Moore about Eastland

By Virgil E. Moore

It's a pleasure to be able to write one more "Moore About Eastland" column even if we do have to pay advertising tes to do so. (That's okay, 1. V., we know you have to make a living too.)

We spent seven of the hap-piest ears of our lives in Eastland and we still count many of the citizens of this comunity as our finest friends. Who can forget the town where his youngest son was born or where his oldest boy first attended school! It was in Eastland that we owned our first home and bought our first new car. And it was here that a donkey threw us to a new record high and broke up our favorite kneecap. just don't forget things like

VEM

It is still a thrill to us each time we drive back to Eastland and see old familiar sights. There are, we are pleased to see, some new new sights as well. Your new industries look great, but we confess that we miss the old Corner Drug Store, even though the new dres shop is a real beauty. Remember the time we picketed Everett when he went up to a dime on his coffee?

VEM

Eastland and Breckenridge, our new hometown, have a lot in common, being only 28 miles apart. One of those things is that we are in the same state legislative district. We equally share the choice of sending a man to Austin to represent us. Since both of the candidates for this race are from Breckenridge, and since more normal types of newspaper ads seem to be all sterotypes, we are choosing this way to tell you of our concern in this important political campaign. VEM

We badly need a man of Joe Hanna's quality in Austin. We aren't going to paint a white hat on Joe and a black one on Burke Musgrove, his opponent. We are going to tell you that Joe Hanna's interest will be in representing his district, not in trying to make a statewide name for himself. We need someone in Austin to stand up for us on such important matters as fighting Abilene's efforts to move the 11th Court of Civil Appeals. We feel Joe Hanna is such a man and give him our unqualified endorsement.

VEM Thanks for taking time to read Moore About one more time. Be sure you excerise that precious American right and vote Saturday . . . even if it's for the wrong man.

FROM THE ASHES-In the upper photo N. M. Lancaster, right, and J. R.
