Death of Charles Rosner, Widely Known Business Man

Charles Rosner was one of the outstanding business men of Austin. He died in the city of New York Monday. He was found dead in bed in his hotel room where he had gone with managers of his Austin and Taylor stores on a buying trip.

Mr. Rosner had a long and interesting career. For more than a third of a century he had been a leading figure in the business life of Central Texas. He had engaged in the retail clothing business here for 35 years.

Refusal to Work Means 'Off the Relief Rolls of the State'

Harry L. Hopkins is the federal relief administrator. He was interviewed and very promptly said that removal of families from the relief rolls was up to the state administrators. In other words, he is backing the administrators of the wheat belt states in their orders to cut from the rolls persons who refuse to accept jobs in the harvest fields.

Nineteen thousand families were removed from the relief rolls in the state of South Dakota. This is their grievance! Wheat farmers are willing to feed and house them until the grain has been harvested and marketed and in financial condition to meet all demands for wage payments.

The men who have forged ahead and made a success of their own business concerns are putting in the same hard work towards the upbuilding of your city. Help them!

THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

The Washington column is written today by Willis Thornton. NEA Service staff correspondent, who will "pitch hit" for a short interval for Rodney Dutcher.

BY WILLIS THORNTON NEA Service Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON — Federal Public Works Project No. 634 isn't getting much attention. But as it's considerably more than just another public works job, perhaps it's worth while to go into it a little.

It's at the White House and it has caused the whole north grounds — the lawn facing Pennsylvania avenue that you usually see on the postcards to be shut off from auto traffic for the first time since President Wilson was ill.

You don't see much of this repair job from the street, for a discreet green-painted fence hides it except for the tops of concrete mixers and a few stacks of scaffolding.

Behind that fence, however, are great goings-on. A pit-like excavation, boarded up, has been sunk beneath the famous portico and driveway. And into this will eventually go a modern kitchen plant that will be almost like that of a small hotel.

Most of last winter was spent in modernizing and enlarging the business quarters of the White House. Now the domestic end goes its turn. The original White House cooking arrangements were the fireplaces, with cranes and spits typical of the period.

Naturally they've been improved, but never completely revamped as a unit. Mrs. Roosevelt, who is here again

West Texas Chamber of Commerce Group Expresses Views on Three Of Seven Proposed Amendments

The taxation and public expenditure commission of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, in its previous declarations and reports, has recommended the seven constitutional amendments, which the people of Texas voted on Aug. 24. Recommendations are made on three of the proposed amendments, four of which do not come within the policies of the organization to justify a recommendation, the report says.

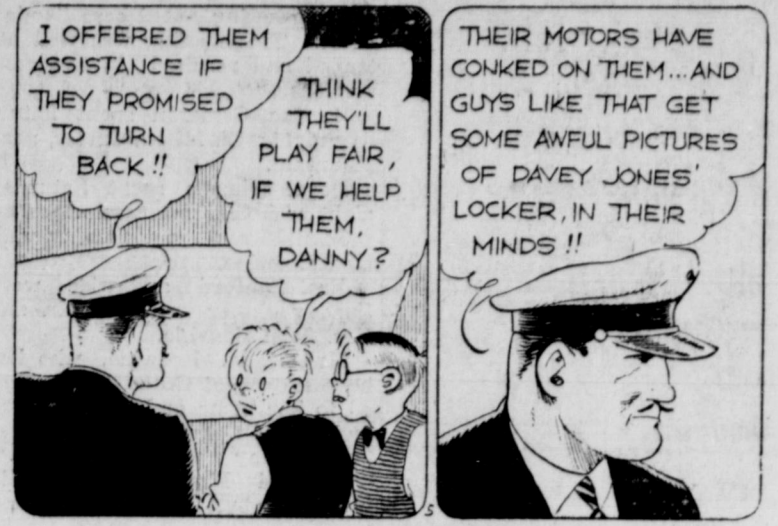

The complete report of the commission is as follows:

As chairman and vice chairman of your taxation and public expenditure commission and in line with previous declarations and policies of the West Texas chamber, we are reporting and recommending herewith relative to the constitutional amendments being voted upon the fourth Saturday in August as follows:

(1) Free Textbook and Apportionment Amendment, S. J. R. No. 24: This amendment abolishes a provision in the constitution which ever since 1891 has required our public school funds to be distributed on a scholastic population basis. The scholastic population method of distributing school funds has severely penalized West Texas. Our native white population is 16 per cent greater than the rest of the state, and having but little negro and Mexican population our scholastic population is proportionately less and our en-

REIGN HERE TODAY

JO HARTEN, thinking her first year in college wears her father is out of work. Jo hunts a job and secures part time work in a marine supply store. There she meets wealthy handsome DOUGLAS MARSH who offers her a date to a party at his home at Crest Lake. Jo accepts. This causes a quarrel with BETTIE PAUL to whom she is engaged. Jo breaks the engagement.

She goes to Crest Lake. Her duties are pleasant but Marsh's eccentric mother takes a dislike to the girl. BABS MONTGOMERY, a school acquaintance who is jealous of Jo's popularity, comes to the lake. PETER FRAGONET, film actor and his wife are also there.

Fragonet says Jo marked attention. He says he loves her and hopes he can secure a divorce from his wife to marry her as soon as he can secure a divorce from his wife. Jo is taking a walk alone one evening, hears someone call her name.

Bettie Paul comes to Crest Lake and the girls decide to make a party of a picture at Crest Lake. The girls' director and several others arrive.

Jo is taking a walk alone one evening, hears someone call her name.

Now on with the story CHAPTER XXV

"ENJOYING the moon, Jo?"

"This time the girl recognized the voice as belonging to Bret Paul. With another stride Bret stepped from the shadows of the path and into the clear moonlight reflecting up from the shimmering lake.

"I was just going to walk along the shore of the lake," Jo told him with a cordial smile. "Want to come along?"

He hesitated the fraction of a moment—long enough for Jo to sense that he had other plans. But he managed at last to say, "I'd like to very much, Jo."

She smiled, utzically. "Perhaps you'd better not, Bret, if you have an appointment."

"I haven't an appointment," he answered stiffly. "Babs said she might take me to supper tonight, and I told her I might run into her that's all."

Jo was somehow enjoying his discomfort thoroughly. "Well, if we should meet her there's no reason why we can't make it a three some hike is there? Or do you think three and the moon is a crowd?"

Bret fell into step with her. "Don't start kidding me, Jo, I don't feel like being kidded."

"Oh... she put surprise into her ejaculation. "Then it's that serious?"

"Don't be a fool," he told her roughly. "You know darned well I've never been serious about Babs Montgomery. Only a fellow gets mighty homesome up here, Jo."

"Lonesome? With all this moon?"

He nodded. "Oh, it's all right for you. But I don't belong, and I don't want to, really. I'm just the life guard."

"And I'm just the hostess," Jo laughed.

"But you're a girl, and a darned pretty one. You've all the men chasing you, so of course you're not lonely."

"Not all, Bret," objected Jo with a laugh.

WHEN he answered, his voice was touched with faint anger. "Do you want any more? This aviator fellow, and Marsh—and this crazy Fragonet..."

"That's not quite true, Bret. I'll admit that Mr. Fragonet has been a little—well, silly. But Todd Barston is just a good friend and Douglas Marsh is only my employer."

"Does your work include having dinner with him at the Lofe Tavern?"

"Bret..." Jo put a hand on his arm. "Bret, let's not get started on that again. Besides, you've been listening to the veranda chorus. I'm afraid."

"I haven't been listening to any thing," Bret said. "I'm not altogether blind." He turned to her suddenly. "Jo, I don't want to be unpleasant every time we meet. But it hurts me to see you acting like this."

"Hurts you?" repeated Jo, bewildered.

He nodded. "Of course it does. Good Lord, Jo! Do you think I could love you as much as—as I do and not care what you do now?"

"That's true, Bret," admitted Jo slowly. "That's why I don't want our friendship to be spoiled ever. But somehow we seem to be unable to avoid arguments." She looked out across the lake for a silent moment, then added, "If you could just believe in me, Bret. Why can't you be up here again. What do you propose to do?"

"You've changed," he told her quickly. "I don't believe you really are yourself now much you've changed—and that's what makes it hurt all the more."

Jo faced him squarely, and when she spoke again her words were slow, careful, measured. "Perhaps I have changed. Do you really think a girl could be just the same after what happened, Bret?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean I loved you, Bret. I doubt if you ever realized how much a man loves him. He's so wrapped up in himself, so intent with his own love—"

She stopped biting her lips. "Bret, I'd have followed you anywhere. I'd have done any thing in the world for you. I thought there wasn't any man in the world quite like you."

"But, Jo—"

"PLEASE let me finish," Jo interrupted. "I thought there wasn't any man in the world like you, Bret—and then you walked into the apartment that night and showed me you'd take the word of someone else against mine."

"You'd lied to me already," Bret reminded her. "You told me you had to work, and then I found you'd been dancing with Marsh."

"I know, Bret. I'm not trying to defend myself. I'm only trying to explain why I've changed. I lied to you, I think, because I was all confused. I'd never had to have a job before, and then suddenly a job was the most important thing in the world. But you wouldn't listen to me even for a minute that night—"

"I didn't want you to come down here," Bret said quickly.

"I had to come, don't you see? And when I did come you were finished. Do you remember what you said?"

Bret nodded, as though he did not want to hear the words repeated. "I remember Jo."

She was silent a moment, and then went on again slowly. "I didn't feel like living, Bret. I suppose that was the most terrible night I'll ever spend in my whole life. But... she smiled up at rollment and average daily attendance is proportionately greater than the rest of the state. A complete analysis shows that West Texas has around 29 per cent of the scholastic population of the state, while West Texas has from 32 to 35 per cent of the school enrollment and average daily attendance of the state.

The proposed amendment makes possible the allotment of school funds on a daily attendance basis instead of the discriminatory scholastic population basis. This change has been recommended by the State Department of Education and by the State Board of Education and the report of 1932 states as follows: "The basic law should be so amended as to provide for the distribution of state school funds on basis of enrollment and average daily attendance; that is on basis of service actually rendered by the schools. The state should no longer subsidize absence from school. Its resources should not be used to the extent of millions of dollars annually to reward non-performance of duty."

If the funds were allotted on an enrollment and daily attendance basis West Texas would secure from 3 to 6 per cent more money than we have been securing for over 40 years. On the basis of a 20 million dollar available school fund this means that the West Texas schools would secure from $900,000 to over $1,500,000 per year more than she has been securing. This amendment enables overcoming a 40-year West Texas discrimination and the securing of more funds for our public schools and should be vigorously supported by West Texas.

There might be some misgivings about the free textbook provisions of the amendment inasmuch as it enables the giving of free textbooks to private or sectarian schools. It is a fact, however, that this will not add to the cost of free textbooks as the present law requires books to be purchased in accordance with scholastic census. Since all children, regardless of color or religion are placed on the census rolls, whether they attend the public schools or not, it, therefore, appears that this provision will not result in the purchase of additional books. Furthermore, if any one has religious scruples about books being furnished to parochial schools, the fact still remains that our State Board of Education will always approve and prescribe the books. There need be no fear that parochial schools will receive per capita allotments because the amendment states that no part of the available school fund shall ever be appropriated to or used for the support of any sectarian school. We see nothing in the free textbook provision that should keep West Texas from militantly voting for this amendment in order that we may do away with the discriminatory scholastic census basis of allotment.

(2) Old Age Pension, H. J. R. No. 19: This amendment enables the legislature to make a payment of $15 per month to every citizen of Texas over the age of 65 years, excluding only criminals, inmates of state institutions, etc. There is nothing in the amendment limiting the payments to indigents and persons without means of support and under the provision of the amendment a millionaire is eligible for the pension. The amendment makes no provision as to the total cost to the state or as to how the revenues are to be raised.

If a pension of $15 a month is to be paid to the 232,459 persons in Texas over 65 years of age, the total annual cost to the state will be over 40 million dollars. This is more money than annually is appropriated to our schools and is equivalent to the total cost of our state government, excepting highways.

Already 25 per cent of the people of the state draw their means of support from taxes and these taxes, according to 1932 figures, consume 97 per cent of the net income of the individuals and corporations of Texas. In fact, the total tax bill consumes all of the net income of the people of Texas excepting nine million dollars. It, therefore, seems impossible that this proposed new tax burden can be consumed by taxes on income.

To place the new burden on property and raise the revenue from ad valorem taxes would be still further beyond all reason and possibility. Already, these ad valorem taxes are confiscating the property of West Texas and leaving in its wake bankruptcy and destitution. On an average ad valorem taxes are consuming 99 per cent of the net returns from property.

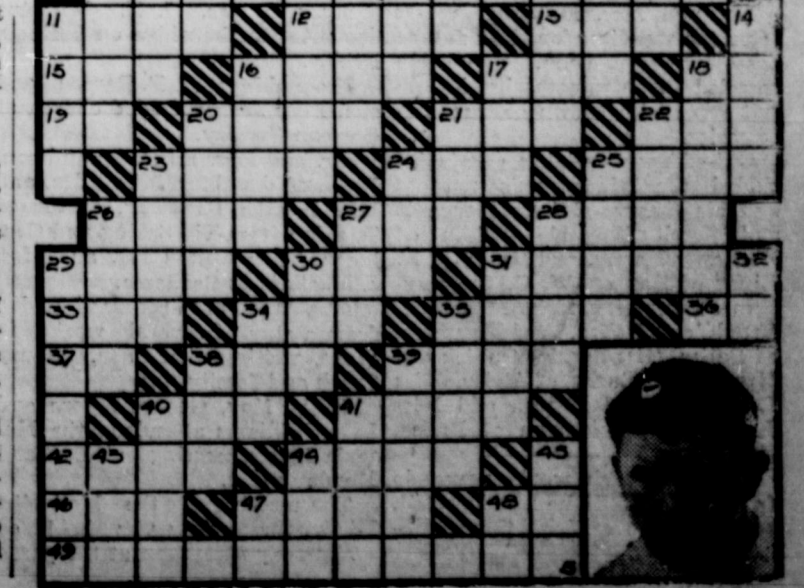

We would favor and support an old age pension plan if it were assured of its benefits. Under the provisions of this amendment, however, it is inconceivable to think that West Texas can support it at least until proper restrictions are placed in the amendment and until the present tax base is broadened and property taxes are relieved. We recommend that our organization vigorously oppose this amendment.

(3) Abolishing the Fee System, S. J. R. No. 6: This amendment abolishes the fee system in all counties with population of 20,000 or more and enables the commissioners courts in counties of 20,000 or less to abolish the fee system and pay for such services on a salary basis. Long have we opposed the pernicious fee system as one which tends to develop inefficiency, injustice and additional costs to the taxpayers. We believe that this amendment should be supported and adopted.

(4) Commitment of Insanity Patients, H. J. R. No. 39: This amendment would make it possible to commit to an institution allegedly insane persons without trial by a jury. The limit of temporary restraint for observation and treatment of patient is 90 days. The purpose of the amendment seemingly is good, but there

Son of Eastland Citizens Married

FORT WORTH, Aug. 4.—The marriage of Miss Lottie Bowman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Y. Bowman, 2521 May street, and Mr. Gordon McLaughlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McLaughlin of Eastland, formerly of Fort Worth, took place last night at 7 o'clock in St. Andrew's Episcopal church, where 23 years ago the first wedding ceremony read in the new church was for the bride's parents.

Mrs. Q'Zella Oliver Jeffus, organist at Trinity Episcopal church, played as the guests gathered and then played the "Lohengrin" wedding march. The nuptial solo, "At Dawning," was sung by Mr. L. P. Nifnecker. The church was very simply decorated with palms and ferns. The ceremony was read by Rev. Edward S. Barlow of Weatherford.

The bride's only attendant, Miss Cecil Yoder, wore a white taffeta frock and a small off the face taffeta hat. She carried a bouquet of white asters and fern. Mr. McLaughlin's best man was his brother, Mr. Keith McLaughlin of Eastland.

The bride wore a soft gown of white chiffon made with full sleeves which fitted closely at the wrist. The square-necked bodice was encircled by a white chiffon velvet sash and the skirt touched the floor. She wore a wide-brimmed white chiffon hat, off-the-face, and carried an imported linen handkerchief. Her bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley.

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of Mrs. C. H. Barton, 2531 Hemphill street. A two-tiered wedding cake centered the refreshment table, which was laid with a Normandy lace cloth. Miss Deborah Von Zuben, poured punch, assisted by Miss Bernice Barton.

Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin left after the wedding for their future home in Perry, Okla. The bride traveled in an aquamarine boucle suit worn with brown costume accessories.

Out-of-town wedding guests included the bridegroom's parents and his sisters, Misses Margaret and Sarah Mae McLaughlin of Eastland; Messrs. and Mmes. B. E. Rigby of Ranger, W. O. Cunningham of Grand Prairie, M. J. McLaughlin of Dallas, Fred Kammann of Dallas, Miss Bernice Gullick and Mrs. M. P. Burns of Tyler, Miss Lola Rosier of Denton and Miss Josephine Cunningham of Dallas.
