PREPARE TO IRRIGATE

Brownwood has started work on its big water project which will supply water for both municipal and irrigation purposes in the Pecan Bayou Valley. Two large dams on the Guadalupe river above Gonzales are now under construction. This should remind those interested in the future growth and development of Eastland county and this section that there are thousands of acres of fertile land here that could be made to blossom like the rose if water for irrigating purposes were available. Also that there is sufficient rainfall if the flood waters were impounded.

METHODIST CONFERENCE NEXT WEEK

The time for the convening of the Central Texas Conference of the Methodist Church, which will meet here, is drawing near. Bishop S. H. Hay, who will preside at the conference, will arrive in Eastland late Monday to hold pre-conference meetings Tuesday. The Conference will convene Wednesday.

LET'S CONCENTRATE OUR EFFORTS

Eastland has the best, livest and most up-to-date set of merchants and other business men of any town anything like the size of Eastland, in Texas. We do believe, however, that heretofore they have been losing time and money because of the lack of sufficient co-operation among themselves.

FACTS AND FIGURES FOR TEXANS

Experiments writes William C. Edwards of a Service Information Bureau, have been going on in the Rio Grande Valley for the past two years and indicates the probability that coffee may be added to the list of valuable crops in that section and the experimenters thin another year will determine their success or failure.

A new use for cotton is being experimented with by the Texas highway commission which is using heavy cotton duck on a stretch of road as a base for asphalt; the canvas was laid upon the top of a light coat of tar on a clean gravel roadway and then sand and fine crushed stone screenings rolled on top of the cloth; careful comparisons with the cloth covered road and adjacent sections laid without the cloth will be made to determine if the cloth binder holds the surfacing material in place and prevents edges of the road from tumbling off; if the experiment is successful it means a new outlet for a large part of the cotton crop of the south.

JUSTICE OWEN ROBERTS SITS WHERE HE PLEASURES

Mr. Justice Owen Roberts of the supreme court of the United States has given Washington a thrill. He walked into that part of the senate restaurant which is open to the public. There is a section reserved for "senators and other officials." Of course, the head waiter was shocked. He asked the distinguished jurist if he did not want to retire to the aristocratic section reserved for the mighty. Justice Roberts smiled; he shook his head. As the story was written he "continued with his meal."

Like Chmn. Legge of the federal relief board during a flurry in Washington over social precedent who remarked, "rather than cause any trouble, he would, if necessary, retire to the kitchen." Mr. Justice Roberts let it go at that. The service and the food are the essentials and Mr. Justice Roberts, in his hour of leisure, goes to his big farm in Pennsylvania, dons overalls and jumper and mingles with his fellow Americans who are on his payroll. Very popular is this justice of the supreme court with the so-called plebeian souls down on his farm.

LAWS REGULATING MOTOR DRIVERS

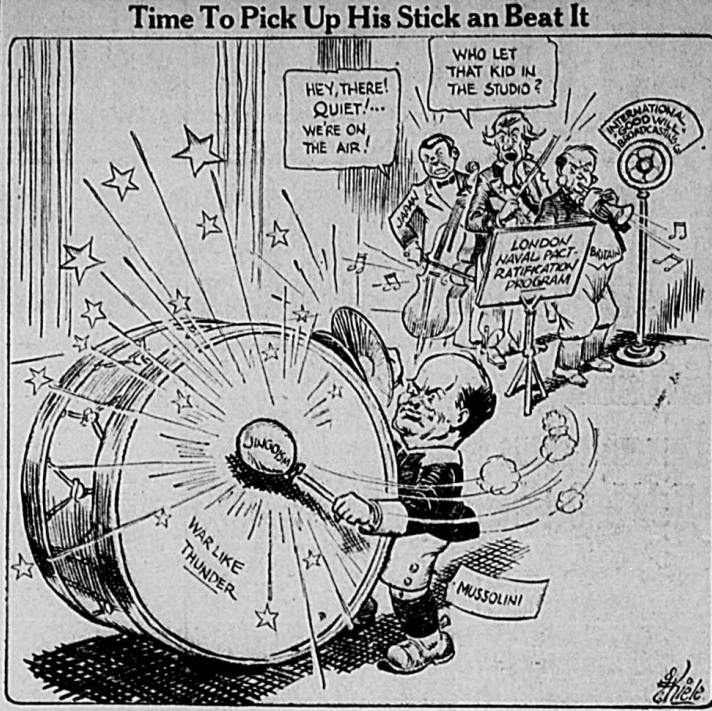

It is announced that the San Antonio Automobile league is planning a campaign to obtain from the Texas legislature an adequate driver license law and a law compelling the automobile owner, "to show financial responsibility covering accident risks."

Two bills have been prepared. These measures will be submitted to the Texas Automobile association convention at Houston for Nov. 24 and then passed on to the legislature this winter.

There is a very drastic law in Texas dealing with motorists driving on a public highway while under the influence of red liquor. Two drivers were hauled before the court at Colorado, Texas, "out in the West." The first was given one year in the pen with sentence suspended by a jury.

A prominent professional man was found guilty by a jury of driving an automobile while intoxicated and was assessed a fine of $100 and costs and 20 days in jail. It was not a merciful jury and there was no suspension favor extended.

A drunken driver should be punished. They are a menace to life and property. Jail sentences with hard labor would teach these violators of a very necessary law that mauling with the buzz saw is out of date in this commonwealth. A state drivers license would help some. Drastic enforcement of the act would work wonders.

mits that if these people would enforce the game laws it could be done more thoroughly than by a small force of wardens. But so far, the law hasn't been able to persuade these local officers to pay any attention to game law violations he says.

This army of officers ought to be another good argument in favor of cutting the number of counties to one-half or one-fourth.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Installation buying—and who doesn't know what that is?—is now going through a severe test. Various economists have predicted that the system would break down under a really serious depression and every one now seems to admit that that's just what we're having.

No one knows yet just how the installment system has fared over the country, how extensively installment sales have been affected, whether there has been an increase of credit losses on installment business and comparatively how many radios, bedroom suites, diamond rings, fur coats, two-part suits and electric washing machines have been hauled back to the store because of defaulted payments.

One finds two sets of figures bearing on the subject, neither of which yet shows how successfully the installment system and installment buyers are weathering the storm. Economists and business men will have to wait until after the first of the year for that, when the Merchandising Research division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce completes the first of its annual retail credit surveys and compares 1930 with 1929.

Two Surveys Made
The division's first semi-annual survey, covering the first six months of this year and conducted by Dr. W. C. Plummer, noted retail credit expert of the Commerce Department, showed a decline of 6.7 per cent in retail sales, but hardly any change in the percentage of total installment and charge account sales or in the percentage of goods returned. Returns of installment goods, mostly repossessions, increased slightly less than one per cent.

The other set of figures concerns automobiles, covering automobile financing—which means installment buying—for the first eight months of 1930 as compared with the first eight months of 1929. These figures are gathered by the Census Bureau from 485 automobile-financing organizations.

Final Stocks
NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The stock market today staged a moderate recovery after touching new lows in the early trading.

Pressure lightened after forced liquidation at the opening had run its course. United States Steel met support all day and did not touch its low of yesterday. Toward the close buying in steel increased and the stock ran up toward 144, where it was up 13 1/2 points net.

Other pivotal shares responded quickly to the buying. Just before the close stocks were around their highs of the day. Some profit-taking developed in the last few minutes and various issues eased away from their highs.

was Evelyn Parsons' falsity as Mitchell's anger that Celia running from the room. Significant tears coursed the cheeks and sobs shook her. After she was calm to think she knew exactly she must do.

There was a telephone in the room. Celia lifted the instrument and dialed a number. The call was answered she heard her mind and set the telephone.

After six o'clock. In another part of the apartment preparation for dinner must be going. Evelyn must be dressing and maid would be helping her. There was no sound of life, however, outside the door of Celia's room.

The girl made her preparations. She dried her eyes and tried to erase their swollen redness. Then she got out her traveling bag, opened it and tossed in the contents. She slipped on a plain dark frock and pulled a hat over her head. She glanced at the mirror. She threw the things on. Speed she counted!

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

By Blosser

HAVING PULLED THEMSELVES OUT OF THE CHILLY WATER, FRECKLES AND THE OLD HERMIT GO OVER THE SITUATION, IN THE DARKNESS OF BLACK CAVERN...

There was enough money in her purse. Celia counted it. Twenty-four dollars and 40 cents. She picked up her gloves and was ready to leave. Celia had one hand on the door knob when she stopped. Suppose her father had not gone! He and Evelyn might still be in the living room and she would have to pass the door.

She saw at once that she could not risk the encounter. It was difficult to wait, but Celia set down the traveling bag. She dropped into a chair. One foot tapped nervously. After a moment she rose, walked to the window and then sat down again. She had never known time to pass so slowly.

At seven o'clock Celia could delay no longer. If Mitchell was there he and Evelyn would be at the dinner table. As noiselessly as possible she opened the door. Light from the living room gleamed in the hallway. Celia crept gingerly along. She hesitated, saw that there was no one in the room beyond and reached the living room. It was deserted. A moment more and she had reached the door leading into the corridor.

No one had seen her! Celia was breathing rapidly as she stepped out on the street a few minutes later.

"Do you wish a cab, madam?" It was the liveried doorman who asked the question. The girl nodded. When the cab drew up she entered and sank back against the seat, grateful for the shadowed darkness. She told the driver to take her to Grand Central station. It was all very clear in the girl's mind exactly what she was to do, but now that she was on her way and the fever of excitement and anger had spent itself she felt suddenly weak. She put her handkerchief to her eyes, determined not to cry.

They reached the railway terminal. Celia paid the cab driver, picked up her bag and went inside. She walked until she found an array of telephones. There she gave the number of Barney's club and waited. A feminine voice answered. "Is Mr. Barney Shields in?" Celia asked. "What was the name, please?" "Shields. Barney Shields. I'd like to speak to him, please." "How do you spell the name, ma'am?" "S h i e l d s—Shields!" "One moment," the laconic soprano voice replied, "I'll see if he's in."

The air in the booth was stuffy. Celia's pulse was racing and she felt faint. She clung for support to the shelf on which the telephone rested.

Minutes seemed to pass before the soprano voice again answered. "I'm sorry. Mr. Shields is not here, madam. Will you leave a number?"

"He's not there?" "No, ma'am. Would you like to leave a number for him to call?" "No, thank you." Celia put down the telephone and stepped out of the booth.

She had to see Barney! That thought was uppermost in the girl's mind. She had to see Barney and tell him it had all been a mistake in the afternoon. She must apologize for what her father er had said. She could not leave and her father considered themselves superior to him. Her cheeks flushed. There were other things the young man must be made to understand.

Uncertainly the girl looked about her. The traveling bag was at her feet. She disposed of that first, leaving it at a checking stand.

Celia decided to wait half an hour and then telephone. Barney was probably out at dinner.

She made her way through the labyrinthine corridors of the station until she reached the street. Lights glared and the sidewalk was crowded. Men, women and children rushed past as though on some important mission. Celia wondered vaguely at their eagerness. Curious that all should have the same staccato tempo.

She became lost in the surge of traffic at a street intersection. By what seemed a miracle she reached the other side of the broad thoroughfare. The sidewalk was lined with a host of small shops, each with brightly lighted windows. Celia studied them as she passed.

It was the theater crowd which was sweeping her along. When she had reached Times Square she turned and retraced her steps. Neither the on-coming horde nor store windows interested her any longer.

Suddenly she saw that it was eight o'clock. She began to walk swiftly, then, realizing naively that there were telephones all about, she entered a drug store, found a booth and again called Shields' club.

The same voice answered. There was the same spelling of the name and delay before the operator reported. "Mr. Shields is not in, madam."

Celia thought rapidly. There was no number that she could leave, no way for Barney to reach her. Yet she must see him.

"Can I leave a message?" she asked. "Certainly, madam." "Will you tell Mr. Shields that Miss Mitchell telephoned and that she will call again?"

The girl at the other end of the connection repeated the message. She assured Celia it would be delivered.

It was a problem to know what to do after that. Although she had had no food the thought of eating did not occur to Celia. She wandered back to Grand Central Station, inquired about trains to Baltimore and was given a marked time table. Buses for the last train checked departed at 10:40.

Celia walked out on the street again. A blaze of electricity some distance up Lexington avenue attracted her. It was a motion picture theater.

Celia bought a ticket and went inside. An usher conducted her to a seat. The drama being unrolled was near its mid-point, quite unintelligible, but the girl felt comforted by the darkness and blessed release from noise and clangor.

She had not noticed the title of the film. Familiar faces of actors and actresses passed before her and she scarcely saw them. She remembered, though, from time to time, to glance at her watch.

When it was almost 10 o'clock Celia left the theater. She returned to the station and the booth from where she had first telephoned. It was a man's voice that answered. Again Celia asked for Barney. She tapped her heel nervously as she waited.

It came at last: "Mr. Shields is not in, madam."

"But—hasn't he been in? I called earlier and left a message. Do you know if he received it?" "One moment, ma'am."

The clerk's voice came back over the wire: "There's no message in Mr. Shields' box. What time did you say you called?" Celia told him.

"Then he should have had your (Continued on page 4)

"A REMARKABLE REVELATION"

Says
HON. JAMES FRANCIS BURKE

General Counsel of the National Republican Committee
Congressman 1905-1915. Government Director of War Savings during World War.

"Americans love to do their own thinking—But they welcome facts from others. You are wise in letting every smoker know that you employ the modern Ultra Violet Ray principle in 'Toasting LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos. This 'extra secret process' is a remarkable revelation."

James Francis Burke

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray. LUCKY STRIKE—the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating!

"It's toasted"

Your Throat Protection—against irritation—against cough

Consistent with its policy of laying the facts before the public, The American Tobacco Company has invited Mr. James F. Burke to review the reports of the distinguished men who have witnessed LUCKY STRIKE'S famous Toasting Process. The statement of Mr. Burke appears on this page.

message. Do you care to leave any further word?"
"No, thank you."

She shut her eyes as she turned away from the telephone. There was nothing more that she could do! Suddenly Celia Mitchell felt herself a little girl again, frightened, abused and greatly in need of comforting. She longed for protecting arms about her and a shoulder on which she could rest her head and weep out her misery. She wanted the one person who always understood—her mother.

She blinked the tears back. Her eyes sought the big station clock and the nearby man to the checking stand to get her bag. There was a line waiting before the ticket window, but she took her place and tried to master her impatience.

"You have two minutes to make it," the salesman said crisply as he handed over the slip of paste-board.

A red-capped porter offered assistance. He led off on a run and Celia followed. Breathless she swung into the last remaining bus seat. With reckless gratitude she tossed a dollar bill to the porter as the driver set his engine throbbing.

Celia leaned back and closed her eyes. When it was time to transfer from bus to train she realized that her ticket was for the day coach. The conductor offered to see if she could transfer to a Pullman. After 10 minutes he returned.

"Sorry, Miss. Everything's taken. It's possible there'll be a cancellation."

Celia thanked him and settled back against the dusty car seat. How very tired she was! Her eyes closed. Several times she stirred, frowned at the lights and twisted into greater comfort. She slept soundly. Then she heard the conductor trying to rouse her.

"This is Baltimore!" he said.

Celia rubbed her eyes, sat up and gathered together her possessions. It was gray morning when she stepped out on the Mount Royal platform and hailed a cab. A tremendous sense of excitement stirred her as she rode through the familiar streets.

They reached her former home. Celia ran up the steps. Beaming, breathless, she rapped on the door of the third-floor apartment. She rapped a second time.

There was no answer.

Land Office Has Large Receipts For Last Two Years

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 6.—The state land office had total receipts of $18,799,240 for the two fiscal years ending Sept. 1, state land commissioner J. H. Walker says in his biennial report filed with Governor Dan Moody.

Oil and gas royalties totaled $6,264,002. Of this $3,876,161 was on university land and $2,151,258 on school land. The balance was on river bed and submerged coast land. Walker advises against lease of prison lands at this time. No survey of the Oklahoma strip, recently awarded to Texas has been made, he reports because the legislature made no appropriation for it after ordering the survey.

Maple Case Is Puzzling The Appeals Court

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 6.—Whether a man who asks to be sentenced to death or his attorney who seeks being considered by the court of criminal appeals here. The study must be short for unless the court acts, the man, Jess J. Maple, will be executed Nov. 18.

"Does the statute not say in a capital case that a defendant must be represented by counsel?" Chief Justice W. C. Morrow asked while the case was argued yesterday. He asked authorities on whether this representation must extend to an appeal.

Maple wrote the trial judge at Houston requesting that he have no new trial but be sentenced. The court accommodated him. His attorney appealed and asks an order against execution.

Doctor's 3 RULES Big Help to Bowels

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning-out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath, and get rid of those bilious headaches. A little Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from all that waste matter that makes the whole system sluggish. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better. You'll like the way Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin tastes. The way it works will delight you. Big bottles—all drug-stores.

Death Toll In Mine Disaster Now Stands at 81

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 6.—C. C. Cook, vice president of the Sunday Creek Coal Company, advised the United Press today that 81 recovered bodies from the wrecked No. 6 mine at Millfield, composed the casualty list in yesterday's explosion.

Cook said all the bodies had been brought to the surface, the mine thoroughly searched and no other victims found.

In addition to the dead, 18 were taken to the Athens hospital and two others were being cared for in the vicinity of the mine, Cook said. He explained early reports which he had made as to a greater death list by the fact that many of the workers who were thought to have been entombed delayed in checking into company headquarters. These workers have been accounted for, he said.

What Others—

 centage of 1,000.

Then on Tuesday, just one week from today, the historic battle that Cisco and Ranger stage each Anniversary Day will be waged at Chestley field, which as you know is the home gridiron of the Lobos. The Gold and Black, set with the grim determination of winning all the rest of the games on their schedule, will enter the conflict against Ranger in a fighting frame of mind that bodes ill for the Bulldog prospects. Cisco made a comeback last week to defeat the San Angelo Bobcats—who always play a super game against Cisco and were further inspired by the presence of their dads on the sidelines at the cemetery gridiron. By next Tuesday, the Lobos will be functioning with the deadly smoothness that characterized Chapman's clan before the district committee flung a monkey-wrench into the machine.

Blair Cherry will see that game. He has seen lots of Ranger-Cisco games. This time however he will be there, not with the burdens of being the coach of one of the contending teams but as a spectator. The fact that he chose this game to attend is an indication that he thinks the winner stands a good chance of being the club his District No. 1 champions will meet.

(Benny Butler in Cisco News.)
 In three years the Cisco Lobos have not been able to defeat the San Angelo Bobcats by more than a one-point margin. Two years ago, with a team intact and powerful, the Lobos were lucky to come off with a tie in their contest with the lowly Bobcats on the Concho field. The score after that memorable conflict was 13 and 13 and it furnished most of the impetus for the smashing defeat which the Lobos inflicted upon the Breckenridge Buckaroos. Last year on the home field, with the team intact again, the Lobos pounded out a one-touchdown victory over the scrapping Concho felines.

Saturday with a team crippled with the loss of two stars and weakened by injuries to several of its regulars, the Lobos repeated their performance of last year. Beaten with adversity they set their teeth in its face, staved off defeat at the hands of a furious clan which had called upon the tradition of 1928 and the inspiration of an event that has always spurred the cats to superhuman fight, and today Cisco team has passed the hump and on the way to redemption. The impregnable spirit with which the Lobos rallied within the shadows of their goal when the Bobcat phalanx was battering at the gate was the most promising feature of the contest from the local standpoint, the Lobo FIGHT is not a thing of the past. It was the most evident commodity on the field Saturday.

That the Cisco eleven, its record marred by one defeat, its ranks depleted, was able to duplicate the performance of the team of last year, is something promising for the rest of the season. The Bobcats had the advantage of having been rated the underdogs. They had the prestige of playing at home and they had the inspiration of "Dad's Day" which never fails to stir the team to the highest fighting pitch. The Lobos who went to San Angelo Saturday knew that the publicity that had been given their power and might was undeserved; they knew that they had a fight on their hands and they recognized the eminent possibility of defeat and its consequences. They were a grim, determined bunch and today they loom again very much a threat in this man's Oil Belt chase.

FAMILY MENU

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

SOME varieties of cake will keep moist until the last crumb disappears, but others, particularly sponge cakes and plain white cakes, become dry and uninteresting the second day after they are baked.

There are many really delicious desserts that can be made with stale cake if the cook uses a little ingenuity. A light cake which is very dry can be crumbled, soaked in milk until soft and then combined with eggs to make a very acceptable pudding.

Plain cake which is not dry enough for crumbing, but has lost its freshness, can be cut in pieces for serving and steamed until hot and moist.

Mock Topsy Pudding

Cut sponge cake in thin narrow slices and spread with jam or preserves. Peach or apricot is very good. Arrange in a deep dish and pour over two cups of thin boiled custard. Let stand several hours until the cake absorbs the custard and serve cold with whipped cream. The custard should be slightly sweetened, since the cake and jam are both sweet.

Cake Crumb Pudding

Two cups cake crumbs, 1 egg, milk, jelly, 2 tablespoons sugar. Add milk to crumbs and let stand, covered until milk is absorbed. The amount of milk needed will depend on the staleness of the crumbs, but it takes about 2 cups. Add yolk of egg and beat well. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm to the touch, about 30 minutes. Remove from oven and let cool. Spread with jelly and cover with white of egg beaten until stiff with sugar. Return to oven for eight minutes to puff and color meringue.

Butterscotch sauce is a delicious sauce to serve over steamed cake.

Butterscotch Sauce

One cup "standard" cream, 1 cup light brown sugar, 1 cup medium corn syrup, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla.
 Mix cream, sugar and syrup, stirring until perfectly blended. Cook in double boiler over boiling water for one hour. Remove from heat and beat in butter and vanilla. Pour over pieces of cake and garnish with a bit of whipped cream if convenient.

A. F. Murray, traveling passenger agent for the T. & P. was here today.
 Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Black of Cisco spent Wednesday here.

How Old Are You?

This is The 48 Date I'm

My Mind Is Keen—My Skin Clear—Of Petty Ills Have No Fear

No doubt about it—I am 48 never felt better in my life—like 30 and you can take my word for it—it's the Little Daily Dose of Kruschen that Does It.
 Once I was fat and forty-headed a plenty—My liver sluggish and my bowels inert I searched for a real remedy by good fortune I found it in Kruschen.

Pat isn't healthy—so Physicists and I want to say to world full of fat people—the Kruschen Method of losing it safe, sure and sensible—just eat sweets—pies, pastries and cream for a month—go light potatoes, rice, butter, cream sugar—and don't forget to one half a teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning. I wish I could induce every weight person on earth to try this splendid method—it surely does cost but a little—let's see bottle lasts 4 weeks and can be bought at Eastland Drug Co. or drug store in the world—Get Kruschen Thin—Feel younger.
