you've had a tub and dinner, and a glimpse of the lake by moonlight." They climbed into the little green roadster and Marsh drove swiftly into a forest that at first glance seemed impenetrable but through which a narrow, hard-packed dirt road meandered in an intriguing fashion. Jo breathed deeply of the clear, clean air and thought how good it was to be out of the city—and out of the workaday worry and fretting which was part of it. "I feel much better already," she confessed with a laugh. "I'm sure you'll be happy this summer," Marsh assured her. "Did they fix you up at Lytson's all right?" JO laughed. "They certainly did! You would have thought the Princess Marina was shopping. I'm afraid the bill is pretty large, so I hope—" "Nonsense! I wanted you to do it up right, and I hope you did." He was silent a moment, giving all his attention to the twists of the road. Then he said, "I think I told you that some people call Mother 'eccentric,' didn't I?" "Yes, I believe you mentioned something about it." "Of course you'll meet her when we get to Crest Lake, and I want to warn you not to be alarmed or disturbed by anything she may say. She's a very outspoken old lady—and that's probably because so few people have ever had the nerve to talk back to her. She—" he cleared his throat nervously, and began again: "She wasn't very delighted about my idea of having a hostess at Crest Lake." "Wasn't she?" asked Jo, her heart sinking. "You see—I'll let you into the family skeleton closet just so you'll understand better—you see, Dad was a bit of a gadder, I'm afraid. And Mother's always afraid I've inherited the tendency. She may view you with a good deal of suspicion at first. But I know she'll like you once she knows you better." "I—I hope so," said Jo uncertainly. "I know she will. The main thing is not to be concerned about it. Just don't let it disturb you." "I'll try not to," said Jo. It occurred to her that Douglas Marsh might have been just a little more explicit about his mother before he had suggested Jo come to Crest Lake. The fact that Marsh was speaking of it now at such length surely indicated that Mrs. Aaron Marsh had decided against Jo Darien even before she had met her. She was probably inordinately jealous of her only son. Perhaps—perhaps something had happened in Marsh's past to make his mother suspicious of an unknown girl to whom he had offered this job. Was this an old story with Douglas Marsh, and was his mother's angry suspicion wholly justifiable? Jo could not bring herself to believe this, but in any event a jealous and unpleasant mother was not likely to increase the joys of a summer at Crest Lake. Jo almost wished she had never climbed aboard that train. (To Be Continued)

American Couple Is Found Dead In Italian Spa

TIVOLI, July 15.—Mrs. Mary Thompson of Brooklyn and Medham Scott of England were found dead today in a bath cabin at Aque Albule.

Scott, 49-year-old manager of the American Express company, was lying face down in one end of the cabin. At the other end was the body of Mrs. Thompson. Both were in bathing suits. The first explanation given was asphyxiation, but authorities said this was unlikely as both ends of the cabin were open.

MURDER IN THE CLOUDS

The zoom of a plane . . . a shot . . . and Lyle Talbot and Ann Dvorak watch a plane mysteriously explode in mid-air. It's one of the thrills in "Murder in the Clouds," First National's breathtaking action-drama, which opens at the Lyric Theatre today.

DUCHESS

In the grand old days of the drand dukes, Her Ladyship held a "little court" for tradespeople every morning in her own apartments.

It was usually while her hair was being powdered. In would troop lace-makers and portrait-painters, a poet with rolls of verses and a peasant who might offer anything from a yellow puppy to a pot of honey. All the wares of the realm were spread before the duchess for her discriminating purchase, and without her putting the toe of her shoe outside the door.

Have you ever thought how much like her you are?

Every day, as you linger over your newspaper, the wares of the world assemble before you in the advertisements. Exciting new fashions from your favorite small shop. Household essentials from the great department stores. Everything for the menu . . . the motor car . . . the mode in make-up, offered to you for your choosing and deciding.

And many of these purchases you'll negotiate with more satisfaction than the duchess enthroned at her dressing table. For, where the duchess had to judge of quality for herself, you have the word of the merchant and the word of the manufacturer for integrity, correctness and cost.

It is this fundamental difference why engineers say 95% is the logical method of refrigeration. It is why Electrolux is recognized everywhere as the cheapest refrigeration money can buy. Any wonder when Electrolux operates without a single moving part to make noise or to wear and need replacing? Because of this simplicity Electrolux saves enough on operating cost, depreciation and food bills to pay for itself. See its modern beauty . . . compare its advantages, then you'll know why 500,000 have bought Electrolux!
