The Future of Eastland and the County

An Editorial
Eastland county farmers must have a money crop—that is they must have a crop from which they can realize cash from once or twice annually. Heretofore cotton has provided an annual money crop, but anyone well informed on conditions in Eastland county today will agree that cotton, so far as Eastland county farmers are concerned, is not a paying crop. The farmer must therefore have something else as a money crop.

At this time the sheep and goat industry, it would seem, offers the most for the least investment. The county as a whole is admirably adapted for the raising of sheep and goats, the cost of fencing, providing shelter and securing of the goats and sheep themselves is very small. Good grade Angora goats may be purchased at $3 each, goat-proof fences erected at from $60 to $80 per mile and sheds, necessary for their protection in the winter, may be built at comparatively small cost.

When it is understood that a nanny may be sheared in the spring, when she will yield 90 cents worth of mohair hair at present prices; that she will bring a kid, which will shear 80 cents worth of mohair in the fall, and the nanny again shear 90 cents worth of mohair in the spring, making a total of $2.60 worth of mohair for which there is always a ready cash market, and that you still have the nanny, worth as much as she was to start, and a kid worth $2, one can readily see what great possibilities there are for Eastland county farmers in the goat industry.

Farmers in this county must do something for themselves. There is no help coming to them from the federal government. Some of the business men of Eastland have interested themselves to the extent of making investigations as to the practicability of stocking Eastland county farms with goats and sheep, they have placed their stamp of approval upon the movement and now are asking the co-operation of the farmers themselves in further advancing the movement. They ask that each and every farm owner in the county express his opinion, either through the columns of this newspaper or some other newspaper in the county, as to the value of the goat and sheep industry to the farmers of this county. If they have had previous experience with sheep and goats, give those who are studying the problem, the benefit of such experience.

Sparks' petition alleges that he owns a farm of 190 acres through which the defendant's railroad runs diagonally; that the railroad dump is so constructed that fluids drain off it onto his land; that in Dec. 1928 the railroad turned over two tank cars, one loaded with crude oil and one with coal oil, on the right-of-way. BEGIN HERE TODAY

Adventure enters the life of Celia Mitchell, 17, when she learns that her father has supposed dead and she is now a widow. She leaves her home in Baltimore and goes to a home in New York with her father, John Mitchell, and her eccentric grandmother.

Barney Rogers, her mother's friend, is now a widow. Barney is a young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl and is leaving Baltimore. Celia is to be loyal to her love.

Celia is lonely in her new home. She asks Evelyn Parsons, a girl who is coming to live with the young people. Mrs. Parsons tells Celia a means to win her affections and agrees to invite the girl to her long home for a week-end. Today, Mrs. Parsons, in a moment of temptation, is attentive to Mitchell joins the house on Sunday.

Mrs. Parsons, seeing the father's daughter together, becomes jealous. She tells Mitchell that she is missing a girl who is like Celia, but the scheme is successful. It is arranged for Celia to continue her visit for several days. She goes to her room and is awakened by a knock at the door.

GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXII

Evelyn Parsons entered the room. She wore a fluttering turquoise dress. "Hello, my dear! I didn't think you were asleep—I wouldn't have woken you."

Celia propped herself up on one elbow and rubbed her eyes. "What's happened?"

"Nothing. I just dropped off. Has anything happened?"

"No, I only came in for a bed. Shut your eyes again and go to sleep."

"I'm not going. I'm awake. You look lovely in that blue."

Mrs. Parsons wrapped the fragment about her and sat on the opposite side of Celia.

"Have a good time this evening," she asked carelessly.

"Yes, I did. And I enjoyed the afternoon, too. I'm so grateful for your tennis player, isn't it good at all sports?" Mrs. Parsons agreed, "except the rather one of attracting the attention of a certain lady who had more dancing than she knew what to do with."

"Mrs. Parsons—"

"Need to blush. I saw it all. And why not? All men like you, Celia. I must have been often. You'll make all the girls jealous."

"Was ever so popular on the street," Evelyn said. "My dear, I was a woman and girl who had dogged his footsteps. He paid the slightest attention of them. I guess that's why he didn't help but notice how attractive he was from the minute he saw you. Of course, he's that dark, that usually does attract—"

"Oh, but you're mistaken, Mrs. Parsons. He was just being polite to me. And anyhow I only danced with him once."

Celia said these things because she wanted to hear Mrs. Parsons deny them. Perhaps if Evelyn thought perhaps had been impressed, it might be true.

"Only once? Why, that's impossible. I know he came to me half a dozen times this evening asking where he could find you. Celia Mitchell, I do believe you've been coquetting!"

"I couldn't," she said. "I wouldn't know how to."

"Tell that to someone else, my dear! Someone who's younger than Evelyn Parsons. Well, I only hope you won't be too hard on the smitten creature. Tell me—do you like these young men as well as the ones you knew in Baltimore?"

"Oh, there weren't any—I mean—"

"No young men in Baltimore? Nonsense. You know you can trust me, Celia. Who's the one lad in your heart?"

"There isn't—that is, we—"

"What's his name?"

Celia forgot her caution.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—You hardly ever see them any more, but they are still more than 535,000 silver dollars in existence.

A suggestion of a new silver dollar by Senator L. Odde of Nevada, who is interested in the stricken currency, gives rise to the question of what became of the old silver dollars.

One might suspect, the pound the big silver dollar so heavy and that they produced the silver certificate or paper dollar bill.

He has proposed a silver dollar much larger than the half-dollar and a new dollar nearer to the size of present quarter, with the mint quarter left unchanged.

It believes that no one would be envying such a silver dollar around any more than they the occasional half dollars in pockets. Paper dollars are in circulation at a cost of 2 per cent a year, whereas from abrasion of silver is infinitesimal. And of course purporting of a silver dollar would be a great boon for the silvers of the far west.

Some Lost, Some Saved

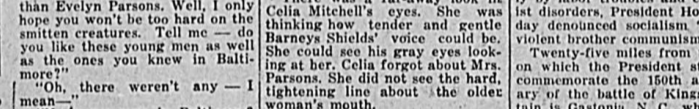

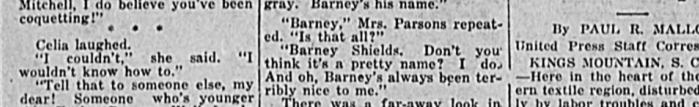

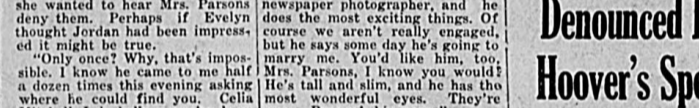

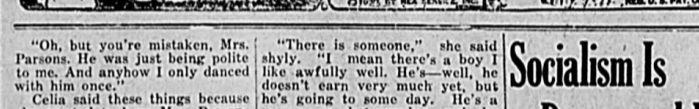

The treasury says there are 600 of the large silver dollar sometimes called "cartons"—outstanding. Of course they are not in circulation, but they have rolled down rivers and otherwise out of circulation. Many are kept in safes.

Others are hidden in old under boards in attics, and by benighted persons are held to the idea that silver is much more valuable than paper money.

The treasury holds 495,000,000

MOM'N POP

"There is someone," she said shyly. "I mean there's a boy I like awfully well. He doesn't earn very much yet, but he's going to some day. He's a newspaper photographer, and he does the most exciting things. Of course we aren't really engaged, but he says some day he's going to marry me. You'd like him, wouldn't you?"

Mrs. Parsons, I know you would? He's tall and slim, and he has the most wonderful eyes. They're gray. Barney's his name."

"Barney," Mrs. Parsons repeated. "Barney Shields. Don't you think it's a pretty name? I do. And oh, Barney's always been terribly nice to me."

There was a far-away look in Celia Mitchell's eyes. She was thinking how tender and gentle Barney's shielded voice could be. She could see his gray eyes looking at her. Celia forgot about Mrs. Parsons. She did not see the hard, tightening line about the older woman's mouth.

"Did your mother approve of this engagement?" Evelyn asked.

"But we really aren't engaged! We couldn't be. You see, Barney said it wouldn't be right because he hasn't enough money, and he didn't want me to give up coming to New York and everything. Of course mother likes him, but she doesn't know he said anything to me about getting married. I thought it would only worry her."

"But do you care for him a lot?"

Celia nodded her head. It was comforting to have someone to whom she could talk in this confidential way. Mrs. Parsons seemed so understanding.

"I suppose," Evelyn went on carefully, "you miss your mother a great deal?"

"The girl's face sobered.

"Lots," she agreed.

"Does she ever come to New York?"

"Oh, no. She couldn't do that. You see, mother works. She does sewing for Margot's shop. It's a very nice place. She's worked there for years and years."

Mrs. Parsons' brows raised expressively.

"Tonight," Celia went on impulsively, "my father said something awfully nice. He said I reminded him of mother when she was a girl. Wasn't that sweet?"

With the light behind Evelyn Parsons' head and her face in shadow, the girl could not see the angry flare which crossed the woman's face. Celia would have been amazed if she could have caught the cruel glint in Evelyn's blue eyes.

A moment passed. Then Mrs. Parsons said, rising, "That was charming. But it is dreadful of me to keep you awake like this. Forgive me. I'll slip along, and in the morning we can talk to our hearts' content. Good night, dear Celia!"

"Goodnight."

Mrs. Parsons closed the door behind her. Celia extinguished the bed lamp and in 10 minutes she was asleep again.

In the morning they had breakfast at a table set on the shady side of the porch. It was a glorious day, cool but bright with sunshine. There was a bird bath at the left and throughout the meal a chorus of tiny songsters kept up a cheerful serenade.

Celia could scarcely finish her muffins for constantly cooing Larchwood. She was looking cool and dainty herself in her sleeveless white frock. Mrs. Parsons, pouring the coffee, seemed pleased at Celia's enthusiasm. There was no sign this morning of the

Socialism Is Denounced In Hoover's Speech

By PAUL R. MALLON
United Press Staff Correspondent

KINGS MOUNTAIN, S. C., Oct. 7—Here in the heart of the Southern textile region, disturbed recently by labor troubles and communist disorders, President Hoover today denounced socialism "and its violent brother communism."

Twenty-five miles from the spot on which the President stood to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the battle of Kings Mountain is Gastonia, N. C., where two years were killed in labor trouble last year. A little further away is Marion, where seven strikers were murdered and 24 wounded. Only last week at Danville, Va., in this same mountain industrial region a cotton mill strike occurred.

Mr. Hoover championed what he called "the spirit of America," its ideals and its constitution, which he assured the large crowd gathered on this revolutionary battleground, had brought more happiness to its citizens than any government in the history of the world.

"We must keep corruptive influences from the nation and its ideals as we would keep them from our homes," he said.

"Socialism or its violent brother, Bolshevism, would compel all the runners to end the race equally; it would hold the swiftest to the speed of the most backward. Anarchy would provide neither training nor empire. Despotism or class government picks those who run and also those who win.

Halting the spirit of the revolutionary heroes who defied the British on these mountain plains in their fight for freedom, and recommending that the American citizenry fight on for those principles, the executive continued.

"Crime and disobedience are the very incarnation of destruction to a system whose basis is law. Both pacifism and militarism court danger from abroad, the one by promoting weakness, the other by promoting arrogance. Failure of many of our citizens to express their opinions at the ballot box is at once their abandonment of the whole basis of self-government. Manipulation of the ballot is a denial of government by the people. Corruption or even sure of moral perceptions in public office doles the spirit of America. Mere destructive criticism destroys leadership and substitutes weakness.

"Despite the misrepresentations of democracy, there are today more chances for young men to rise, and for young women too, than there were thirty years ago.

"We shall not have full quality until we have attained that ultimate goal of every right thinking citizen—the abolition of poverty of mind and home.

The speech was the concluding address in a series of four made by Mr. Hoover in the past five days as his indirect part in the republican congressional campaign. silver dollars, of which all but about 6,000,000 are kept in the treasury here and the various mints or assay offices to cover nearly 490,000,000 silver certificates outstanding.

The 6,000,000 silver dollars are on call if anyone wants them. The treasury would be glad to get them into circulation, but it can only do so when they are called for by the banks. And the demand is very slight.

The last silver dollars coined were those of 1928. Way back in 1904, however, such coinage had ceased through the repeal of the Sherman Act, but there was still a great supply stored in the treasury.

In 1918, Congress passed the Pittman Act, authorizing the secretary of the treasury to change treasury into bullion to sell to Great Britain, which badly needed bullion for the redemption of the rupee in India.

Provides for Replacement

The act also provided for replacement of the money by purchase of American silver at a dollar an ounce. Britain bought 270,000,000 dollars, which the treasury replaced as specified, coining "cartwheels" from 1921 to 1925.

Senator Odde's proposed reduction of the size of the silver dollar would correspond with the declined purchasing power of silver. A 1930 silver dollar, he figures, should be about 60 per cent as large as the 1913 silver dollar in order to have it represent an equivalent purchasing power.

In 1918 and 1919, silver was worth more than $1 an ounce on the open market, reaching $1.15 in the former year. But last year, the price declined to 53.3 cents, which was 4.9 cents lower than

Galveston Exports Show Increase, Cotton Lower

By UNITED PRESS
GALVESTON, Tex., Oct. 7.—Export movement through Port Galveston during September showed increases in wheat, flour, metals, sulphur and other commodities, according to Secretary P. A. Devine of the Cotton Exchange Maritime committee.

The biggest gain was in wheat movement, 3,710,235 bushels moving, an increase of 1,435,133 bushels over last year. Flour export was 25,567,187 pounds against 21,416,699 for 1929, with metal movement totaling 13,297,765 for this year, against 8,893,743 for 1929. An increase of more than 8,000,000 pounds of sulphur was shown. The totals were $9,472,904 for 1930, with 72,437,736 last year.

Cotton movement was considerably lower this year than last, with the total for 1930 being 82,065 square bales, as against 164,065 last year.

GEN. SAMUEL McROBERTS
Chairman of the Board, Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust Company

Director, Armour & Co., American Sugar Refining Co., National Surety Co., Kansas City-Southern Railway; Brig. General, A. E. F.

"Making friends and holding them, by a friendly up-to-date usefulness, is the secret of success in business. This axiom has been the guiding force in the progress of the Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust Company. And it is obviously the guiding force in your business—as evidenced by your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of the LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos."

Cat Is Wary After Being Run Over

GENEVA, O., Oct. 7.—Geneva boasts a six-toed cat, veteran of two automobile accidents, who even keeps a wary eye on things while he sleeps. He's been run over twice in convincing fashion. The habit of sleeping with one eye open, neighbors state, was acquired following Richard's second tilt with an automobile.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—Joe McCarthy may or may not sign with the New York Yankees as reported, but one thing was certain today—he will not manage the Boston Red Sox in 1931.

Bob Quinn, president of the Boston American League baseball club, made that clear in a statement issued here last night in which he said that "under no circumstances will the Boston Red Sox consider McCarthy for manager."

McCarthy recently was replaced by Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Training Camp Tabs AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 8—"What manner of men are the Longhorns?" was the pertinent question in the minds of Steer supporters today, as memories of last Saturday's wallowing in the mud with the Texas team were fresh in the minds of the precision displayed in disposing of an earlier formidable Texas School of Mines machine.

Crippled as they are with Gattoura ineligible, the clash with the Howard Payne Yellow Jackets is regarded as no set-up. In the remaining few days of this week, Coach Littlefield must once more co-ordinate his man-power. One unusually bright spot in the picture is Dexter Shelley, whose blocking and punting last Saturday was as near faultless as anything the Longhorn fans have seen this season.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Oct. 8.—The Arkansas Razorbacks were to take their last training session on the home gridiron today before leaving Thursday for the Horned Frog camp at Fort Worth. On the T. C. U. gridiron Saturday afternoon the referee's whistle will formally announce the start of the 1930 conference battle.

Erwin, tackle, and Clark, guard, were still on the bench today nursing injuries carried away from the Tulsa game. It was likewise doubtful today if Holmes, ace quarterback, would enter Saturday's fray. Holmes' shoulder injuries have taken a slight turn for the worse, it was feared.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 8.—The Horned Frogs today were grimly determined to make the dedicatory battle of their new grid arena with the University of Arkansas a victory. Reports which drifted down into Texas that Arkansas had suffered defeat last Saturday were by no means cheering to Texas conference teams.

Relying on straight football with the usual punges, the Razorbacks showed up well against the superior Tulsans. What may happen when the Porkers pull their own little tricks is a matter of speculation among the Texas Christians.

Odds Favor A's For Series But Many Back Cards

By H. ALLEN SMITH United Press Staff Correspondent PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 8.—Pledged to do or die for dear old St. Louis, for dear old Philadelphia, and for the dear old gate receipts, which should easily appropriate $150,000, the Cardinals and the Athletics will meet at Shire Park today to decide a great number of wagers.

Many of the gaming men who have laid money on today's contest would love to see McGillicuddy's class polish things off for the year. At market opening in Independence Square this morning the boys were putting down three to one that the A's will ultimately achieve victory. But as to the much discussed and equally moot question of today's contest, the odds were somewhat narrower.

HOKY AND SLIDES Henry L. Farrell

From Out of the West If one cares to believe the rumors circulating thick and fast on the Pacific coast, no less than two dozen Coast League teams will pack clean laundry and make trips southward with major league teams in 1931. Tom Laird, San Francisco News sports editor, declares that the cream of the western circuit's talent will be pouring over the mountains into baseball's fastest company.

The draft list recently made public carried the names of only two Coast League players. They were Earl Sheely, Frisco Seals first baseman and former White Sox and Pirate player, and Frank Sigafoos, Los Angeles infielder. Sheely will go to the Boston Braves and Sigafoos becomes the property of Cincinnati.

The Seals fully expected to lose Sheely or Jimmy Zinn, their best pitcher, who couldn't make the grade two seasons ago with Cleveland.

If Price Is Right OAKLAND has five regulars they would gladly dispose of—providing the price is right. Incidentally, prices are seldom accepted by Coast League magnates unless they run into six figures. The Oaks who may come east are Ernie Lombardi, regarded as the best catcher out there since Mickey Cochrane graduated; Buzz Arlett, an outfielder; Johnny Vergez, an infielder, and Pete Daglia and Howard Craghead, pitchers.

Besides Sigafoos, drafted by the Reds, Los Angeles may find buyers for Ed Baecht, pitcher, and Johnny Moore and Wes Schumacher, outfielders. The latter was one of the coast's greatest football players a few years ago with Oregon State College.

Sacramento magnates are mourning the loss of Meryl Hoag and Fay Thomas, but they also may be seen counting big dough given them by the Yankees and Indians. Hoag was counted the best prospect in the league this season, while Thomas was at least the best pitcher on the Senator roster. Seattle was woefully weak as a team, but the Indian owners expect to realize a tidy amount from

There being no clearing house for World Series bets, it is difficult to determine just how the odds really stand. But we can take, just as an example, the two handsomely-appointed gentlemen from Broadway, New York, who came down last night in a Pullman car by the name of Guldags (Co.) They were observed in heated discussion over the relative merits of the two teams.

One of them, a party wearing a green suit laid out $1,000 in legal tender on his plump knee, accompanying his grandiloquent gesture with the assertion that he would lay it all, at even money, on the Cards to win game number six.

This spirited betting has served as an added stimulant to the thing called public spirit and civic enthusiasm in Philadelphia. People who paid little or no attention to the two games here last week were today rewarding ticket speculators with as much as $25 for a single seat at the park. The idea that baseball has been ruined by radio, the American Legion convention and miniature golf, has been definitely abandoned.

One problem confronting the park management and the general public lies in the possibility of a seventh game. Tickets for such a contest, which undoubtedly would be in demand, cannot be offered for sale until such a contest is assured.

Marriages Show Decline Since Three Day Law

By GORDON K. SHEARER United Press Staff Correspondent AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 7.—When the Texas legislators enacted the law requiring three days notice of marriage intentions, they didn't realize how bashful Texas swains are. Results show that they cut down the marriages more than 17 per cent.

How many evaded the publication by going into other states, is not revealed but official figures issued by the U. S. Department of Commerce disclose that the weddings performed in Texas dropped off 13,167 during 1929, compared with 1928. The law requiring three days notice became effective June 12, 1929 so the decrease represents little more than half a year.

Despite the law there were 65,173 marriages. Required publicity for divorcees might be tried in an effort to reduce them. For while marriages were decreased under the publicity law, divorces rose. There were 18,386 granted in 1929 compared with 18,073 the preceding year. The rapid gain of divorce in proportion to marriage is shown by comparison with 1916. In that year there were 54,103 marriages and only 8,534 divorces.

Viewed on the basis of comparative population, the marriage record still shows a disproportionate decrease. Only 11 persons out of each thousand married in 1929. In the preceding year the figure was 13.5 per thousand. Divorcees retained an almost equal proportion to population. In 1928 it was 3.21 per thousand and in 1929 it was 3.20.

Harris county led in marriages with 4,291 and Dallas county led in divorces with 2,964. Tarrant county showed a remarkable falling off in weddings dropping to 1,786 from 2,583 the preceding year. Its divorces dropped from 1,165 to 1,104.

Borden county had but one marriage in the year. It also had one divorce.

When Lost In Mountains "Sit Down" Is Advice

FRESNO, Cal., Oct. 7.—When lost in the mountains, the best way to find yourself is to start by sitting down.

That is the advice of U. S. Forest Service rangers. They say: Sit down and think it over, trying calmly to place yourself.

Next, start traveling. Walk all night, downhill. Never run. Don't yell.

If caught by night, fog or storm stop at once and make camp. Build a fire and gather plenty of fuel. If without a blanket, scoop out a hole, build a fire in it, and cover the coals with six inches of dirt, and sleep on that. A lost boy spent three nights safely in southern California mountains this year by following these rules, the rangers say.

Sabinal—64 cars of farm products were shipped from this district during August.

Man Offered Strange

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7.—A man offered to court the intimacy of a wife and aid him in securing a divorce—have been made to offer Ralls in response to his "personal ad" to do "anything within the law, regardless of cost."

"Another offer," Ralls said, "was a job as gunman-body for a local bootlegger."

"Capping the climax," he continued, "was from a man who offered me $3000 to be his wife."

Ralls, who is out of work, created he would do anything "bet his life with anyone on 'square' for that sum. He has the money, he says, or he is and to go into business.

Modern Road Construction Shown By Models At International Congress

Six new models showing the stages of construction and the machinery used in building different types of modern highway surfacing are on display in the Washington Auditorium, Washington, D. C., by the Bureau of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture, as part of its extensive exhibit for the delegates to the Sixth International Road Congress held in Washington October 6-11. The exhibit is open to the public.

In addition to the road models, there is a display of the results of the bureau's research for the past 10 years into the behavior of sub-grade soils, which play an important part in the design and construction of highways. Statistical charts show the highway mileage of the country, yearly income and expenditure, and other interesting facts.

Two models showing the construction of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway at two important locations have been moved from the rotunda of the Capitol to the auditorium to form a part of the exhibit.

The six types of surfacings represented by the road models are concrete, bituminous concrete, mixed bituminous concrete, bituminous macadam, the penetration method, and crushed rock or gravel. Each model is 4 feet by 6 feet in size, and the ribbon of road on each is divided into sections, showing the stages of construction from the preparation of the subgrade to the final paving or surfacing. Small models of the road machinery used in the construction of each type of road and of each stage are placed at proper locations.

The models show how the grades and curves of the roads are adjusted to the topography. Culverts for drainage are built into some of the roads, and others are equipped with guard rails.

The subgrade soil display explains by pictures, legends, and charts the identification of different soils, operations in the field and the laboratory for testing their various properties, and their classification by a rating scale according to the qualities they possess.

The Mount Vernon Memorial Highway models show the design of the road and the planning at two locations. The highway will be about 13 1/2 miles long and will follow the Virginia shore of the Potomac River from a point on Columbia Island south of Arlington Memorial Bridge to Mount Vernon. It is being constructed under the direct supervision of the Bureau of Public Roads, with Congressional authority and appropriation.

Construction work was started in September, 1929, and the road will be open for travel in time for the bicentennial celebration of the birth of George Washington in February, 1932.

The model of the approach area at Mount Vernon shows how the land contours have been preserved in the highway design. A wide circle permits the arrival and departure of cars and busses without confusion. Ample parking space for hundreds of cars has been screened from the highway and the estate by trees and shrubbery so as to avoid entirely the cluttered appearance usually associated with large groups of parked vehicles.

The grade separation structure to be built south of the highway will carry the Alexandria road over the Memorial Highway, which at this point will have two roadways, each 40 feet wide, separated by a parkway.

The separation structure has four ramps built on long, easy curves, which will make possible a continuous and safe flow of traffic between the roadways at the two levels. At no point will one traffic lane cross another.

Twenty Fossils Of Unknown Animals Are Discovered

PEIPING, China, Oct. 7.—Discovery of fossils of twenty animals unknown to science, and believed to be some 30,000,000 years old, was reported by Prof. Walter Granger, chief paleontologist of the Roy Chapman Andrews expedition, who returned here today from Magnolia.

The expedition has irrefutably demonstrated the theory that life had its origin in Central Asia, Prof. Granger said. The expedition was successful in obtaining fossils of a hundred extinct species, including dinosaurs, elephants and mammoths. Huge fossil deposits were left untouched when blizzards forced the expedition to discontinue its work for the winter. It is hoped to resume the work next spring.

Prof. Granger is attached to the American museum of natural history.

Girl On Stand To Defend Killer Of Child's Father

ALTUS, Okla., Oct. 8.—An eighteen year old girl mother took the witness stand today to defend her brother against charges of slaying the father of her infant child.

Charlie Martin, married and father of five children, was slain on the streets of Duke, near here, last June. A few weeks later a child was born to Leona Andrews, who claimed at the time to be married to Elmer Brown, alias Lloyd More, who is alleged to have married her at the insistence of Martin.

Ira Andrews, the girl's brother, was arrested and charged with murder after witnesses testified they saw him shoot Martin during a quarrel on the street. He pleaded self defense, contending Martin reached for a gun before he shot him.

Placing her baby in the arms of her sister, Leona went to the witness stand yesterday to tell of the events leading to the tragedy. She said she had been friendly with Martin for two years before the shooting.

"I knew he was married but he said I was the only one he loved. He promised to take me to California, where we could get divorced and marry, but we got no further than Duke where he left me."

"I made him promise not to harm Charlie," she said. "The next time I knew about it, Charlie was dead."

Unused Crane Is Dynamited

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 7.—A dynamite explosion which was set off last night under an unused crane

Dog Brings Aid To Injured Master

MODESTO, Cal., Oct. 7.—Another sample of the reasoning powers of dogs was related here by J. M. Snodgrass, Coast Range mountains settler, who credits the saving of his life to Jerry, his big shepherd dog.

Snodgrass was bucked off his horse and into a ravine 20 miles from the nearest town. He was injured internally and was unable to walk.

He called Jerry to him. The cat-tleman raked pencil and paper, and so he tied a handkerchief to the dog's collar and told him to go home.

Snodgrass said Jerry streaked away toward the ranch. Mrs. Snodgrass said the dog came running, barking and whining excitedly.

She saw the handkerchief, and, with a brother-in-law, followed the dog back to his master.

Camel's mildness starts in the sun-drenched fields where the tobaccos grow. Only the choicest of the golden Turkish and mellow Domestic leaves are selected for Camels. Through every step of their cure and manufacture the delicate, sun-ripe fragrance of these tobaccos is scientifically preserved. And so Camels come to you mild and delightful—not flat and flavorless. Syng with the crowd to Camels. Learn the happy difference between true mildness and insipid flatness. Smoke without fear of throat-discomfort or after-taste—just for pleasure! CAMELS Easy to smoke

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 8.—Swept from the horse he was riding by high water in the Trinity river bottom seven miles west of here, John King, 21, was drowned on his father's dairy farm last night.

King was driving cattle from the area of the spreading waters when his horse went into a channel 15 feet deep.

His brother, Jesse Lee King, 16, went to the rescue, but was not a strong swimmer, and barely managed to save himself.

The victim's body was recovered after an hour by a squad summoned by the younger brother.

Honors Lost Love of Gold Rush

Back in 1897 and 1898, when the Alaskan gold rush was at its height, a girl named Mollie Walsh ran a tent-restaurant at the headwaters of the Yukon and became famous as the "flap-jack queen."

A miner named John "Packer Jack" Newman loved her, but she spurned him for one Mike Bartlett, whom she married. Three years later Bartlett cut her throat; now Newman, a retired Seattle business man, is donating a statue of her to the city of Skagway.

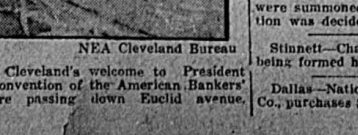

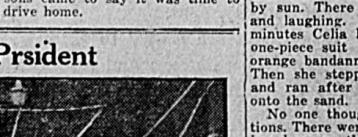

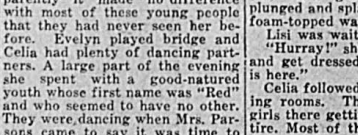

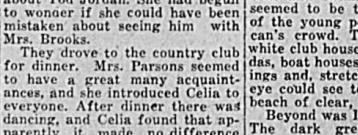

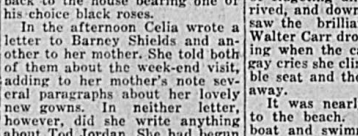

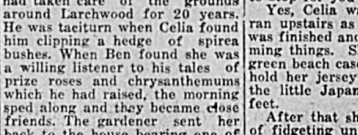

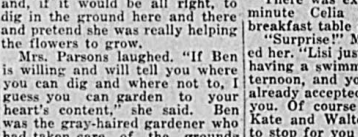

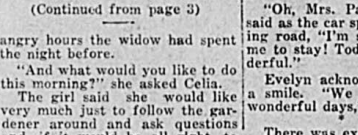

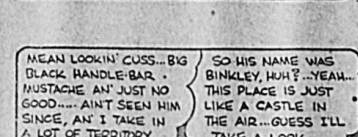

He is shown here with the statue.

Supreme Court To Test Laws Of Medical Exams

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 7.—An application was filed in the state supreme court here today to test the power of the state board of medical examiners to require study years preliminary college study before taking a regular professional college course in medicine and surgery.

The application is in the name of John W. Crawford of Dallas, who was one of five graduates of osteopathic colleges, whom the board refused to examine last June.

The attorney general's department had ruled that graduates of bona fide colleges with the requisite number of hours of medical and surgical training were entitled to examination, attorneys for Crawford said.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 6.—Learning to fly was mildly interesting to Miss Keziah Strong, one of the younger set of Cleveland's socially prominent, but, for a real thrill, she took up parachute jumping.

Next Door to Post Office WOLF'S For the Woman Who

Not too Big to Advertise

The famous Liberty Bell, carefully guarded from the desecrating hand of the curious, and housed in the building from whose belfry it rang out the tidings of the birth of a new nation, is one of Philadelphia's most prized relics of Colonial days.

Every child who ever went to school long enough to study history knows about these historic possessions, and that they may be seen only by visiting Philadelphia. Yet the city of Philadelphia is buying space in the big papers of the country to advertise them.

The purpose of Philadelphia's advertising campaign is not to teach people history, but to awaken a desire on their part to come to Philadelphia.

Your store may have been in its present location for years—the same name may still appear above the door. Hundreds of thousands may know all these things—BUT if you are not advertising, creating a desire on the part of these hundreds or thousands to come to your store you are losing.

As has been said—"Rather than cut out advertising cut out your most efficient salesman."
