To Represent Annual Saving Of $20,000

Lower Schedules For Residential, Commercial Users

A substantial reduction in electric rates — calculated to mean a total saving to Big Spring users of more than $20,000 a year — was in effect today, following acceptance by the city commission Tuesday night of a lower schedule submitted voluntarily by the Texas Electric Service company.

In Effect Immediately

The rate revision applies to both residential and commercial customers, and goes into effect immediately, applying to bills made from regular monthly meter readings since July 1. The new schedules provide an appreciable saving to both classes of customers, according to C. S. Blomshield, district manager for T.E.S., who presented the revision to the commission.

As Low As 2 Cents

The residential rate reaches the bottom step of two cents a kilowatt hour after 158 kilowatt hours have been used; the commercial rate drops to 2 1/2 cents after 508 kilowatt hours have been used, and has an added low step of 1 1/2 cents a kilowatt hour after 2,600 kilowatt hours have been used after 2,600 kilowatt hours.

RESIDENTIAL—21 minimum, includes 8 kilowatt hours; 5 cents per kilowatt hour for the next 50 kw-hr; 4 cents for the next 50 kw-hr; 3 cents for the next 50; and 2 cents per kilowatt hour for all the excess.

COMMERCIAL—31 minimum, including 8 kilowatt hours; 5 cents per kilowatt hour for the next 160 kw-hr; 4 cents for the next 340 kw-hr; 3 1/2 cents for the next 2,600 kw-hr; 2 1/2 cents per kilowatt hour for all the excess.

Fourth Cut In 16 Years

Blomshield pointed out that the current reduction is the fourth in the last 16 years for Big Spring users. "Our record of reducing electric rates goes back to 1912 when the electric system was acquired here," he said. "To illustrate how residential electric rates have gone down in Big Spring, 40 kilowatt hours cost $4.63 in 1923, but now

Hughes Flies As He Pleases, But He Comes Back With The Facts

Howard Hughes, now streaking around the world in record time, has been almost as mysterious as Charles Lindbergh when he was preparing for HIS transatlantic flight 11 years ago. For that matter, Hughes always has been mysterious. Devon Francis, AP aviation editor, tells in this story what sort of fellow he is.

By DEVON FRANCIS
Aviation Editor

NEW YORK—If this wily Howard Robert Hughes, the millionaire now turned transatlantic flier, gives a tinker's dam about what other people think of him, he has never shown it during his 34 years. Hughes announced he was going to fly the Atlantic. Why, was his business. A few years ago he was making hit movies. He abandoned Hollywood. That was his business, too.

A year ago last January he streaked across the United States to set a speed record which has never been approached—7 hours, 15 minutes. Crawling from his ship, he was courteous, tolerant, uninformative.

He merely wanted to do it. If a man wanted to risk a neck valued at several millions, it was his affair.

He shook it up
His few intimates deny he is a blue chip playboy. Whatever he is, he does what pleases his fancy with a courage and energy which set him apart.

"Better let someone else take that plane up," Dick Palmer, who built his "Hughes special" racer advised the flier in 1926.

"No," responded Hughes. "I had confidence enough in you to have you build it. I have enough confidence that it will fly."

He took it up on its first test hop, and then smashed all long-distance speed records at an average pace of 332 miles an hour.

Bit Oxygen Hose
Temperamentally nervous, Hughes is stone-like in the cockpit of a racing airplane. On his transatlantic record flight, he almost lost consciousness at an altitude of 22,000 feet when a special oxygen face mask failed to function. He calmly bit in two the rubber hose leading to his oxygen tank and sucked on the gas until his head was clear.

On another occasion, when a severe downdraft dropped his plane dangerously close to some mountain tops near Los Angeles, he maneuvered toward a lake to pick up smoother air.

"Hope I didn't scare you," he remarked casually to a friend in the cabin behind him.

The Hughes fortune largely was due to his father's invention of a rotary drill bit for sinking oil wells. The elder Hughes founded the Hughes Tool Co., in Houston, of which the son is board chairman.

Born rich, Hughes followed his father's technical bent. At the age of 12 he had constructed his own radio receiving set. The Hughes home-made automobile was a common sight in Houston. At 15 he had taken his first flight. In his twenties, he established himself as one of Hollywood's foremost movie producers.

He made money. Among his pictures, "Hell's Angels," "Scarface," and "The Front Page" helped make movie history.

Keeps Full Logs
Like his father, Hughes is attracted by anything scientific. When he flies, he works every minute. His "logs" are "complete."

At the close of a flight he can rattle off his average fuel consumption, cylinder head temperatures, manifold pressures, the altitudes at which he navigated, his speed and even the temperature of the air outside the plane.

For his current flight, he installed every piece of scientific apparatus in his "Lockheed 14" transport that came to mind. With an extremely heavy load, the machine is expected to cruise at 175 miles an hour.

Though danger means nothing to him—until recently he held the world's landplane record of 352 miles an hour over a measured course—he is loath to risk the lives of others.

President Roosevelt once told Hughes he would like to make a flight with him. "Well," replied the young millionaire, "if you do, Mr. President, it will be the most nervous flight I've ever taken."

Still A Bachelor
Shy in the extreme, Hughes has made a speech only once in his life, before the New York Advertising Club.

"Speed is nothing of itself," he said then. "It must be adapted to commercial use if attaining it is to be worth while."

He lives simply but indulges a voracious appetite. He cares nothing for clothes, has often been seen with unpressed trousers. He has been known to touch his lips to one cocktail an entire evening and leave the glass brimful. He does not smoke. He plays golf in the low 70's.

From time to time movie press agents have tried to link Hughes' name with actresses, but he remains blissfully single and indifferent to such publicity.

ABILENE BUSINESS EXECUTIVE DEAD

A number of Big Spring friends of John F. Hardaway, 40, prominent Abilene business executive, who died Tuesday morning at his home there, planned to attend the funeral services to be held from St. Paul's Methodist church in Abilene Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Hardaway, vice-president and general manager of the West Texas Cotton Oil company, was well known in Big Spring and West Texas. He had visited in this section many times in connection with his position.

He had been in ill health for two years, and had been in a critical condition for the past week.

SPENCE TO ATTEND WATER CONFERENCE

Big Spring will be represented at a meeting of the water resources committee of the Texas Planning Board, scheduled to be held in Austin on July 29. City Manager E. V. Spence plans to attend the party and take part in discussions pertaining to underground water supplies.

The Board called the session for the benefit of all interested cities which are dependent upon underground supplies, and which face the necessity of taking step to meet growing shortage in those supplies.

Appreciation For Convention Work Is Expressed

Winding up of affairs incident to staging of the American Legion division convention last weekend brought Wednesday an expression of appreciation from local post officials for "the full cooperation of all individuals and firms in the city who were asked to aid in conducting the convention."

Grover Dunham, general convention chairman, said visiting Legionnaires declared the Big Spring gathering to be one of the most successful yet staged by the fifth division. "For this," Dunham said, "praise goes to many individuals—whether or not they are members of the local Legion post and Auxiliary—who contributed heavily of time, effort and money toward the convention. The convention was self-sustaining, thanks to great work on the part of Big Spring people. The Legion post and Auxiliary, and all committee chairmen, join me in expressing appreciation for the fine spirit of cooperation shown."

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., July 12 (AP)—As he embarked on a fishing trip, Axel William Johnson, 50, said, "I'd like to catch one more fish before I give up this sport." He caught a 10-pound muskellunge. Seconds later he dropped dead of a heart attack.

CITY SANITARY DEPT. REPORTS FOR JUNE

A report of the city sanitary department, headed by H. W. Leeper, covering activities for the month of June, was submitted to the city commission at its meeting Tuesday night.

Leeper reported that all water samples sent to Austin during the month were tested and found OK, that 21 sanitary calls had been made during the month, and 100 health certificates were collected. Inspection trips included the following:

Fifteen to dairies, 17 to cafes and hamburger stands, 18 to groceries and markets, eight to barber shops, three to bakeries. Eighteen milk samples were taken during the month.

The Library of Congress was completed in 1897 at a cost of $8,000,000.

Top Prices Paid This Week On The Ft. Worth Market

FORT WORTH, July 13 (AP)—Thirteen may be an unlucky number to some people but the 13,000 cattle that have arrived on the Fort Worth market the first two days of the current week have certainly been lucky for the Texas livestock producer.

Reinforced by some 5,000 calves, 1,500 hogs, and 15,000 sheep and lambs, the cattle brought payments to ranchmen and farmers for livestock at Fort Worth the first two days of this week to a total of $769,000.

The figure is based on well-informed estimates of average prices paid by commission firms to their clients.

The 7,687 cattle that arrived Monday set new records for the year in number received here and in prices paid. While not many good to choice fed steers and yearling were reported, there were some 50 cars of steers that day—some what of a record in itself; and the prices were entirely satisfactory.

Tuesday not so many cattle arrived; but the day was featured by the sale of a carload of fat cows from McCulloch county that averaged 1,013 pounds and sold at $7.25 a hundredweight. Loads of good to choice fed steers sold at $9.50 Tuesday, also a fair index to the prices livestock producers are receiving now.

Hogs are also well toward top levels, the top paid today being $9.45 a hundred pounds. This is the highest price paid here for hogs since last October when they went well over the $10 level. Receipts and prices on the livestock market here recently give point to the statement of the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics as of July 8 that Texas receipts from livestock in the five-month period, January through May, this year totaled $70,840,000, while the same period of last year brought the Texas livestock producer $70,358,000 compared with $58,762,000 in 1936, and $55,766,000 in 1935.

Farm Outlook Is Improved

CHICAGO, July 13 (UP)—A general recovery of major farm commodities values during the past two months has increased prices five to 27 per cent and altered the 1938 agricultural outlook, an analysis of Chicago markets disclosed today.

Wholesale prices of nine important commodities which help to gauge the extent of farm prosperity have risen an average of 10 per cent since the broad upturn from a four-year low level began late in the spring.

Hogs and cattle, a major source of farm income, have led the upturn with a price increase of 24 to 31 per cent. Eggs are up 51 per cent. The important grains are nine to 12 per cent higher than the 1936 lows reached scarcely six weeks ago.

The gradual rise of livestock quotations began almost a month before the recent sharp bulge in securities, confirming to some extent livestock experts' belief that the meat animal market is an important indicator of general business conditions.

Market statisticians said the price recovery may result in a revision of 1938 farm income prospects. The bureau of agricultural economics has forecast a reduction in cash income of about 21 per cent compared with the $2,821,000,000 in 1937, which was the highest in eight years.

Sumners' Foes For Congressional Seat Claim To Be FDR's Friends

DALLAS, July 12 (UP)—Hutton W. Sumners, 63-year-old chairman of the house judiciary committee, has two opponents in the congressional race who claim to be better Roosevelt men than he.

One is Thomas H. Love, 65, ex-saying a political comeback after eight years of cooperative inactivity, and the other is Leslie Jackson, who received about 4,000 votes in a race against Sumners two years ago.

Friends of Sumners, who shares with Sam Rayburn of Bonham the distinction of being the oldest member of the Texas delegation in point of service, say he has been with President Roosevelt much more often than against him. The fact remains, however, that he has at times opposed proposals advocated by the president.

The congressman is counting on accomplishments during his 29 years in Washington to bring about his nomination without the necessity of a strenuous campaign. In the first primary of 1936 he received more votes than the combined totals of three opponents.

Jackson has been making a house-to-house and handshaking campaign for many months. Love did not enter the race until late but has the advantage of being widely known through many years of public service.

He long has been an ardent admirer of President Roosevelt. During the Woodrow Wilson administration he was an assistant secretary of the treasury and Roosevelt was an assistant secretary of the navy.

Worked for Hoover

Voters throughout the state remember Love for his fights against "Fergusonism" and Al Smith and for liquor prohibition. He was a leader in the move which put Texas in the republican column in the 1928 Hoover-Smith contest.

Love, a former state senator and former democratic national committee man for Texas, promised in his opening speech that he would withdraw from the race if President Roosevelt said the welfare of the people demanded Sumners' re-election.

He describes himself as "a Franklin Delano Roosevelt new deal democrat, by which I mean that I heartily believe in the economic program proposed and being carried out under his leadership."

Sumners replies that he had supported the president "earnestly and I think effectively in the great majority of his proposals." The Dallas congressman opposed the supreme court reorganization bill.

Another Northeast Texas race finds Wright Patman of Texas, author of the soldier's bonus payment law and mentioned as a possible candidate for the United States senate two years hence, with his first opponent since 1922.

George P. Blackburn of Paris is endeavoring to unseat the Texarkana representative. The Paris candidate favors the national administration program in general and assails Patman's monetary plans. Patman is a strong supporter of the president.

Patman's campaigning was delayed by the late adjournment of congress but his 16-year-old son, Connor, did an able job of "pitch-bitting" touring the Bowie county political rallies with the congressman's sound equipment.

TO CALIFORNIA

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McDaniel and children planned to leave Thursday morning for Oakland, Calif., where he will attend the annual convention of Lions International, opening on July 15. McDaniel is president of the local club.

The estimated weight of the earth is six sextillion tons.

Ernest Thompson For Governor

Against Tax Increases

He is against any new taxes, including a sales tax, until a sound savings program is put into effect, and until it is determined whether the Social Security program, as outlined above, can be financed out of savings.

Organized Labor

He is in favor of Organized Labor and of collective bargaining. He is in sympathy with all the efforts of labor organizations to improve the wage, hour and living conditions of laborers and their families.

War On Unemployment

The real problem of labor is that of unemployment, and the real problem of the State Government is that of unemployment. Thompson pledges an active and continuous program of encouraging new industries and the development of natural resources in Texas to the end that more jobs can be provided for Texas citizens.

Higher Prices for Farm Products

He is for all sound programs designed to raise the prices of farm and ranch products. The farm must be given an even break with industry. Will lend the influence of the Governor's office in co-operation with all agencies seeking to better farm prices and further the conservation movement.

ELECTRIC RATES REDUCED

ELECTRIC RATES REDUCED AGAIN

Average Cost of Electric Service in the Home is LESS than 10¢ a Day

Electric service is one of the smallest items of household expense. The average daily cost of electricity in the home is less than 10 cents a day . . .

- . . . Less than the price of a package of cigarettes.
- . . . Less than the price of a gallon of gasoline.
- . . . Less than the price of a quart of milk.

Divide your next electric bill by the number of days in the month and see for yourself how small is your daily cost for the many ways electric service saves your time, your money, and adds to the ease of living.

4th Rate Reduction in 10 Years

Cheap Electricity NOW CHEAPER Than Ever!

RESIDENTIAL ELECTRIC RATES 44% LOWER THAN IN 1928

Another reduction in electric service rates to Big Spring residential and commercial customers became effective July 1. This is the fourth reduction since 1928, and cuts the price of electricity for the average residential and commercial customer 44 per cent below the 1928 level.

The Texas Electric Service Company always has followed a policy of reducing the price of electricity as rapidly as conditions warrant, and the record of rate reductions over the last 10 years show graphically how electric rates have been consistently reduced, even during the depression. This latest reduction, which makes CHEAP electricity still CHEAPER, comes at a time when other living costs are generally higher.

SHEPPARD DUE VOTERS' THANKS

But few persons in the history of Texas have built such an enviable record as that of George H. Sheppard, a West Texan who eight years ago was appointed state comptroller. Re-election has become a matter of fact each two years.

The office of comptroller is one requiring experience if it serves the people to the best advantage. No man can step into it and take charge at once and render services that are being given. It requires not only experience but executive ability, for under the comptroller there are many men and women doing the varied work of the department, and the comptroller must have the knowledge of human nature, as well as of individual fitness of each employee for the work to be done.

Sheppard last year directed collection of nearly $300,000,000 in funds, including federal monies, and did so for Texas at the lowest cost of any similar office in any state in the nation.

All Texas is proud of this West Texan who is making such a remarkable record in Austin. Is it any wonder, then, that from all parts of Texas Sheppard has been told not to worry about an expensive, tiresome campaign, but to get on about taking care of the state's business? He is doing that, and Texans should show their appreciation at the polls.

THE MOBILIZATION OF EUROPE

PARIS, July 13—It is extremely difficult to obtain reliable information on what it is really costing the peoples of Europe to prepare for the war that they are preparing themselves to fight. But now and then there is an incident which makes clearer than a statistic could make it, what it means to live in a world that is dominated by the need to prepare for war.

Such an incident has just occurred in England. Some time ago a corps of experts, known as the Committee Against Malnutrition, was told to study the problem of providing the British people with enough of the right kind of food. They found that a considerable number of the people of England were poorly fed, and that what they lacked in their diet was enough dairy produce, eggs, fresh fruit and vegetables.

Now in a rational world the sensible thing for England to do would be to buy more wheat and sugar abroad, and to use the money, the land, the capital, and the labor saved at home to produce dairy products, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Wheat and sugar can be grown better elsewhere than in England. They can be carried in ships halfway around the world.

But Britain dare not do the rational thing to feed her people properly. She must prepare for an attack on her shipping by submarines and air raids. She must prepare therefore to feed herself somehow, badly to be sure but enough to keep the people alive. Wheat and sugar are bulky commodities. They require many ships. And since Britain must face the fact that there will not be enough ships, she must grow wheat and sugar at home, and let the British poor do without dairy products, eggs, fruits, and fresh vegetables.

Though Britain could afford to feed her people adequately in time of peace, she dare not do it because to do that would make her vulnerable in time of war. So on grounds of military strategy alone, the British are compelled to keep a part of their population undernourished. If such a thing as this must happen in Great Britain where life is relatively normal, we need have no doubt that it is typical of the action of governments all over the continent. It is said, for example, that in Poland, which is in a desperately difficult economic position, the government deliberately refuses to drain the swamps on the Russian border and deliberately refrains from improving the roads on the German border.

In fact it may be said, I think, that the real cost of preparing for war is not the actual money spent on weapons of war. Those costs would still be tolerable if they could be paid for out of a tax on an otherwise normal and rational economic system. The real cost of armaments is the necessity of putting the whole economic system on a war footing of acting now in time of peace as if the nations were already besieged and at war.

The effect of living in a war economy in time of peace is to impoverish the people and the government, and thus to aggravate the domestic social problem everywhere and to inflame the international tension at all the points of conflict. The preparation for war makes it increasingly difficult for all the governments to solve their own social problems at home. Therefore, it becomes increasingly difficult for them to make the concessions and arrangements abroad which might appease the accumulating tension.

We are witnessing what is in effect a prolonged and total mobilization of all the people of Europe, and the time has come or, at least, it is close at hand when every human interest will be governed by the necessities of the mobilization. The point has already been passed when the plans of the military men are determined by the political policies of statesmen. We are at a point now where the ultimate decisions of statesmen, in all important economic and financial matters, are determined by the judgments of the military commanders.

I mean if you are lucky you may glimpse the great man at a distance, but with everybody else having the same idea you'll never get closer than 100 yards.

Sights And Sounds by ROBBIN COONS

Robbin Coons, our Hollywood columnist, is in New York for two weeks to see what movie activities are like in the East.

NEW YORK—It's your Broadway, and it's my Broadway—turn, turn, turn—it's your Broadway and mine. You're right, Sophie Tucker. That song you've been cooing-shouting for two years now is right too.

I mean my feet have been burning up Broadway, or to be exact, vice versa.

Well, about one night a year I want to reserve gawking privileges. It's the hick in me, Sophie. It's funny how New York and especially Broadway—always brings it out.

I meandered along, stopping to gawk. Everybody else did, too. Broadway's a great street for hicks, Sophie.

LOVE ON THE RANGE

Chapter 11 LUCKING FLAME

Ankrom threw away his cigarette and yawned. "You boys go on to the dance in Paso Pinta?"

"Might—if they've got good likker." His partner grinned. "I don't like that town. Too crowded in a fight every time I get within gunshot of the place!"

Ratchford's lips moved faintly, sardonically, in the gloom. One of the punchers said, "Either of you two gents wants sit in on a game of stud?"

Ankrom shook his head. Ratchford said, "Not me, fella. I've played cards with you before."

"The two men got up and tramped inside. A moment later Ankrom heard the scraping of a match. A flicker of light came through the window; grew steady and brightened. He heard the men dragging chairs and, a little later, the flap of cards."

"Punny Trone never wired any of these buildings but the ranchy houses an' stable."

"Yeah. Where does he get his juice?" Ankrom asked. "He sent to El Paso for a generator an' some other doo-hickies couple years back. Said he might's well keep up to date. I reckon it was Lee put the idea in his head. He'd just about cut his neck off for that girl an' she for him, Ratchford sighed. "They're pretty close, then two."

"Seen Trone yet?" "No," the sheriff answered. "Reckon it's about time I sauntered over to the house an' had my talk. I been hopin' them friends of his would drift off to bed. I'd prefer to see the O' Man alone."

"You'll have a long wait if you're waitin' for them to go to bed. City folks sit up all night. They go to bed with the owls," Ankrom said. "Do you think there's anythin' in this rustling talk?"

Ratchford fingered his chin. "Don't seem to be any other outfit losin' critters. They might be keepin' it to themselves, of course. Again, there might really be some stealin' going on an' Trone be the one gent that's gettin' hit." With a grunt he rose to his feet, peered down at Ankrom. "You heard what that puncher said."

The sound of voices came to Ankrom from the card players. Now that Ratchford was standing, radiance from the lamp illumined his face. Weariness was written there; in the creases of the jowls, in the maze of criss-crossed lines about the eyes. His gaze was melancholy, brooding. "You see, all this up with that damn gab that's going round 'bout me bein' out to break the Rafter T."

"Well, there would seem to be some substance for the rumor," Ankrom murmured gently. "The sheriff stiffened. "Yeah—that's why I'd like to get my hands around the neck of the gent that's backin' it. Because my ol' man an' Trone burnt gunpowder years ago folks are willin' to swaller any kind of hog-wash that tends to picture me lookin' for revenge. Damn 'em! I believe in lettin' sleepin' dogs sleep!"

Sense of Evil Ankrom watched the sheriff strike out across the yard to where the windows of the ranchhouse. As he watched Ratchford's broad back, sharp and black against those lights, conflicting thoughts struggled to adjust themselves upon his mind.

There was much about this sheriff he did not understand, he told himself. A vital, magnetic fire, there was yet something about him, some latent force, some indefinable sense of evil, that made a man hesitate to trust him far or to put faith in his words.

Just why this was, Ankrom could not say. But the feeling lingered. He could not shake it. Some way, big and magnetic as he was, Tom Ratchford measured short in Ankrom's estimation.

He wondered if Ratchford had been trying to talk him into something; if Ratchford in springing Bandera's name had hoped to take him by surprise. How much did this sheriff suspect? How much did he know? Did he really connect Abe Streiter with the Arizona smokeroo, Bur Ankrom? Or was he—

"Shucks," Ankrom muttered. "Looks like I'm tryin' to develop a case of nerves."

Then he chuckled softly as he recalled the sheriff's statement that Bandera was lined up against the Trones. That would mean that Bandera either was in the country now or would shortly be coming in. It had been well over a year since his and Bandera's trails had crossed. In old Nogales it had happened. He remembered the circumstances well. He had taken malicious pleasure that night in upsetting a little deal the Mexican had been striving to bring off. An amusing case of "dier-bid" he'd made it, leaving Bandera seething with fury, swearing revenge by every saint in the calendar.

With another chuckle Ankrom rose to his feet, lunged against the shadowed wall while he fished the makings from his pocket and rolled a cigarette. He would have a final smoke, and then go hunt his bunk. The cigarette ripped from Ankrom's mouth, so close had been the miss. A report smashed loudly on the stillness, flattened out across the yard, beat up against the buildings. And on its heels another, even as Ankrom whirled, his hand straining to the waistband of his trousers. A blur of motion stirred the shadows beneath the foliage; something dropped heavily in the dust.

With gun held ready in his hand Ankrom sprinted forward. He jerked to a stop before the tree as a vague white figure snatched up from the ground to confront him. It was the figure of a girl. "Duck Out Of This!" "Who—who are you?" "Abe Streiter, ma'am. Was that you doing that shooting?" "No—yes! No! No, of course not!" Despite the agitation in her voice Ankrom realized that this was not Lee Trone. Therefore, he reasoned it must be the golden-haired creature posing as Betty Struthers. What was she doing here? What was that thing in her hand? Ankrom leaned closer and saw that it was a pistol; he saw also that with her other hand the girl was pressing something to her breast—something that looked like folded papers.

"What are you doing here?" he whispered. "What have you got in your hands?" "She drew back. The hand with the papers disappeared inside the neckline of her dress and came out empty. Ankrom heard the sound of running footstep. People would soon be upon them, hurling questions. "Duck out of this," he said. "I'll see you later."

She peered at him strangely. Then suddenly she turned and ran. A man came pounding up, grabbed Ankrom by the arm. "What's goin' on?" he growled. "What was all that shootin'?" Before Ankrom could answer, the man turned his head, belted across his shoulder: "Get a lantern, somebody! We got to have a light here!"

"Ankrom drew one of the running figures whir and retrace its steps. The others came on and grouped themselves about Ankrom and the burly man who held him. A hand felt down his wrist and closed upon the barrel of his gun. "I'll take this," the heavy voice said. Ankrom, recognizing now the sheriff in the man who held him, relinquished his weapon. "Speak up, you. Let's hear you name." Ankrom said, "Abe Streiter." He felt the sheriff's grip relax. "Oh—well, who in hell was you shootin' at?" "I wasn't. Somebody else was doing that shooting. Ratchford an' Ratchford showed impatience. "Is the fella's name a secret?" "Reckon so—leastways, he didn't leave me any card."

"Where was you standin'?" "By the bunkhouse," Ankrom said. "I was lightin' a cigarette. That shot came along an' snicked it right out of my mouth."

"Kinda close, eh?" "Well, I don't know. The fellow might have been aimin' to have some fun with me. I mean he might have done it on purpose."

"Ain't no one round here could shoot that good?" Ratchford growled. "Excepting maybe—Gaydell. An' Gaydell ain't got here yet, Froby's changed his mind an' decided to postpone his visit till tomorrow," he cleared his throat. "This where you figured them shots come from?" "One, anyway. First one, I think. I ain't sure about the second. When that cigarette went skally-hootin' I whirled an' saw a blur among the shadows here under this tree. An' I came patting over. Hadn't had a chance to make out anything when up comes you an' these others."

A bobbing light showed Ankrom a man running toward them with a lantern. Ratchford took the lantern from him and held it high above his head. In the sand a short three feet away a shape lay motionless. (Copyright, 1938, Nelson C. Nye)

Reporter Fills In For Bobby Feller

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP)—This is an open letter to Fitcher Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians:

Dear Bob:

This reporter forged your name about 500 times yesterday—not on checks, but for 500 boy baseball fans who think you're a very great man.

It was like this:

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators invited these boys to the Cleveland-Washington game free of charge. When the nine innings were over, they all went looking for you. They wanted your autograph.

You must have got out a side door, because they were yelling for you when I came along.

"There's Bob," screamed a little low-headed fellow.

Now, Bob, I look about as much like you as Babe Ruth does, but it didn't make any difference to them. You know how it is with a crowd of boys.

"Sign my autograph book, Bob," they yelled, pinning me against the wall.

"I'm not Bob," I wailed. "The heck you're not," they chanted.

"Sign it Bob," they pleaded. "You're my favorite pitcher. Please, Bob."

A policeman tried to butt in, but he didn't get any farther than I did. They yelled and shouted and shouted and pushed score cards in my face.

So—I began to sign—"Sincerely, Bob Feller."

This kept up for three-quarters of an hour—three broken pencils and a cramped wrist.

What else could a fellow do? I'd have let you down if I'd run out on them, and I'd have let them down if I hadn't signed your name.

Anyhow—it was a pretty swell feeling getting mistaken for you. That's how it was, Bob.

Sincerely,
EDDY GILMORE.

PEACE EFFORTS HAVE FAILED, SAYS LONDON

LONDON, July 13 (AP)—The government announced today that its efforts to form an international commission to investigate air bombings of civilian centers in Spain had failed.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the house of commons that the scheme, in which the United States, France, Norway, Sweden and later The Netherlands had been asked to join, had been found "impossible."

Instead, he said, Britain would send a British mission of two men to Spain.

(The United States declined Britain's invitation and Sweden followed suit.)
