Neely Acquitted In 47 Year Old Murder Case

By UNITED PRESS
MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 7.—Deliberating less than two hours a jury of twelve Alabama farmers today acquitted the fate of James F. Neely, 70, a farmer, charged with slaying Hiram Cooley in a mountain near Nov. 3, 1883.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 7.—A jury of 12 Alabama farmers today began deliberation on the fate of James F. Neely, 70, charged with a murder committed by most of them were born and raised when the presiding judge, A. E. Hawkins, was one year or nearly a half century—47 years to be exact—Neely eluded prosecution under an indictment secured for the death of Hiram Cooley on Georgia Mountain, Oct. 3, 1883, but Monday the page of history were turned back to far-off day and Neely, pleaded self-defense, was given a bench trial.

Only three witnesses—including a dead man—were called to determine whether the tragic crime of a primitive fist and a rock fight legally should be attributed to the prisoner at the bar.

James Cooley, aged brother of slain man, was the second witness, testifying the fight involved James and Tom Neely, the latter dead.

A hazily outlined by James Neely, the fight started when the factions met on the mountain, testifying he saw Neely strike Cooley down. As he did so, witness said, he seized a staff struck at Neely, but Neely red and the stick broke as it hit the ground.

Neely was the second witness, testifying the fight involved James Cooley, but adding that both James and Neely struck Hiram with rocks.

The rest of Neely's testimony is sketched how he and his brother Tom later fled into Tennessee when they learned Cooley died. Tom later died, how went on into Ohio, married, had a family of five children, had domestic trouble, went to brother's home at Texas, he was arrested.

Funeral Train Bears Bodies Of R-101 Casualties

By RICHARD D. McJILLAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
BEAUVAIS, France, Oct. 7.—A funeral train started across France today bearing 47 rough coffins, carrying the remains of the men who were killed when the British dirigible, R-101, world's largest airship, crashed and exploded near here early Sunday.

Citizens in towns and villages paid mute honor to the dead as the funeral cortege, bearing the bodies of Lord Thomson, British minister for air, and many of Britain's most noted airship experts passed.

Premier Andrew Tardieu and French air minister Laurent Eynac led the formal procession from the town hall, where the bodies were taken from Allonne, to the railroad station.

French airplanes flew overhead, and infantry escorted the procession with muffled drums.

French troops lined the funeral route.

The train of five black vans and two coaches proceeded to Boulogne, where the bodies were to be put aboard British warships Tempest and Tribute and taken to England.

The booming of the salute of 101 guns was the only audible signal of sorrow. There were no speeches, no church ceremony.

Lord Tyrell, British ambassador to Paris, and other high French and British officials stood bare headed in token of England's sorrow.

No coffin was marked with definite name, it is possible all will be buried in England in a common grave.

Suits Against Gas Company Are Settled

Suits filed in Justice of the Peace Jim Steele's court here by Ben Hamner and O. P. Chastain against the Community Natural Gas company for the alleged wrongful and illegal cutting off of gas at their residences, have been settled out of court according to the records in Justice Steele's office.

The suits were brought when representatives of the gas company cut off the gas at Chastain and Hamner's homes when, according to the plaintiffs, the gas company claimed they owed gas bills Chastain's being $6.75 and Hamner's $1. The plaintiffs claimed the gas company owed them interest on the gas company personally apologize to him for cutting off the gas. This was done, Hamner said.

The dockets at Steele's office shows that Hamner paid the cost in his case while the gas company is shown to have paid the costs in the suit filed by Chastain.

Hamner stated that attorneys for the gas company called upon him, agreed to settle the case out of court at no cost to him and that he agreed to their terms, with the provision that the local manager of the gas company personally apologize to him for cutting off the gas. This was done, Hamner said.

Kelley Claims Work Prepared Way For Fraud

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Ralph S. The ruling was made in the Freeman-Summers case ten months before Work resigned to become campaign manager for President Hoover, Kelley charged, adding that it reversed previous decisions and set a precedent which has been followed since.

Freeman, Kelley charged, was interested in a plot of land in western Colorado which was being worked by Summers, a home-steader. Backed by the Union Oil Company of California, according to Kelley, Freeman made several attempts to have its title declared valid by the interior department, failing each time.

President Of Cuba Tells Of Conditions

Says His Opponents Are Dissidents Of No Real Political Entity In His Country

In the following article, President Gerardo Machado of Cuba reviews the recent political disturbances in Cuba and says his opponents are dissidents of no real political entity. He reviews his administration, his public works programs and Cuba's international efforts and works and tells of his proposed economic and political reforms to prevent any further unrest.

By GERARDO MACHADO
President of Cuba
(Copyright 1930 in all Countries
By United Press)

HAVANA, Oct. 7.—The political agitation which has become so much comment, and the publication of so much insidious news, really is limited to Havana and to the propaganda and activities of individuals segregated from the regularly constituted political parties.

These individuals have been joined by others of communistic tendencies who are ready at all times to take advantage of any situation of any circumstance to carry on their work of propaganda against regularly organized government.

A sad example of these activities was the recent use of some students, naturally excitable and ready for adventure, in the promotion of a disturbance. Unfortunately one student was killed—the victim of malicious propaganda and the rashness of youth.

There are three leading parties in Cuba—the liberal, existent since the establishment of the republic; the conservative, organized during the second intervention of the United States in 1906, and the popular, organized during the administration of General Mario Menocal in 1919.

These parties, with few exceptions, comprise all the voters of Cuba. It will be noted, also that my administration did not take part in their establishment.

The three parties in 1928, after mature deliberations and with the cooperation of jurists of world wide renown, amended the constitution. The three parties decided again to cooperate for the benefit of the nation, and with the purpose of avoiding a bitter political struggle determined to have one candidate for the presidency—a national candidate, without opposition. They nominated me as the candidate of all parties.

I was inaugurated May 20, 1929, and was honored by the presence of 22 extraordinary envoys of as many nations.

Now, the constitution clearly directs the time and mode of elections of the congress. The date for the next election of senate and house of representatives is November 1. Both houses must by law take office on the first Monday in April, 1931. Neither I nor anyone else has the right to suspend or postpone the elections. Such action would leave the country without a proper legislative power, and would force the executive to assume practically a dictatorial character.

There is a group, composed of former members of the three political powers, along with other heterogeneous elements, who have organized as an opposition group, though not as a political party. They represent an effort to create unrest and discontent, and animosity against the government.

This group has demanded, most unreasonably, that the November elections be postponed.

I have announced repeatedly that after the elections on Nov. 1 I shall send a message to congress asking electoral law reform so that the opposition may be afforded facilities to organize into a regular political party. Then, if they win popular support, they may impose their doctrines in the proper manner.

Our international relations continue to develop satisfactorily and we can say that we occupy a pleasing position among the family of nations.

I have confidence that the country will develop progressively and brilliantly as soon as our economic sky is clear of these clouds of unrest and uncertainty which I consider only temporary.

Those who have not yet brought it will be bought.

Association members and the adopted thanking Ranger and the Chamber of Commerce for provid-

Next year, three times the amount of the clip just sold will be brought here, the members predicted.

Hollywood Party Ends In A Fight

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 7.—Ernest Lubitsch, prominent screen director, and Hans Kraly, scenario writer, engaged in a fistie encounter at a party given by Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford last Saturday night, it became known today.
While scores of motion picture celebrities looked on, Lubitsch struck Kraly a glancing blow that landed on his chest, friends of the pair related. A moment later, Mrs.
Helen Lubitsch, divorced wife of the director, delivered a blow or push to Lubitsch's face.
"They taunted me into it," Lubitsch said afterward. "They made remarks to me in German as I dined past them and made fun of me."
"I still don't know what it's about," said Kraly, who formerly was a close friend of Lubitsch.
"Jealousy," said Mrs. Lubitsch.

Plows Up Watch Buried One Year

HAMBURG, Ia., Oct. 7.—More than a year ago, C. W. Westad, of near here, dropped a watch from his pocket while he was plowing corn. The watch was valued because it had been brought to this country 154 years ago by Westad's great great grandfather and had been in his immediate possession for 26 years. When plowing was begun this year, Westad found the watch in the field. He recovered it and it has been running regularly since, he says, apparently none the worse for the year of exposure.

Common Clay Now Showing At The Lyric

Bringing one of the most noted of stars to the Lyric Theatre, the screen with Constance Bennett and Lew Ayres in the leading roles,
"Common Clay," Victor Fleming's
first production for Fox Movietone, is attracting unusual attention during its current showings at the Lyric Theatre.
The story revolves around the fall and rehabilitation of a fun-loving girl. Told in a convincingly dramatic manner and with a vivid background of modern social life, "Common Clay" is one of the most significant offerings of the season.
Miss Bennett's role gives that noted actress full scope for her exceptional abilities.
With Beryl Mercer, Matty
Kemp and Tully Marshall heading the supporting cast, the audience's interest is maintained every moment.

ario and dialog from Cleves Kin-

Lesson-Sermon Given
The subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Oct. 5, was "Un-reality."
Psalms 80:7 furnished the golden text: "Turn us again, O God of hosts, and because thy face to shine;
and we shall be saved."
Included in the service was the following passage from the Bible:
"Finally, brethren, whatever things are true, whatever things are honest, whatever things are lovely, whatever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things"—Phillipians 4:8.
The following citation from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, was also read: "We must form perfect models in thought and look at them continually, or we shall never carve them out in grand and noble lives. Let unselfishness, goodness, mercy, justice, health, holiness, love—the kingdom of heaven—reign within us, and sin, disease, and death will diminish until they finally disappear" (page 248).

Oklahoma Has 135,000 Barrel Well

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 7.—
The Oklahoma City oil field claimed today to have a high gravity gusher with a potential production equal to the huge low gravity producers of Mexico and West Texas.
When the No. 1 Ross well of Oils, Inc., was opened for test late yesterday, a heavy spout of oil rose in the hole making it necessary to shut the well in at being and 15 minutes when sand cutting developed. Gauges showed a flow of 1,824 barrels of oil the first 15 minutes. Necessity of shutting the well in at short intervals to keep it under control prevented a more accurate test of flow.
At this rate, the well would produce about 135,000 barrels of oil daily. Experts, however, said it was improbable that such a flow would be maintained for the 24-hour period.

You should know this about oil, says mechanic

The proper oiling of household devices presents a problem different from any other form of lubrication. Sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, the electric motors of washers, fans, refrigerators and similar devices have a tendency to collect dirt and rust when not in service. Consequently oil intended for general household use should clean and protect as well as lubricate.

3-in-One Oil will do these three things. For, unlike ordinary oil, it is really three high quality oils in one—animal, mineral and vegetable. It penetrates quickly, cleans the metal surfaces, "stays" put, reduces wear and saves repairs. It also prevents rust and tarnish.

Don't make the mistake of thinking "any kind of oil will do." Play safe; insist on 3-in-One Oil. Sold everywhere, by good grocery, hardware, drug and general stores in the standard sizes. For your protection, look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Adventure enters the life of Celia Mitchell, 17, when she learns the father she has supposed dead is alive and wealthy. She leaves her unpretentious home in Baltimore for a home in New York with her father, John Mitchell, and her aristocratic grandmother.

Margaret Rogers, her mother, divorced Mitchell, remarried, and is now a widow. Earnest Shields, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl, and before leaving Baltimore Celia promised to be loyal to his love.

She is lonely in her new home. Mitchell asks Evelyn Parsons, a beautiful widow, to introduce the girl to other young people. Mrs. Parsons considers Celia a means to win Mitchell's affections, and agrees. She invites the girl to her Long Island home for a week-end.

Todd Jordan, fascinating but with a dubious reputation, is attentive to Celia. Mitchell joins the house party on Sunday. Mrs. Parsons, seeing the father and daughter together, becomes jealous. She tells Mitchell her pearls are missing and casts suspicion on Celia.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

"Oh!" Evelyn's hand flew to her mouth. "Oh—I didn't think I mean it couldn't have been—"

Mitchell eyed her gravely. "You say you're sure you had the necklace yesterday."

"Yes," Mrs. Parsons nodded emphatically. "It was before the others arrived. I was showing Celia about the grounds and the house and then I thought she might like to see the view from the windows of my room. It's quite unusual. We went upstairs, and while we were there Rose, my maid, came in with the pearls. They'd just come back from a shop where I sent them to have the clasp repaired. I remember I put them down—"

She stopped and the shocked expression on her face deepened. "No, no," Mrs. Parsons went on. "Of course it couldn't have been—"

"But Celia was with you when you put them away?"

The woman nodded slowly as though she dreaded the admission. "I've looked everywhere," she said. "I wouldn't have thought about them, but I was in my room a little while ago and saw that the drawer where I keep them was partly open. The pearls are gone! I've looked everywhere!"

She was an excellent actress. Evelyn Parsons' expression and tone of voice both protested against this horrifying truth.

"We must investigate this thing at once," Mitchell said firmly. "I'll call Celia—"

"Oh, please! No!" Mrs. Parsons begged. "I couldn't do such a thing. I mean I won't believe—"

"It's the only way to put the matter straight," the man insisted. "My daughter's name must be cleared."

"Wait!" Mrs. Parsons implored. "There's no reason why she should suspect Celia. It's only that she was with me. We mustn't humiliate the child."

"Humiliate? That's hardly the word. If Celia did this thing—"

He was interrupted by Lisi Duncan. She came dancing into the hallway of the living room.

"Oh, Mr. Mitchell!" Lisi cried. "I've been looking for you! Come on—you have to be my partner. The others are all making fun of me, and I won't have it."

She had caught Mitchell's arm and seemed determined to pull him after her by force, if necessary.

"Come along," Lisi demanded. "They're all ready to start. And I won't be without a partner. Come along!"

Casting back protesting glances at Evelyn, Mitchell went away. The widow, alone, tapped one foot angrily and bided her time.

She was still standing in the hallway when Celia Mitchell appeared rounding the curve of the stairway. Her face was pale. As soon as Celia saw Mrs. Parsons she ran down the remaining steps.

"Oh, Mrs. Parsons," Celia said. "The queerest thing has happened. I can't understand it! I went upstairs a while ago to see that all my things were packed and ready to leave. I was putting a pair of nose I'd forgotten into my traveling bag when I found this. Look—"

She held up the dazzling strand of pearls.

"Why, Celia!"

"It's the beautiful necklace you showed me yesterday, isn't it? But how in the world did it get into my traveling bag?"

Evelyn Parsons' face was burning. For a moment her noise deserted her. A queer muffled sound issued from her throat. Then she recaptured command of the situation.

"In your traveling bag?" she echoed. "Why—how ridiculous!"

Celia's cheeks were still white. "Mrs. Parsons, you wouldn't think you couldn't think—I mean I didn't put them there! It must have been that someone made a mistake and packed them in her hand. Now she looked down at them.

"There must be something more to this," she told Celia slowly. "I think perhaps I know what happened. I can't tell you about it now, but I'm going to be watchful. You must promise me not to say one word about this to anyone. I have my reasons—"

Celia agreed. "I won't mention it to a soul," she said. "Only it makes me feel dreadful!"

"Never mind. Run along and forget all about it."

Celia went out to join the crowd on the porch. Mrs. Parsons turned to mount the stairs. She hesitated on the first step, her face thoughtful. She was about to continue when she heard footsteps. John Mitchell appeared.

"Evelyn—you've found them?"

She had forgotten that she was holding the pearls.

"Why—why, yes."

"Oh, I'm so glad. You don't know how upset I've been. It was such a terrible thing to happen. There, there, don't! You see it's all right. Yes, I found the pearls. I—I went upstairs again and made another search. And anyway, you know I didn't believe in a single minute that your daughter had anything to do with their disappearance."

Mitchell smiled. Evelyn Parsons, standing above him, looked every-thing that was womanly and sweet. The man's eyes raised to hers.

"You wouldn't?" he said fervently. "Evelyn, I hope she'll be as fine a woman as you are."

She excused herself and went on upstairs to put away the necklace. The plan had not worked. Never mind, there would be other ways!

When Celia reached the porch she found that the group there had diminished. Lisi with Jimmie Webster and Walter Carr was displaying card tricks. The others were not in sight.

The moonlight was as glamorous as it had been the night before. Celia walked over to the porch railing, seated herself and leaned her head back. The garden in the distance was a pattern of jetty fireflies flashed past. The night breeze, faintly stirring, caressed her cheek. Celia closed her eyes and thought she could hear Todd Jordan's voice. She was living again in those moments after she and Jordan danced.

Celia's eyes opened. Someone was coming along the garden path. A man and a woman. From the shadows of the porch Celia could see them clearly, but they could not see her.

They walked very slowly, close together, the man's arm about the woman.

Celia shrank back, but in that instant she had recognized them. Jordan and Eve Brooks!

Eve Brooks was a married woman. She had no right to be flirting as she did with any man in sight. But Jordan—Celia winced. He had tried to make Celia believe he cared for her. He had said it in words and in a thousand other ways.

Celia kept to her hidden recess. She could not bear to let the others know she had seen Jordan dancing. Celia arose and started to enter, but Walter Carr detained her.

"Dance this one with me, won't you?" he said.

They danced and Celia carried her head very proudly. She laughed more at Carr's jokes than she had before. Then Courtney Brooks came from somewhere and asked her to dance with them. Brooks was an expert at the tango. He showed her some of the steps and Celia, though she was slow at learning, was laughing and her cheeks were flushed when at last she gave up the attempt.

Todd Jordan stepped beside her. "I've been waiting for you," he said.

For a moment Celia was about to frame an excuse. Then she thought better of it, raised her arms and let him lead her into a fox trot. She was glad it was a fox trot instead of a waltz. In particular Celia did not want to hear again that melody about "stars and steel guitars." That was the song she and Jordan had danced to the night before.

They danced without talking. Jordan watched the girl curiously. She seemed disinterested.

"Tired?" he asked.

"Not at all. Do I look tired?"

"Oh, I just thought you might be."

It was not very exciting conversation. Presently he tried again.

"Celia, what have I done?"

"What do you mean?"

"You know what I mean. Something's wrong. You're different tonight."

"I didn't know it."

"But you are! Listen, if I've said or done anything that offended you, I'm sorry. I didn't mean to do anything like that. Honestly, I'm terribly sorry!"

It was almost too much to feel his dark eyes imploring her. But Celia bent her head. She had seen him with Eve Brooks with her own eyes.

"I haven't any idea what you're talking about," she told him glibly. "If you've done something you're sorry for it's too bad, but I don't see what I can do about it. Sorry, but I must run now and see when father wants to drive home."

It was a somewhat disconcerted young Mr. Jordan who watched Celia's blue chiffon back disappear through the French window.

Celia met John Mitchell in the living room.

"I was just coming for you, Celia," he said. "Mrs. Parsons has persuaded me a few more days here in the country will be good for you. I'm driving back into town immediately, but you're to stay on and she'll bring you up Wednesday or Thursday. Give you a chance to swim and drive and fool around the garden to your heart's content. Like the idea?"

"Why—I think it's wonderful!"

"I thought you would. Wouldn't stay in town myself if there was any way to avoid it. I'm glad Evelyn made the suggestion."

Celia was relieved. It was so much pleasanter at Mrs. Parsons' home than the dreary Gramme-metey Park house. She went to tell her hostess how pleased she was.

One by one the week-end guests departed. There was not another opportunity for Jordan to talk to Celia alone. She avoided him purposely. There was only his formal "good night" as they shook hands. Kate Duncan and Mrs. Parsons were nearby.

Celia went upstairs as soon as she could excuse herself. She undressed and got in bed immediately. She was awakened by a tap on the door.

Athletics Have Advantage In Tomorrow's Game

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor
ABOARD WORLD SERIES SPECIAL, Enroute to Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—The 1930 World Series, which at first resembled a rout and since has developed into a nip-and-tuck battle for the championship of baseball, has reached the stage where managerial strategy in the matter of selecting pitchers was scarcely of more value than a fifth rain check.

Here was the situation on the eve of the sixth and possibly deciding game, the Philadelphia Athletics have won three games and the St. Louis Cardinals two.

The Mackmen have Grove, Earnshaw, Walberg, Shores, Quinn and Tommell, the latter, untired.

The Cardinals have Hallahan, Haines, Grimes, Lindsey, Johnson, and Rhem.

One would say that this gave the Cardinals a decided edge. Against that edge is the dulling fact that the Athletics are out in front and need but one game to clinch the championship, while the Cardinals are under the strain of having to win everything.

About all that stands between the St. Louis Cardinals and defeat is sturdy young Bill Hallahan.

If he can hold the Mackmen tomorrow, as he did before a delighted St. Louis throng on Saturday he will be worth all the songs in St. Louisans' repertoire.

Paved Roads . . . A Bounty—Not A Burden To Your Children

The pavements you buy today are an investment for YOU, and YOUR CHILDREN, and THEIR CHILDREN. A pavement costs more to construct than an unpaved road, but soon pays for itself out of the yearly savings it produces in maintenance and automobile operation costs.

Highways—

- So that your farms may serve more, and farther markets.
- So that you may save more than $100 every 5,000 miles in car operating expenses.
- So that you may travel safely and speedily anywhere in any weather.
- So that you will not be burdened by the enormous upkeep of inferior roads.
- So that impassable roads will not hinder you from hauling crops or merchandise.
- So that you can build more miles of good pavement out of the savings on repairs.
- So that your farms and property may increase in value.
