TELEGRAM TO GET SCORE OF THE GAME

The Eastland Telegram has made arrangements to have the score of the Maverick-Bob Cat football game telegraphed to its offices at the end of each quarter in order that the fans who are unable to attend the game may know how the team is making out.

A representative of the Telegram will make the trip to San Angelo and at the end of each quarter will rush the news to the telegraph station at San Angelo, where it will be transmitted to Eastland and delivered to the office where the fans may call and get the results.

The first report will probably not be received until about 3:45 o'clock as it takes a little time to get the message telegraphed to the telegraph station and a telegram from San Angelo requires approximately 15 minutes in transit. After the first message is received one should get here approximately every 20 to 25 minutes afterwards.

Any fan who wants to know the score can get it by calling 500 and asking the score. When Eastland played in Abilene there were 296 such calls handled in the office and it is possible that many were unable to get a connection because the telephone was ringing almost continually from 3:00 o'clock until after 6:00.

The Telegram is glad to be able to offer this service to the fans, and in order that many as possible be given the information it is asking that the request for the score be made as brief as possible. Just ring 500 and ask for the score and we will give it to you.

Took Poison Just Before She Leaped In Bay. Body Is Recovered.

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 7.—As the Mallory Line steamer Mohawk steamed into Galveston harbor from New York today a woman drank from a bottle labeled poison and leaped overboard to her death.

Her body was recovered a few minutes later. The woman was listed on the ship register as Mrs. Gray Lavallee of New York City. She had left notes to Captain D. W. Leak of the Mohawk, and to a sister, Mrs. R. Gillette, San Antonio, indicating she intended to end her life, but giving no reason for the act.

To the letter Captain Leak she attached a $5 bill to cover the expenses of several telegrams which she asked be sent.

When the woman leaped from the ship, members of the crew threw a buoy overboard to mark the approximate location and the ship turned around a few minutes later and after a few minutes search the body was recovered.

PUT THE SPECIAL TRAIN OVER

Eastland citizens, whether they plan to attend the Eastland-San Angelo football game at San Angelo Saturday or not should lend whatever assistance is necessary to insure the proposed special train over the Texas & Pacific for the purpose of transporting the local band, pep squad and a large number of fans to San Angelo and return for the game.

The Mavericks have been giving a good account of themselves in every game they have played and the game with San Angelo will be no exception. Round trip tickets for this train may be purchased for $3.00 provided 240 or more are sold or $3.25 if less than 230 are sold. Let's put it over.

CHURCH OF GOD CALLS PASTOR

The congregation of the local Church of God has called as pastor the Rev. John W. Batorf, for the past seven months field representative of Warner Memorial University, who comes very highly recommended. Eastland has many splendid churches and is proud of them. She is also very proud of the high type of men that are serving these churches as pastors.

NOHM TALKS SHEEP AND GOATS

Henry Nohm of El Paso, president of the United Dry Goods Company, which has a store in Eastland, with Mrs. Nohm was a visitor in Eastland this week. He expressed himself as being favorably impressed with the future outlook for business in Eastland and especially was he pleased with the work that is being done here and elsewhere in the county along the lines of establishing sheep and goat herds on Eastland county farms.

SWEET POTATOES PROFITABLE

T. A. Bush, who resides near Ranger, planted 26 acres to sweet potatoes last year and found the crop so profitable that he and his two sons will this year plant 100 acres to Porto Rico sweet potatoes. More than 1000 bushels of potatoes will be planted by Bush for the purpose of providing slips which he expects to sell to others for transplanting.

This is along the line of work needed to secure potato curing plants for this county. If the potatoes are planted they certainly will produce and with a sufficient crop the curing plant will of necessity come.

FARMERS AND FARM OWNERS CAN HELP

Farmers and owners of farms in this county can do much to help relieve the employment situation. There is always work that can and should be done on the farm. Repairs can be made on the farm buildings, fences can be repaired, fence rows cut out, land terraced, cellars in which to store fruits, vegetables, etc., dug.

Farmers wives can can beef, vegetables, fruits, etc., and put them away for future use. Just at this time of the year when much fruit and vegetables are going to waste if they are not taken care of is a splendid time to put them up.

If this kind of a program was inaugurated on the farms of Eastland county at this time, much work could be provided for men and women farm laborers who need work. Also the farmer would profit.

Oklahoma has returned to its democrat moorings. Oklahoma voters retired Sen. W. B. Pine, republican, and sent the blind orator, Thomas Pryor Gore, to the United States senate. They elected Alfalfa Bill Murray governor by a majority that may go beyond the 100,000 mark. Only one republican congressman survived the democratic landslide.

It is a matter of record that William Murray and Thomas Pryor Gore in days remote pursued the law in the Texas city of Corsicana. They were given their first baptism in the pool of Texas politics. Long before statehood came they deserted Texas for the Indian Territory and for years and years they were prominent figures until the Harding landslide wiped them out. Now, they are very successful comebacks and the democratic leaders of the Oklahoma democracy.

According to the August final now there are 856,000 democrats in Texas. According to the guessing of the November voting 850,000, perhaps a greater number, failed to go to the polls on general elections day. Indeed the democrats or a majority of the democrats in Texas, failed to respond to the party call.

In the 14th congressional district, democracy by the way by a large majority, Harry M. Wurzbach won by 4000 and will continue to be "the only republican congressman from Texas." There may have been a reason for it. Democrats who reside in the Wurzbach district say that he was counted out two years ago, but contested and won the election.

His charges of irregularities were sustained. Wurzbach is a dripping wet; he voted for the Hoover policies, tariff and all. As the only republican congressman from Texas he will clamor for the left ear of Pres. Hoover, while Col. Creager is doing his level best to retain possession of the Hoover right ear.

Now who will control the federal plums for hungry Texas until the coming of 1932—"the only republican congressman" or the very astute republican national committeeman?

By the Political Analyst
Sen. elect R. Grady Woodruff of Decatur this week visited the Texas capitol for the first time since his nomination in the August primaries for the upper house of the legislature.

He is the former University of Texas student, defender of historic Old Ball hall, shrine of democracy on the campus.

Woodruff is hard at work, preparing himself for the coming session. He is looking ahead to a serious effort on the subject of public utility regulation.

Through a new member, Woodruff will bring the senate a mass of well-studied material dealing with the utility question. He will command attention from the beginning and it appears probable that he will build solidly toward substantial leadership in the senate earlier than most the strong members.

Returns from the university investment constitutional amendment indicate that the University of Texas has now been put in position to move ahead with a magnificent building program.

A series of eight dormitories can be built much more quickly under this amendment than without it. Land has just been acquired for the dormitory sites.

The university's instructional building program, embracing about 14 structures now needed, can be achieved much more rapidly. Actual saving in interest under the amendment will average, over the next 15 years, sufficient to give the university one more building a year than would have been possible without it.

There is one type of physical property that the state can't tax. That is airplanes. Motor vehicles are taxed for upkeep of the roads, but airplanes do not use the roads. Municipal airports are exempt from all taxation. Even the gasoline used in planes cannot be taxed. These points are covered in official state rulings.

Sen. Carl C. Hardin of Stephenville, who is assured of being the president pro tem of the senate, in the coming regular session, has been here studying legislative needs, the changing procedure under the "stratified session" amendment, and the rehabilitation and improvement needed by state hospitals and schools.

Potpourri BY GAD

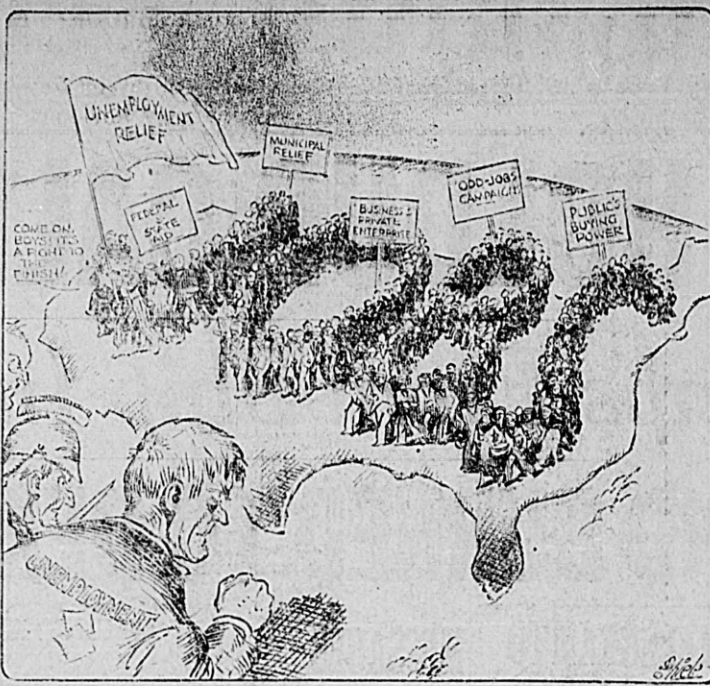

A good woman suggests that the vacant lots and the streets in the vicinity of the Methodist church should be cleared of weeds and rubbish before the conference convenes. A good suggestion. We should make as good appearance as possible.

Sentiment is getting just about right in this town for a red hot campaign against "cold check" artists.

A "stop sign" at the intersection of West Plummer street and South Daugherty avenue is badly needed.

Don't forget that we are to have visitors next week.

Bandits Hold Up California Train

The mail and express car and while clerks were kept covered with rifles, quickly looted the train. The train, No. 36, was the same that was held up at McAvoy, near Martinez, a year and a half ago by the Heigle gang who escaped with $15,000. It pulled out of Berkeley at 6:58 a. m. and the hold up occurred two minutes later.

In addition to cash and registered valuables of an unknown amount, it was reported that the entire payroll for the Columbia Steel Mills at Pittsburg, was taken, amounting to upwards of $40,000.

With word from Oakland police that the machine in which the bandits escaped was one stolen during the night, officers were certain it would be found abandoned in Berkeley or Oakland.

The men wore "blue jean" pants and gandana handkerchief masks with holes punched for the eyes.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NRA Service Writer
WASHINGTON—Washington society—official, unofficial and semi-official—will try to bear up bravely through the long hard winter in spite of the depression reported from various sections of the country.

Either that, or omit any of the customary orientation and expense the capital will keep a stiff upper lip and, according to all signs and reports, make this social season just a little bigger and better than ever. This it will contribute to the stimulation of business and the solution of the unemployment problem, boosting the catering business, the florist business, the servant business and various other businesses.

Local experts are thoroughly convinced that Washington is now the capital of American society. They point to the unprecedented number of debutantes parading to Washington this season for coming out parties and the indubitable fact that nowhere else is there such a congregation of high federal officials, distinguished diplomats and private citizens of wealth.

The White House itself has abandoned the old modest custom of having but nine formal functions a year. There will be 12 White House receptions and dinners in December, January and February—dinners for the cabinet, the vice president, the chief justice and the supreme court, the diplomats and the speaker of the House and receptions for diplomats, judges, senators, representatives, the army and navy, the officials of the treasury, post office, interior, agriculture, commerce and labor departments, and one on New Year's Day for whoever wants to come.

High government officials who deplore results of this year's elections are expected to try to forget their sorrows by entering more determined than ever into the so-called social whirl. This is

President Of Burlison College Thought Found

By United Press

GREENVILLE, Tex., Nov. 7.—Mrs. E. W. Provence, wife of the president of Burlison College, today received a telegram saying that a man answering Dr. Provence's description had been located at Crockett, Texas, apparently suffering from a lapse of memory.

Dr. Provence has been missing since Monday, when he parted with friends in Dallas.

The telegram, signed "Wildler," a Crockett banker, said the amnesia victim was at a hotel there.

Mrs. Provence, in company with Dr. E. P. Good, left here immediately for Crockett to attempt to identify the man.

The college president stepped from an automobile in a Dallas residential district, saying he was going to visit relatives. Extensive search failed to reveal a trace of him.

Dr. Provence was formerly head of the Montezuma Baptist College, Montezuma, New Mexico, and still carries the business manager of Baylor University, Waco.

CROCKETT, Tex., Nov. 7.—E. W. Provence, missing president of Burlison College, Greenville, spent the night here, and left early this morning for Palestine, according to T. E. Walden, Crockett banker.

Walden said that Provence, for whom an extensive search has been made since his disappearance, appeared at Walden's dairy home last night, and introduced himself.

"I had to get away from the school for a while or my health would have broken," Walden said Provence told him.

The college president was taken to the Eureka Hotel here where he spent the night and boarded a train for Palestine this morning.

Highway Police To Prevent Yates Blocking Road

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 7.—If Carl Yates returns to Block State Highway 121 near Grapevine, as he did yesterday, state motor police will be sent there with orders to open the highway and keep it open. Assistant Attorney General Rice M. Tilley announced here today.

"No individual can block a public highway," said Tilley.

Yates, claiming he had not received proper compensation for the highway running through his farm, fenced it up and patrolled it with a shot gun yesterday.

FORT WORTH, Tex. Nov. 7.—Automobiles whizzed unimpeded this morning over State Highway 121, between Fort Worth and Grapevine, following the arrest of Carl Yates.

Yates, 50, retired merchant and traveling salesman, was expected at the courthouse Friday morning to discuss a charge of blocking a highway, filed against him late Thursday.

Not satisfied with offers and a judgment he got after the highway was built through his farm on the outskirts of Grapevine, Yates built two fences across the road and detoured traffic all Thursday. He patrolled his fences with a double barreled shotgun.

Lewisville—Graveling of Lewisville gap in Highway 40 will be started in very near future.

Market

Final Stocks
NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—A wave of selling reminiscent of that of a year ago swept over the stock market today.

U. S. Steel dropped to a new low since 1924; Utilities sank to new lows for the year or longer; special issues had losses ranging to 10 points.

More than two billion dollars was wrung from stock market values.

Over on the curb, trouble was brewing in Citicorp Service, one of the best distributed stocks in the country. Word came that the stock had been temporarily suspended on the Boston exchange. Simultaneously at New York 8,000 shares sold at 22 1/2. Then the issue sank toward 20 to new low ground for the present shares.

Drives against the Rails and Utilities were sufficient to loosen selling in other sections of the list. All the important issues broke to new lows for the year or longer, including such stocks as American Telephone, Standard of New Jersey, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric, Bethlehem Steel, North American and Radio Corporation.

High priced issues like Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Peoples Gas and Coca Cola were hammered down 5 to 8 points. A long list of others broke 3 to 5 points.

IN HERE TODAY
Mitchell, 17, leaves Baltimore she has lived with her mother, Margaret Rogers, her wealthy father, in New York. They are divorced and Mrs. Rogers is a widow following a second marriage.

Shields, young newspaperer, is in love with Mitchell asks Evelyn Parsons to introduce her to other young people. Parsons agrees, considering a means to win Mitchell's affection.

Shields becomes jealous of the schemes to get rid of her dragging a romance between her and Tod Jordan, fascinating dubious character.

Tod Jordan forbids Celia to go about with young man frequently. Lillian, a girl of Celia's age, better loyal friend. Shields goes to New York to work for a graphic service and meets the man she has lost to Jordan.

That it is really she loves comes to Celia the young man is imprisoned in a burning building. He is unharmed except for a broken arm. Parsons, who pretends friendly to Shields, goes to jail and tells him Celia is the young man's sister.

That afternoon Celia and Shields are strolling together when she tells him she is in love with the man and takes Celia home they have a heated argument. Parsons arrives and she has ever met Shields.

Shields goes to the apartment and tells her mother. She goes to her mother's flat.

GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLVIII
Celia rattled the door knob. No answer and she knocked louder. "Mother!" she called. "Mother—let me in!" There was no response from the flat, but a door across the hall opened a few inches and a woman's head, grotesque with white hair, appeared.

"What you want?" she asked. Celia had never seen the woman before.

"I want to see Mrs. Rogers," she explained. "She must be asleep. I can't make her hear. I'm her daughter."

The woman opened the door a trifle wider. "She ain't there," she announced. "Ain't nobody there. You'll wake the whole house with that racket!"

"But my mother lives here!"

The stranger shook her head negatively and emphatically. "Ain't nobody living there," she insisted, "not since I moved in. The place is vacant."

"You mean — my mother isn't here? You mean she's moved?"

"I dunno nothing about it. All I know is that flat's vacant, and if you keep on pounding on the door nobody's going to get any sleep. Why don't you ask the woman that keeps the place?" She's down on the first floor."

The door shut with a bang as the curl-papered head was withdrawn. In dismay and panic Celia stared at the wooden barrier and then fled down the stairs.

Mrs. Schultz, custodian of the apartment, lived in the first floor rear flat. Celia rang her bell sharply. Several moments passed, and then she heard a voice.

"Who's there?"

The girl was trembling as she answered. "Mrs. Schultz? This is Celia — Celia Mitchell. Can I see you?"

"Just a minute, please!"

When the door opened the stout Mrs. Schultz, enveloped in a purple cotton kimono and looking sleepy, squinted her eyes at the girl and then stepped back, amazed.

"Why—if it isn't Celia! What you doing here? Where you come from?"

The girl smiled nervously. "Oh, I— I just came to see my mother. I wanted to surprise her. Where is she, Mrs. Schultz? I knocked on the door upstairs, but a woman told me she'd gone away."

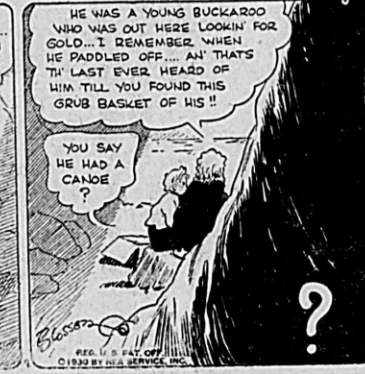

The custodian nodded. She was large and the action set the greater part of her rotund flesh into motion. She spoke with a slight Germanic accent.

"Sure! She's gone. She don't tell you?"

"Why—I can't believe it!"

Mrs. Schultz swept the door back. "Come in," she said. "Here,

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

send them if she weren't. Oh— what about the letters I wrote her?"

The custodian half turned, pointing to a littered desk across the room. "Look!" she commanded.

The girl looked. There were all sorts of papers and untidy odds and ends on the desk. Mrs. Schultz rose and moved toward it. She picked up a packet of letters bound by an elastic band and brought them to Celia. All of them were addressed to "Mrs. Margaret Rogers."

"My letters!" Celia exclaimed. "Sure. I keep everything until I hear what she wants. Everything!"

There were a few envelopes which looked as though they might and announced she was leaving the city. Her rent was paid for the next two weeks, which was the usual period of notice. Mrs. Schultz said that when she asked her tenant's plans Mrs. Rogers' answer was indefinite. She had said something about "sending word later."

"But you haven't heard?" Celia asked quickly.

Mrs. Schultz replied in the negative. "Not one word! Not one word since she walked out of this house!"

Celia began to sob again and the woman looked at her anxiously. She had intended to say that ill health might explain Margaret Rogers' actions, but instinct warned her against it. Instead she added that Margaret's household goods — what little there were of them — were stored in the basement. It was an unusual favor, but she had granted it because Mrs. Rogers was an old tenant and had always paid her rent promptly.

The girl did not seem to be listening. Suddenly she raised her head excitedly.

"But the letters!" Celia cried. "I've been getting letters from her — and they were mailed in Baltimore, too!"

"Yes?" As Mrs. Schultz uttered the syllable it was both a question and ejaculation.

"Every Saturday!" Celia hurried on. "They must mean she's here, don't they? She couldn't contain circulars. Five others were addressed in Celia's hand writing. The girl studied them.

"Mrs. Schultz," she said appealingly, "where do you think she's gone?"

An expressive shrug of a bulky shoulder was the answer. After a moment the woman said, "Where is that place she works? Maybe they tell you there."

"Margot's Shop!" Of course! Why didn't I think about it? Celia was on her feet. "Margot will know. I'll go there right away—"

Mrs. Schultz raised a hand in protest. "Not now!" she said. "It's barely seven o'clock. You can't go now!"

Celia had forgotten time. There was a clock on the wall. She compared it with her wrist watch. Both of them recorded that it was a few minutes past seven. Margot's Shop would not open until nine.

"That's right," she agreed. "I'll have to wait."

She sat down again, her face clouded.

Mrs. Schultz bustled toward the kitchen. "I get you something to eat," she announced. "I guess maybe you feel better."

Celia objected, declaring she was not hungry, but in the end she followed to the kitchen and presided over a meal of buttered toast, sausages, home-made preserves, doughnuts and coffee.

When they had finished and the dishes were washed it was still too early to set out for Margot's. At Mrs. Schultz's solicitation the girl lay down in the bedroom. She did not want to sleep, but her eyes closed. She was deep in slumber, breathing regularly, when the woman looked into the room at nine o'clock. Mrs. Schultz moved away quietly.

"Poor girl!" she murmured, shaking her head.

It was nearly noon when Celia awoke. At first she was bewildered. Then events of the night rushed back to her and she arose immediately. She must get to Margot's!

She dashed cold water on her face, hastily brushed her hair, and with a word to the German woman she left the house. After what seemed an interminable delay a street car came in sight and she boarded it.

Celia's two hands gripped each other tightly. Over and over she told herself there was nothing to worry about. Margot would tell her where to find her mother.

She left the car and walked swiftly up Charles street. Margot's Shop looked as usual. She opened the door and entered.

A saleswoman she had never seen approached the girl. Celia asked for the proprietress.

"I'm so sorry. She's not here! Will someone else do?"

The girl explained her mission and the saleswoman disappeared to return with Miss Devereau, assistant manager. She recognized Celia, greeted her cordially, but admitted she had no knowledge of Mrs. Rogers' whereabouts.

"Margot would probably know," Miss Devereau said. "Isn't it a shame! She's in Canada, and I don't know when she'll be back. Her sister's very ill. Oh, I'm so sorry!"

"Then you don't know—?"

"Wait! Let's ask in the fitting room. Maybe someone there can tell you!"

In the fitting room a sewing machine buzzed loudly. Four women were bending over heaps of cloth which were garments. Celia recognized Tillie Dennison's broad shoulders and went up to her.

"Hello, Tillie!"

"Merce on us—if it isn't Celia!"

The others stopped work and crowded around. It took only a few minutes for the girl's worst fears to be justified. Margaret Rogers' disappearance was a complete mystery to her former colleagues.

"I'll walk to the door with you," Tillie offered after they had talked a while, but as soon as they were outside the room she stopped and drew something from her apron pocket.

"Here, you might as well take these, I guess."

Tillie Dennison handed Celia a collection of letters. They were addressed to the girl. Celia uttered a low cry.

"She left 'em!" Tillie Dennison muttered. "Asked me to mail 'em to you. One each week. I've sent four. There's 12 left, isn't there?"

Her mother's letters! This explained how the others had reached her.

Suddenly grief and terror blinded the girl. She ran down the steps and out of the shop. A cab was passing. She hailed it and automatically gave the address of her former home. Arriving there she rang the bell of Mrs. Schultz's apartment. The door opened and the custodian's hearty voice greeted her. "Come in, Celia! There's a man been looking for you!"

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON THOMAS, THE HONEST DOUBTER

Text: John 11:14-16; 14:5-8; 20: 24-29; 21:1, 2

Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead.

And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless let us go unto him.

Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus unto his fellow disciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him.

Thomas saith unto him, Lord we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

Jesus said unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the father, but by me.

If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also; and from henceforth ye know him, and I have seen him.

Philip said unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us.

But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas was with them; then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you.

Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach higher thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing.

And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.

And Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

After these things Jesus showed himself again to the disciples, at the sea of Tiberias; and on this wise showed he himself.

There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee and two other of his disciples.

Thomas, The Honest Doubter. John 11:14-16; 14:5-8; 20:24-29; 21:1-2.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist

The topic given for this lesson for the study of young people and adults is "The Value and Peril of Doubt."

That doubt has both its value and its peril is amply illustrated in the life experiences of those who doubt. It is hardly too much to say that there are certain people who should not doubt, not because doubt itself can always be avoided or because it is necessarily dangerous but because by disposition or habit they are unwilling to deal with their doubts honestly.

It is one thing to have honest doubts and quite another thing to deal with one's doubts dishonestly. Honest doubt is never captious or contentious. When the doubter becomes captious or contentious, he ceases to be a doubter and begins to express what are in reality adverse prejudices or convictions.

The doubter is still open to be convinced. What quite frequently passes, especially much of the revolt against religion today, is not all doubt at all, but rather questioning or negation. The attitude of the doubter is that of the seeker. He questions only that he may know, not that he may make a display of his negations.

The Honest Doubter Thomas was of this type of the honest doubter. Here was a man whose disposition was to believe, whose heart and mind were attuned to truth, who desired to be in the company of the faithful, and all of whose life trends were positive. But Thomas wanted to be sure that he was in the right way, and there was every justification for this.

Wasted Effort OF course you can't argue with a professor. I mean you can't win. To begin with, a professor starts with a rule or an accepted theory. That rule or theory might as well be part of his body, such as an arm or leg. It's as easy to coax a professor away from a rule as it is to whack off his ears.

The professors of the Big Ten the other day demonstrated what I mean. They refused to allow Northwestern to play Notre Dame a game in Soldiers' Field for the benefit of warily chartered. There is a rule, you know, about a Big Ten team playing away from its own environs. A charity game would set a terrible precedent. Dyche Stadium in Evanston, Ill., where the professors rule the game must be played, seats about 60,000. You can put 110,000 people into seats at Soldiers' Field. The game would have netted more than $150,000 for charities at a time when charity is really needed.

What a Chance! PROFESSORS haven't as many chances to show their authority over football teams as the coaches have. The only big opportunities they have are presented when they are able to fank the noble gridiron hero in his math or irregular verbs.

The question of Northwestern playing Notre Dame at Soldiers' Field for charity offered the Big Ten skullduggery the greatest chance to flaunt their power they have had for years. And did they seize it? But it was wasted effort trying to argue with professor. You can't win. If it were not for wanting effort you might ask them a few impudent questions about the purposes of stadia that seat 50,000 to 100,000 people. You might make bold to inquire if they expected to fill those bowls with students every Saturday. You might even raise your voice and course to the point of an interrogation as to who was paying for all this football, anyway. But nothing could be to ideal attitude. When Jesus meant was that the highest character and the most effective character to truth is not found in the cold and calculating seeker of external evidence, but in the one whose inner life is marked by spiritual responsiveness and spiritual expectation.

On the other hand, he desired his faith to be intelligent and well-founded; and that ought to be the right and privilege of every man. Where faith is not well founded and reasonable its reality may well be questioned. What passes for faith under such circumstances is in reality habit or superstition or convention. It is where conviction is founded upon real belief and evidence that faith is actually displayed.

Credulity is not in any sense a virtue any more than incredulity is a virtue. There are many people who have interpreted the words of Jesus to Thomas, "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed," as a rebuke to Thomas. These words, however, were not in any sense a rebuke of Thomas' doubt concerning the outward evidence of the resurrection. They were rather a reference to those moral and spiritual truths that were not affected by the resurrection and that did not depend on outward evidence.

What had happened to Jesus after his death did not alter in any way the beauty and reality of his moral example and teaching as Thomas had known them during the time of association with Jesus before the crucifixion.

When Jesus said "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed," he was approving of that inward response to love and righteousness which is fundamentally the right attitude on the part of all who would know the truth.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—JOHN GROVER, the well-known Missouri Valley referee, was a press-box spectator at the Yale-Army game. He says Louis Weller, captain of the Haskell Indian team, is better than Able Booth.

Booth and Weller are about the same size, but Weller starts the game and finishes it. When the Texas Longhorns (University of Texas) played Southern Methodist, special arrangements were made between the Texas yell leaders and the athletic officials, whereby the men students sat in a closely packed body at the game, thus being relieved of any restrictions co-eds might put upon their yelling prowess. Carleoe of Notre Dame says Carnegie Tech will beat Pitt. So does Joe Savoldi.

Aha! The Rules! PROFESSORS laughed at Christopher Columbus after he had learned sailing in 10 easy lessons and announced he would discover a new world. They gave Marconi a resounding raspberry chorus when he announced that the speaking voice could be made to carry 1000 miles in less time than it reached the back of a theater in Rome. It was against the rules.

They giggled at the Wright brothers when they tried to fly at Kitty Hawk and marked down the experiment as a couple of the Marx Brothers trying to find out how light their heads really were. Have your fun, fellows. But logarithms don't lie. Remember the rules. You can't win.

One should lay great stress on the patience that Jesus had with Thomas. The rebuke that he gave was gentle and of a sort to lead Thomas into the higher and better attitude. Probably the great mistake we make is in not taking our doubts and our difficulties to God. We try to suppress these things; we try to hide them from our fellow men, perhaps with very good warrant, for our fellow men are apt to be critical or scornful when we express our doubts. No matter how honest and inevitable these may be. But if we brought our doubts to the God of all truth and prayed for light in the spirit of those who really desire the light, it may be that we would be much more successful in finding the truth. It might not be that we would come to believe the things that we wish we could believe, or it may be that these things themselves do not represent the highest truth; but we should come to some truth, for it is doubtless any man ever really seen in the right spirit with will, without finding it. One of our troubles is in our doubts we are deluded and we either one set of opinions for we come back through into a new profession of is no more real than that held before our period of

OIL NEWS

SHERMAN, Nov. 7.—Pump rigging was to be completed today in preparation for pumping the second producing oil well of the Pottaboro field in Grayson county. LONGVIEW, Tex., Nov. 7.—Indicating that important developments are expected shortly at the Hanby oil well north of here, officials have issued orders that no spectators be allowed within 500 yards of it for the next few days. The officials, say that the order was issued to preclude possible injuries, admitted that heavy machinery had been ordered for a test.

Keep At "Parr" *

MANY of us who "keep at parr" by eating plentifully of salmon, a recognized health-food, know little of the strange past and future of the parr as the young salmon is called. If you were to go up among the snow-clad mountains of the Pacific Northwest early in the spring, you would see small orange-colored globules half-buried in the sand and gravel. These are all that represent the year's run of salmon, for the parent salmon—whose life-mission it is to produce these eggs—does not survive to the next season. Why Salmon Leave Home The slow warming rays of the sun wakens a spark of life in these globules and gradually the eyes of the fish appears, then the backbone, and then the entire fish. When the parr is fully emerged from his bed, he must be alert to escape his enemies—trout, kingfishers, trout and vari-instances consist of supplementary models—and the original opening costumes.

The Vionnet opening, in general avoids black, substituting dark blue and white for town wear. The contrasting ensemble is superseded by self tone, or duotone costumes.

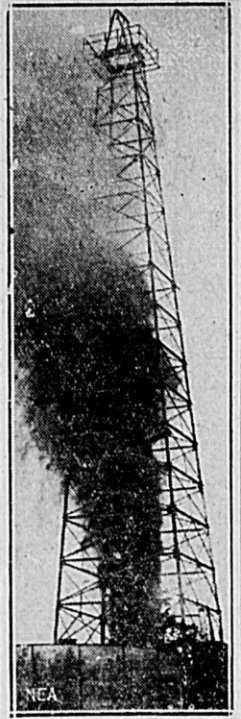

Callot again advocates embroideries especially for rather long tunics and continues black as an afternoon preference.

Redfern goes in for wool, adopting broadcloth for evening, the outstanding model being black, and worn with a half length matching coat trimmed with white pique, the dress having white flowers composing the corsage. Marthe et Renee also show wool in interesting new guises.

The Queen of Spain attended the premiere of the new Mirande-Douillet-Doucet combination. This house retains a molded silhouette usually fashioned of flat crepes which are frequently accompanied by seven-eighths woolen coat.

Both headed effects and braids are being called about from Paris. Chanel develops the draped silhouette, emphasizes separate tunics and makes a feature of pajamas, some of which have their very wide trousers split into loose panels. Dinner pajamas are regarded by all fashion authorities of paramount importance.

Wild Oil Well Tamed At Last

Suit On Border Lands Will Be Heard Dec. 11th

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 7.—A hearing in the suit of Gus Wortham of Houston and others claiming the Oklahoma strip recently awarded to Texas, was postponed until Dec. 11 by commission of the state supreme court here today.

The suit seeks to compel state land commissioner J. H. Walker, by mandamus, to give Wortham and associates title to the approximately 28,000 acres along the hundredth meridian.

Their claim to it is based upon an application filed by Wortham's father for award of the land twenty years ago. At that time it was shown on maps as a part of Oklahoma. Other persons hold Oklahoma titles to it, and some hold titles issued by the federal government in territorial days on the supposition that the hundredth meridian ran west of it. Only recently the meridian line was run establishing the elder Wortham's claim that the land was a part of Texas.

Churches

St. Francis Xavier Church November 9th, 1930. Mass at 10 a. m.

This is the Twenty-Second Sunday after Pentecost and the Gospel is taken from St. Matthew XXII, 15-21. Christ is asked whether it is lawful to give tribute to Caesar. What is related to us in the gospel of today, occurred in the later part of the life of Christ, a few days before his passion and death. The high-priests, the Scribes and Pharisees, had already decreed to put him to death, not what it might. But they dared not publicly lay hands on him for they feared the people, who were attached to him with great affection, and had only lately received him with loud hosannas and acclamations at his solemn entry into Jerusalem. They therefore, had recourse to stratagem, consulting among themselves how to ensnare Jesus in his speech. As frequently before, so now they again put to him a question which in their opinion was so captious that it would certainly ruin him, whether he answered it affirmatively or negatively. But as before, so now, our Lord defeated their artifices, so that they were obliged to depart without having accomplished their design. If we follow the teachings of Christ, we cannot be confounded
