Gunfire Climax To Long Quarrel; Two Brothers Wounded

TISHOMINGO, Okla., July 25 (AP)—Brothers Nick and Ike McDonald were wounded critically today in what Sheriff L. W. Hamilton described as a duel with shotguns climaxing years of quarrels. The brothers, both in their 40s, were found by their families in a pasture shortly after day-break. Nick McDonald had shotgun wounds in the stomach, Ike McDonald had wounds near the heart. Hamilton said the shotguns of both men were empty. Both had been fired. The brothers lived on adjacent farms one mile west of here, Hamilton said, and had quarreled for years. Latest bone of contention was an argument over some calves of the McDonald which apparently had strayed over on to the land of Nick McDonald, the sheriff said. Nick McDonald pushed the calves up in a lot and kept them there. This morning, the sheriff said, Ike McDonald came after them and the duel followed.

READING AND WRITING

"A DAY OF BATTLE," by Vincent Sheean; Doubleday, Doran; ($2.50)

Those poppies on Flanders fields have grown for many centuries out of soil well nurtured with human blood. Flanders fields have been deluged, it appears, for the efficient maneuvering of many armies, by Providence or whatever authority regulates such matters. Now comes Vincent Sheean to write of one battle in a book he calls "A Day of Battle."

We have two friends, each of whom is a military expert. So too, most likely, is Mr. Sheean. The clatter of musketry is (at a reasonable distance) music to these ears, and the careful study of the best disposition of murdering forces is as fascinating as the construction of a building. But Sheean is also a literary man, and it appeared likely that he would use his battle (Fontenoy; May 11, 1745) as a background against which would be displayed the true significance of something or other. Otherwise we should never have read the book.

In a sense he does that. His book covers only one day, but it is a long day. His characters range from Louis XV, just falling in love with the future Pompadour, through Maurice de Saxe, the dropical and efficient commander of Louis' forces, to a certain aide named Mezieres — with Voltaire stalking about the wings, pulling whatever strings he finds. The battle is the skeleton, but in addition Sheean makes painfully clear the circles within circles which are turned by the intrigue of court and army. Louis himself is put rather keenly before the reader — not to mention his disappointed Polish queen and a good many other historical personages.

And at the last Sheean makes evident the futility of the great victory — how it was actually a loss, because the causes for which it was won were already lost causes.

All this is good reporting which becomes at times good literature. The history is presumably impeccable, the effort horrifying enough, for the author does not hesitate to describe several heads flying through the air. Yet this reader found the result curiously tame. The parts are extraordinary, the larger design a little pointless.

Dear Diary —

What a Summer this has been! Our family has never had so much fun. Picnics, and beach-parties, and trips, of course. But for the first time we've really enjoyed our home. Dad and Mother have done wonders. A new porch swing and gay cretonne covers for the furniture. A croquet set for the garden, shuffleboard in the garage. My room done over—I helped with that! A sand-pile and gym corner for Bobby. Mother is mildly amazed that all this cost so little. Dad takes credit for that—he's a rabid ad-reader, and when the time came know just what and where he could buy advantageously.

Of course, I've always been thataway too! When one has such a small allowance one soon learns to do preliminary shopping in the newspaper advertisements. And I know it was that darling blue evening frock I bought "as advertised" that brought Midshipman Duncan to his knees!

What a glorious Summer . . . Thanks to our favorite newspaper and its ads!

THE PEOPLE AND LEE O'DANIEL

W. Lee O'Daniel has been tendered the governorship of the state of Texas, by the will of a thumping majority vote—and the sun rises and sets as usual.

The Herald had not advocated the candidacy of the Fort Worth flour broker; had, indeed, questioned it on the basis of a lack of platform designed to benefit the people of Texas and on the basis of an absence of background in governmental affairs.

This paper's view was not to say that O'Daniel lacks the intelligence and the executive ability to make this state an adequate administrator. This is no time—especially since the people have spoken in the manner they did on Saturday—to be a calamity howler because an "unknown" has been swept into office.

O'Daniel, of course, as he tremendous task ahead of him, a larger one than would have Thompson or McCraw, who are seasoned in the running of affairs at Austin. But there is no denying the man has a knack of getting on common ground with people, that he has a personal appeal that will stand him in good stead, and that he has an innate sense of interpreting and taking advantage of public psychological trends.

O'Daniel can reach a point of harmony with his legislature and with the man who runs the departments of state government, and he can; if he can assume the position of high responsibility without succumbing to the pitfalls that surround such a position; if he can establish proper contacts with men grounded in public affairs—and such contacts are necessary even though they may smack of rubbing shoulders with "professional politicians"; if he can hold aloof from the chronic lobbyists, the legislative hangers-on and the myriad other leeches of our political system who will use ever wise imagination to turn his head and attract his favor; if he can do these things, he will have started himself on the road to fulfilling much of what the people of Texas expect him to fulfill.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

WASHINGTON—American importers of German goods have discovered a way to duck Treasury regulations intended to counteract German subsidies. Moreover, the Treasury hasn't yet found a way to block it.

Two years ago Germany was subsidizing its exports to the United States with such care-free abandon that a mile high tariff wall was put up against it. Here is how that business worked: Germany paid interest on its extensive debts to U. S. investors, half in free currency and half in script to be redeemed at some indefinite future date. In turn, the German Conversion bank offered to buy up this script at half value. That, together with the 50 per cent paid in cash, gave Americans 75 per cent of the cash value of their interest coupons. They were glad to get even 75 per cent, such was the uncertainty.

Next step was for the German government to use this 25 per cent "profit" on the deal to help exporters finance foreign sales. It was all done under strict regulation and the export bounty was allowed only to exporters of German goods which were having tough competition on world markets.

It was a neat way of making American holders of German bonds pay for a subsidy on German exports to the U. S. For example: An American cotton exporter would be paid in blocked marks. A German exporter would give him dollars for the marks and send him on his way rejoicing. The German exporter then would go to the German Conversion bank and explain that he could buy German cameras or tableware to sell in America if given a subsidy to help him match American prices.

If he had a nice, clean Aryan face and the deal promised to bring much needed foreign exchange to Germany, he would be given the subsidy and so could buy German goods to ship to the U. S.

It worked so well that in no time American manufacturers began protesting at such competition and the Treasury took steps. The Attorney General upheld a Treasury plan to impose a tariff to offset these subsidies. It ranged from 22 1/2 per cent on tableware to 45 per cent on cameras and 56 per cent on surgical instruments.

Variation On Theme That put a damper on the trade, which was restricted enough in any event.

But later the Treasury ruled that Americans selling their own goods in Germany could use the proceeds to buy German goods for import into the U. S., for resale here, without having to pay the special tariff. This has developed lately into something interesting.

A person wanting to import goods from Germany simply buys cotton in his America. Thus he owns it "on his own account." Then he ships it to Germany. German buyers are allowed to pay higher than the world price for the cotton to "compensate" the American shipper for the trouble of dealing under German trade restrictions.

This special profit on cotton is limited to 33 1/3 per cent. But while called a profit, it acts the same as a subsidy because the same amount of cotton is converted into the same amount of German goods as when the direct subsidy was paid. The difference is that the goods bought in Germany under this plan don't have to pay special U. S. duties.

And how can the Treasury complain if Germany chooses to pay a premium on American raw materials?

NEW YORK—Honey, the old to-don'ts got me. I dunno why it is, but I can't come home from vacations like other people, full of pep and rarin' to go. I gotta be gloomy. I gotta feel sorry for myself. I gotta sit around with my chin in my hand, feeling like the drag end of Gloomy Sunday and wondering what Blue Monday's gonna be like.

Nobody has a better time than I do, but next day there's a lily in my hand. And that's utansy, if you ask me. Here I am back from as pleasant a stay as I was ever on in Connecticut it was, and instead of feeling keenly reminiscent and alive, instead of bubbling over with suppressed energy and excitement, I am lost in apathy, kindred to a whipped houn' dog.

The rambler rose may be beautiful to Robert Burns, but it is only a blossom in me. My lily is thorny and so is that. This metropolitan may be a magic city to others, replete with romance and glamor, but it doesn't thrill me. Not today it doesn't. Tomorrow that's something else again. But today it's only a big dull town. There's no savor to the ghoulish.

By CAREY WILSON HOLLYWOOD—They call Hollywood "The City of Make-believe" and I admit that most of the phantasmagoric figures that flash across your silver screens are conceived in imagination and born of metaphoric poetics. But there is a celluloid fable—or rather a series of fabric-co concocted entirely out of reality. The Judge Hardy series of pictures is tailored to a single and iron-clad premise: "It hasn't happened to you or someone you know, we can't use it in the Hardy Series!"

If, as audiences seem to be saying throughout the world, a Judge Hardy picture is true to life, the public dictum has arisen out of this studio law. If it hasn't happened to you, or someone you know, we can't use it!

Auranti Rouverol, playwright-author of "Kidnapping" which, as "A Family Affair" started at this Hardy business, freely admits that her characters were dramatic paraphrases of her own family. Kay Van Riper, Agnes Christine Johnson, Bill Ludwig—all contributors to Hardy scenarios—will not deny that they use their memories rather than their imaginations in their Hardy efforts. And not a few of the amazing adventures of young Mickey Rooney as Andy Hardy bring now-humorous but then-bitter memories of a small boy named Carey Wilson in the town of Rutherford, New Jersey.

So it is that the Hardy stories are never written—they "just grow," like the immortal Topsy. Anybody and everybody on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot may pop up at any time with a valuable suggestion. And it's never put in the form of a suggestion like "I just thought up a swell idea for the Hardy Pictures." No, it's inevitably more like "I remember something that happened to my kid brother back in Kansas." And a surprising number of these impromptu suggestions are immediately seized on as appropriate and valuable.

There must be a dozen prototypes in the studio organization for each member of the Hardy Family—mothers who have growing daughters like Marian Hardy; fathers who have adolescent sons like Andy; boys just out of their teens, to whom come readily the recent occasions of their schoolboy adventures and romances; and many a father, who like Judge Hardy himself, has both a young son and daughter. Like me.

Thus it is that through the walls enclosing a Hardy story conference are liable to leak phases strange indeed, for movie conferences: "Listen! When my dad first caught me smoking a cigarette, he whaled the tar out of me! . . . My dad didn't. He stopped my allowance for three—I tell you that no young girl would act the way you want this girl to act. I ought to know—my kid's 17 and she wants to know when she can start drinking cocktails! . . . That's a lot of rot—my 18-year-old daughter has never gone out with a boy yet!"

But these disagreements are only a matter of degree. For we found that in the long run what happens to a 16-year-old boy in Rutherford, New Jersey, is pretty much the same as what happens to his prototype in Winona, Wisconsin.

The Effects Of Liquor Cannot Be Repealed

"Woe unto him that buildeth a town with blood and establisheth a city by iniquity," Hab. 2:12. These are the words of God. They are powerful—they are true. Millions have disobeyed this law of God, to their sad fate and awful disappointment. Many nations have tried various ways to thwart this great truth; but today have perished from the earth. One would think that any individual would come to the conclusion that fortune, fame and popularity built on sin and iniquity would in the end always bring disaster, heartache and sure failure. But man is naturally covetous—he seeks his own. He is determined to beat the laws of God. He might as well try to drink the Pacific ocean dry. Man, without God, is unreasonable and abnormal. High ideals save many from gross idolatry but mankind, taken as a whole, is selfish. His sure salvation is salvation through Jesus Christ.

Today our own nation is trying the idiotic experiment of taxing itself by drinking more booze to rid itself of a national debt. This is the sad truth in this. We are rapidly upgrading as a nation—the moral standards are lower than ever and all the crimes attending booze are hatching under the warm influence of leaders in our government.—(Submitted by and printed at the request of the local WTCU.)

P. O. DEPT. ACTS TO STOP CHAIN LETTERS

WASHINGTON, Jul 23 (AP)—The postoffice department is trying to break up a new series of chain letters. About 15 persons have been reprimanded, officials said today.

Most of the schemes have concerned merchandise. The outbreak is nowhere near the size of the dime chain letters circulated a few years ago.

LOVE ON THE RANGE

BY NELSON C. RYE

Chapter 22 SPREADING UP This thing was bad, thought Ankrum, and would be worse. Whether ancient animosity, jealousy of water rights, or a railroad and the prospect of a future town lay behind this war, he had no means of knowing. But of one thing he was certain: things were speeding up and Trone needed him—a powder-smoke showdown could not be far away. These men against Trone were dangerous, and their next move might well be directed against himself.

He looked at Trone and saw the old man lift a shaking bottle to his lips. When the bottle was empty Trone hurled it from him with a muttered oath. Ankrum's lips curled a little. This old hellion, he thought, is trying to bolster up his shattered nerves. . . . Trone glared at Ring—Legs wildly. "Say that again."

"Them fellows," the puncher growled, "say there's been a mistake in boundary lines. They claim we been hoggin' too much land. They say that tank ain't our land at all. They been given orders to string a fence that'll keep our cattle away from it. An' Boone Heffle give 'em orders."

"Boone Heffle!" Trone whispered the name and licked his lips. His courage seemed to be ebbing swiftly. "You made a mistake lettin' that sheepman live," said Ring-Legs. "When you was fightin' Ratchford's father an' them others years ago you oughta tromped the bunch of 'em underground—partic'lar Heffle!"

"But Heffle was on my side," Trone protested. "Why should he be strikin' at me now after all these years?"

"The Heffles of this world ain't on nobody's side but the man that's payin' the highest!" the bow-legged puncher snarled. "It's plain'er a sin at the crossroads that this Heffle make's been bought!"

The clump of boots turned Ankrum's glance. He saw Ratchford and Lee come running toward them. When they came up Ratchford showed his burly frame to the front, grasped the puncher by the shoulder and whirled him round. "What's up?"

"Boone Heffle's jumped the tank an' cabin at our southwest line camp!"

"In The Law" Ratchford released his grip and swung on Trone. "Jumped your tank, has he? Well, I'm here to say he hasn't. The tank an' cabin at your southwest line ain't on your ground, an' you know it. You've been squatin' on that government land for twenty years—but that don't make it yours!"

Trone opened his mouth, but Ratchford's voice came first: "Let's see your patent to that land."

Ankrum saw the color wash from Trone's cheeks, he seemed to shank under the impact of the sheriff's words. But not Ring-Legs. "Spreadin' it thick won't buy yuh nothin'," he jeered. "You jest watch how long Heffle stays there, Mister."

"He'll stay there as long as he damn well please!" Ratchford's heavy voice rode through the puncher's words like a knife through cheese. "In the law around these parts an' I say Heffle's in the right. I've looked his title up an' it's good as gold. You pull any rough stuff out there an' you snook squaw up against the law!"

"Says you!" Trone sneered, making an effort to pull himself together. But he was not the man he had been twenty years ago—not the man who had torn this range from the grasp of its former owners.

"You heard me?" Ankrum drawled. "What you fig-

MAVERICK, SANDERS LOSE, M'FARLANE FACES RUNOFF

DALLAS, July 26 (AP)—The Texas democratic primary which swept W. Lee O'Daniel, Fort Worth flour man with a hillbilly band, into the governorship with a smashing majority victory, also saw the defeat of another colorful figure, fiery Rep. Maury Maverick of San Antonio.

Maverick, known as the "spark plug" of a tiny, left wing bloc in the national house of representatives, was defeated by Paul Kilday, San Antonio attorney. The new deal was not an issue. Kilday said he would support the administration with reservations. Maverick has usually been an outspoken new dealer.

Another Texas congressman, Morgan Sanders, seemed slated to share Maverick's fate as he trailed two opponents. Rep. W. D. McFarlane, also an incumbent, must enter a runoff with his opponent, Ed Gossett, who he was trailing. All other Texas congressmen were re-nominated.

ITALY ACCEPTS THE 'ARYANISM' DOCTRINE

ROME, July 26 (AP)—Fascism was committed to "Aryanism" today as an accepted party doctrine. Party Secretary Achille Starace translated the idea of "race principles" into active politics with the declaration that "elaboration and discussion of fascist race principles" would be the popular culture ministry's main task in 1938.

Starace spoke yesterday before a group of scholars responsible, under suspicion of the ministry of popular culture, for a report published last Thursday in which Italians were said to be of Aryan origin and Jews were said "not to belong to the Italian race."

A communique quoted him thus: "They (Jews) consider themselves for thousands of years everywhere and also in Italy as a 'race' apart and superior to others, and it is notorious that, notwithstanding the tolerant policy of the regime, Hebrews in every nation have constituted—with their men and with their means—a general staff of anti-fascism."

THIRD TERM TALK?
WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP)—Capital politicians wondered today whether Secretary Ickes was hinting at a third term race for President Roosevelt when he said: "If the reactionaries in the democratic party want a real test of President Roosevelt's strength with the people, I suggest that they continue to work for a situation that will result in the people being given an opportunity to vote directly on the proposition of whether or not they are for President Roosevelt and his policies."

"There can hardly be any doubt what the answer of the people would be."

autonomy-seeking Germanic and other minorities. He said that the former president of the board of trade would work independently of the British government. This step, Chamberlain said, was taken "in response to a request from the Czech government." Chamberlain said that negotiations for an Anglo-American trade pact had "come down to certain instances of exceptional difficulty and they are not entirely resolved." He said, however, there was good will on both sides and "I hope we won't have to wait too long before we announce we have come finally to an agreed conclusion."

CMTC MEMBER HIT BY LIGHTNING FORT SILL, Okla., July 26 (AP)—A lightning bolt killed one member of a citizens military training corps camp here today and stunned 22 others. Edward C. Solomon, 20, of Mount Vernon, Texas, was killed instantly. Major Lee G. Yatte, Oklahoma City, commanding officer of the fourth battalion of the O. M. T. C., 360th field artillery, was knocked unconscious. All the victims were brought to the Fort Sill post hospital, but most of them were released after being treated for shock, post officers said. None was hurt seriously.

Mural Nears Completion Hurd Has Big Audiences For Work At Postoffice Under the deft touch of Peter Hurd, Roswell, N. M. artist, the postoffice fresco mural is nearing completion. Bulk of the work has been completed and it appears that Hurd may add his finishing touches by Thursday or Friday. During the time that Hurd has been painting the mural on a fresh granite and sand plaster, hundreds of people have paused to watch him give form to his characters, structures and landscape. Postal officials declare that the number of watchers ranges from five to more than a score at all times during the day. The mural depicts a pioneer family, standing in front of a dugout hut, with the first sod being broken in the foreground. In the background are mountains, unmistakably those of the Big Spring vicinity. Hurd has done his mural in fresco, that is to say he has first placed fresh granite sand plaster in small segments where his figures and objects will appear. While the plaster is still fresh, he touches it with pigments, allowing the color to set into the plaster.

Negress Arrested For False Receipt Of Pension Check Attempt of a 54-year old negro woman to obtain the old age assistance check of a white woman by the same name has resulted in arrest of the negress in Lubbock, George White, district old age assistance supervisor, said Tuesday. The coincidence of names resulted in the delivery of the white woman's check to the negress twice in South Texas. When the mistake was discovered, the negro woman was required to refund the check. Later she moved to Lubbock and wrote the state office to transfer her payment there. When she received and cashed the check, she was placed under arrest.

FARM COMMITTEE MEETS WEDNESDAY

County agricultural committee will convene here Wednesday to work on yields, it was announced at the county agent's office Tuesday. The committee will adjust yields for farms coming into the program this year and not in the program last year. Since subsidy payments are to be based on the adjusted yield for 1937, it is necessary for the committee to arrive at a figure for the farms that have none.

TO THE VOTERS OF HOWARD COUNTY. I appreciate very much the votes and support which I received in the recent primary. I shall always be grateful for the loyal and staunch manner in which so many of you voted and worked for me. I have the highest possible regard for my friend, Lee Porter, who defeated me in a clean, hard race, and I congratulate him on his victory. It is no disgrace to be defeated by a young man of his high character and sterling qualities, and to him I say: "Best wishes and good luck, Lee." To those who supported Lee Porter, I want to say that I have not the slightest resentment. I realize that you are my friends, as well as his. LEE WARREN (Paid Political Advertisement)

Thank You! Friends, for Your Vote. Your Continued Support Will Be Appreciated. J. H. (Dad) Hefley (Paid Political Advertisement)
