VICTIM OF LIQUOR SHOOTING IN OKLAHOMA IS DEAD

The Raider Is Arrested After Death of Farmer

Second Victim Near Death; Deny Arrested Man Was Federal Officer; Tragedy Near Tecumseh.

By United Press
TECUMSEH, Ok., July 5.—W. W. Thomson, veteran prohibition agent of Pottawatomie county, and three men who accompanied him on a raid of the James Harris farm near here, today were charged with murder in the death of Harris.

Harris was shot to death late yesterday when the raiding squad attempted to search his farm. His other-in-law, Oscar Lowery, was seriously wounded.

"Evidence was so conflicting that it was essential I file against an entire party," Pitman told the press late today. Pitman said he was not informed as to whether John D. Williams, Tom Little and Jeff Harris were federal officers or not.

All four were held in the county jail.

Demetrius, federal director of prohibition for the western district of Oklahoma, said that Thomson was a certified agent of the raid.

SHAWNEE, Ok., July 5.—One man is dead today and another was in a hospital here—victims of federal prohibition agents' raids in a July Fourth liquor raid on a farm near Tecumseh bordering the Seminole oil fields.

Harris was in jail at Tecumseh as a result of the shooting yesterday. The dead man is James Harris, 35. The shooting took place on his farm. His brother-in-law, Oscar Lowery, 34, was seriously wounded.

The raid was led by W. W. Thomson, veteran prohibition agent who has seen 20 years of service in the secret service and prohibition departments. His arrest with Tom Little, Jno. D. Williams and Harris was first ordered by County Attorney Randall Pitman, who investigated the case. Harris was the only one arrested.

Harris will be charged with murder by Pittman told the United Press.

Harris was arrested after a statement by James Harris had pointed him out as the man who shot him to death. The farmer, known to neighbors as a law-abiding citizen, said Harris had pointed him out after ordering him to get down a gun. The farmer was complied with the order, though he believed the searchers were bandits since they had shown no search warrant or had not identified themselves.

This statement was denied by Harris, who said the farmer rushed at him, gun in hand. The farmer's wife, who witnessed the shooting, said she was not sure who fired the first shot, there was so much confusion attending the sudden appearance of the men with guns drawn.

The origin of the search warrant could not be traced early today. Eacock said he did not have knowledge of one being issued from the federal headquarters. He stated out, however, that any justice of the peace could have issued a warrant.

Federal officers thought there was still on the Harris farm, and were within their rights in searching without a warrant, according to Herbert H. Hodge, assistant United States district attorney at Shawnee City.

Conflicting stories were before County Attorney Pittman today as he commenced further investigation.

The statement before Harris he died, he said his brother-in-law and his family had come to Harris home to spend the holiday. They were in the house when the raiders came upon them, he said.

French Cabinet Faction Would Oust Poincaré

PARIS, July 5.—France's worst cabinet crisis since the hectic days of 1926 faced the government today as the left wing deputies of the lower house were mustering all their forces in a concerted effort to oust Premier Raymond Poincaré and his lieutenants.

Having scored a victory against the government when the finance commission voted to include in the war debt ratification a reservation linking France's war debts to the United States with the payments from Germany on the Young reparations plan, the radical members of the chamber of deputies prepared to strike from another direction.

They have made a serious issue of a simple incident as to whether or not a police chief's face was slapped by ex-service man during a recent anti-ratification demonstration by war veterans.

In this incident many of the left-wingers believe they have found ample grounds on which to overthrow the Poincaré government and are making an important issue of it.

Building Loan Has Good Year

Local Association's Loans Total $110,000, As Semi-Annual Dividend Is Paid.

The Eastland Building & Loan association declared its seventh semi-annual dividend of 8 per cent on all prepaid certificates and 10 per cent on installment and advance payment certificates at a meeting held at the Exchange National bank recently.

The financial report submitted by the secretary showed substantial growth in both loans and investments. The secretary called special attention to the number of out-of-town investors who were availing themselves of the privileges offered by the Eastland Building & Loan association.

The secretary's report showed 70 homes were being paid for through the association with total loans aggregating $110,000, with two loans pending awaiting completion of some improvements.

Of special interest was the amount of dividends distributed. More than $3,400.00 was earned by the 251 investors in the association and distributed to them in proportion to the amount of their investment.

The association was organized in March, 1926, and has been in successful operation since that date. It has never lost a dollar of principal or interest, and has never had a foreclosure, a record which all the directors are proud of.

Officers of the association are: T. L. Overby, president; W. B. Smith, vice president; Earl Bender, vict president and manager.

U. S. and Britain Should Further Peace In World

Dawes and Hibben Stress Duty of England and America in Promoting Comradship and Friendliness Among Nations.

LONDON, July 5.—Anglo-Saxon cooperation and the importance to the peace of the world of a comradship and complete understanding between the United States and Great Britain were the points stressed in Independence Day speeches by two distinguished Americans.

Speaking before the American Society Independence Day dinner, Ambassador Charles G. Dawes and President Hibben of Princeton mingled no words in telling their audience that England and America feel a sense of duty not only to each other but to the whole world to further the ideal comradship and a joint realization of friendly understanding as opposed forces.

"We are determined to cooperate with the other naval powers to achieve a common purpose for peace by practical expression of it in naval reduction," Ambassador Dawes said.

President Hibben said the American people rejoiced in the possibility that Premier MacDonald may come to the United States in the near future. He said:

"With our president and the British prime minister face to face, an understanding spirit, I am sure, will be developed, in the atmosphere of which various technical questions should ultimately be resolved to the complete satisfaction of both peoples."

LONDON, July 5.—The question of safeguarding British industry appeared today as a possible stumbling block to the new Laborite government.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's failure to promise in the king's speech at the opening of parliament any definite tariff policy which would protect Britain's industries has aroused conservative alarms. An amendment deploring the omission will be introduced before debate on the king's speech ends, it was announced.

It was indicated that pressure would be brought on Phillip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, to retain especially the duties on motor cars, clocks, watches and musical instruments, or at least to give lengthy notice before removing them. Sudden removal of the duties would be disastrous, the conservatives predicted.

House to Meet At Two Today

AUSTIN, July 5.—The Texas house of representatives met at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and adjourned to the same hour today. The procedure will be repeated today and Saturday. Monday a quorum is expected to be in Austin to begin actual work of the third call session.

The senate will meet Saturday and adjourn until Monday. Rules limiting the length of time of adjournments necessitate the procedure.

Approximately $16,000 is saved to the state in this way and the same amount taken from legislators' pockets. If the official beginning of the session had been delayed until Monday members would have been entitled to twenty cents a mile for the distance between their homes and Austin.

Report Is Ready On Findings In Theft of Whiskey

WASHINGTON, July 5.—An 84-page report of the government investigation into the theft of 50,000 gallons bonded whiskey from the Sibley warehouse in Chicago was expected to be in the hands of prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran, today.

Doran said that undercover agents in the Chicago enforcement area have been investigating the thefts for about two months. He made it clear that a thorough inquiry into the entire matter could be carried out.

E. C. Yellowley, administrator for the Chicago area, was expected to confer with Doran here today regarding the warehouse disclosures.

Every barrel of liquor stored in the warehouse was understood to have been tampered with.

Insanity Plea May Be Filed

Judge Davenport In Passing Sentence Set Date for Helms' Execution.

Some time between midnight and dawn on September 6th Henry Helms must die.

Tried and convicted for his part in the hold-up and robbery of the First National bank of Cisco on Dec. 23, 1927, at which time "Bit" Bedford and Geo. Carmichael, Cisco policemen, were killed, a half score of citizens wounded and a member of the "Santa Claus" bandit gang killed, Helms attorneys have carried his case to the last appeal, and Judge Geo. L. Davenport of the 91st district court, before whom he was tried when the death sentence was imposed by the jury, pronounced sentence upon him just after 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Sheriff Virge Foster and deputy sheriffs Steele Hill and Los Wood went to Dallas, where Helms has been confined in the Dallas county jail for some time and brought Helms, by automobile, to Eastland, arriving here just about noon today. He is to be kept in the Eastland county jail tonight and tomorrow Sheriff Foster will take him to Huntavill penitentiary where he will be placed in the death cell to await the hour of his execution.

With the passing of sentence upon him by the district judge before whom he was tried and convicted, Helms' last hope in the courts is gone, except that it is possible that an affidavit that he is insane may be filed in the 91st district court and in that event it would have to be considered and he given a hearing before he be executed. His attorneys stated this morning that it was not unlikely that such an action would be taken in Helms' behalf.

All chances gone in the courts Helms' last and only hope lies with Governor Moody, who, if he sees proper, may commute the death sentence to life imprisonment.

A letter written by Helms' wife to Judge Davenport makes a plea that Helms be allowed to live for the sake of his six children, one of whom was born since Helms was arrested and placed in jail for the Cisco robbery.

A few weeks ago Helms' father came to Eastland in an effort to have members of the jury that tried Helms sign a petition in his behalf. Whether he succeeded in seeing any of the jurors or whether he got any names on the petition could not be learned. Helms was prosecuted by former County Attorney J. Frank Sparks, assisted by W. W. Hair of Abilene.

The crime for which Helms is to die was committed on Dec. 23, 1927. Helms and three companions, which composed the now noted "Santa Claus" bandit gang, entered the First National bank of Cisco one of the members, Marshall Hall, lifted, attired in a Santa Claus suit and followed by a host of children. In the fight that followed Chief of Police G. E. (Bit) Bedford of Cisco, veteran peace officer and ex-sheriff of Eastland county; and Geo. Carmichael, Cisco policeman, were killed and six other persons wounded.

In making their escape from the bank with loot amounting to several thousand dollars, which was later recovered by citizens, the bandits left one of their number, L. E. Davis, fatally wounded on the streets of Cisco. Davis died the following Christmas day at Fort Worth. They also kidnaped two Cisco girls, Laverno Comer and Emma Mae Robinson and used them as living shields from the bullets of the citizen-posses who fired at the bandits as they fled in an automobile. The car was riddled with bullets but neither of the young girls were injured.

Helms, Ratliff and Robert Hill, all members of the gang, eluded the officers and a posse of several hundred men for a week before they were captured. Ratliff at South Bend in Young county and Helms and Hill at Graham. Each of the bandits had been seriously wounded before they were captured. Hill is in the penitentiary and Ratliff is awaiting a last appeal in the Court of Criminal Appeals on his sentence.

Judge Davenport, in passing sentence, set the date for Helms' execution on September 6th.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Curtis Morgan, lawyer, is by his wife, Iris Morgan, with Bert Crawford for Morgan has recently won through Morgan does not Crawford. Nan Carroll, secretary, is deeply in love with him and is forcing him to work, saves him from despair after Iris' death.

Months, she acts as long-term housekeeper for him, with love of little 6-year-old Nan. Nan passes her bar examination and Morgan takes her from a junior partner. She is divorcing Iris and he is marrying her.

Marriage continues for three months, when Nan will have to leave. The young Iris, deserted by her mother, returns. She feigns illness in an effort to bring Morgan home. Nan determines to stand and has the doctor remove her from the hospital.

Iris is hostile to Nan at dinner. Morgan ends him to her. She tells Nan he will have something for Iris and promises her full allowance. Nan tells her it is true she won't let her come home. She tells Iris to go to the law for a man who has two wives.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XL

When she knows, Nan Morgan cries despairingly, "It would be enough to be a second wife in any circumstances, but to be a second wife to explain and justify the status of the 7-year-old child to the world?"

"If the boy's eyes were fixed on her in an inexorable, unyielding demand for an answer to question. By simply answering, 'Yes,' Nan knew she could end the first skirmish in the battle between herself and Iris for the custody of the child. For he was a logical being beyond his years. His answer would be the simple, 'Yes.'"

Nan knew that she was giving John Curtis Morgan his freedom to marry again when she decided to do so. But somehow she did not fight that way. In later years, Curtis could not truthfully deny his stepmother had deprived him of his mother. He had never been destroyed, Iris herself had been the destroyer.

Nan answered: "I don't know what your mother thought about when she went away, but you see, your father and I know she was ever coming back. Her voice choked on it. That was true, true! If he had the faintest hope he would ever have her again, he would have married me. But he thought you both needed her."

Iris nodded forlornly. "I told you," she admitted slowly. "And I was awfully glad when you came back. But now my real love is back. . . ."

He was wrestling with the problem. His heart ached with pity when he watched her. Finally he deep, quivering breath, he started out: "Mother said she was to choose between you and Nan. Did she mean you'd come back, if I—if I had the impulse—the quick decision of her pride—was to stake her life on you? She couldn't stay with me, she was wanted! But she had little fingers gripped her throat and sent an imperative message to her brain. The boy was in love. In one brief visit, Iris had done that to him, by feeding him the chocolates he could not bite. Biting her tongue to hold her too hastily answer, the girl looked at the child, placing a mental barrier between him and her. She had been a girl beside the boy he had loved since she had been in love with him."

Curtis of a year ago had been thin, anemic, neurotic; lonely, unloved, unhappy, violent of temper. The product of more than a year of Iris Morgan's mothering was less than one year, she had changed that Curtis into a sturdy, healthy, happy, obedient boy, beautifully adjusted to school and home life. Did she have the right to abandon him now? Him, and the father who had loved her just as sorely and as devotedly as obviously under her

CARE?

Very slowly and carefully she answered: "No, Curtis. Your mother didn't mean that you could choose whether I went away and she came back. I am your father's wife now, you know, and unless he wants me to go, I must stay and make you both as happy as I possibly can."

"Oh!" Curtis said, drawing the syllable out very long. Then, very slowly: "I'm glad I don't have to choose, Nan, 'cause I want you and mother both. If father wants you to stay, I can see mother lots anyway, can't I, Nan? I think she'd feel bad if I didn't," he explained, as if fearful of hurting Nan's feelings.

Tears gushed into the girl's eyes. Blinking at them, she stooped and kissed him with a fierceness that embarrassed, while it pleased him.

"You do love Nan, don't you, darling?" she begged, pride completely routed for the moment.

"Sure I do!" Curtis answered, with masculine brusqueness. "And I love my mother, too. I guess I love you both nearly the same. A kid has to love his own mother the best, don't he?—I mean, doesn't he?"

The child's preoccupation with grammar in face of the tremendous issues involved struck Nan as irresistibly funny. She was laughing almost hysterically as she tucked the covers about him and gave him a good-night kiss.

"Good-night, Nan," he murmured, suddenly drowsy. "Listen, Nan! If you were my real mother, I'd love you best—lots the best. But—! Conscientiousness, loyalty, and grieved bewilderment gave up the battle then, routed by sleep.

Nan stood looking down upon him for a long minute, and there was no laughter in her heart or eyes. Then she tiptoed from the room, her load of despair a little lighter. That naive confession of Curtis' had crystallized her decision—turned it into firm determination. She would fight Iris Morgan to the last ditch. Iris was poison for the man and the child. No matter if they cried for that sugar-coated poison, it was her duty to protect them.

Standing in the middle of her room Nan Morgan cried out to the God she so sorely needed: "Dear God, help me to win—for their sake. You know it isn't because I'm in love with John Curtis Morgan that I want to hold him against Iris. Of course I love him with all my heart, but if it were for his good, I would leave him tonight. You know I'm sinfully proud, that if I listened to my pride, I'd make him choose between us this minute. But, oh, dear God, he needs me, and the child needs me. Help me to humble my pride, so that I can fight the harder. Help me to win."

Her heart was almost at peace when she crept into bed. Both her doors were unlocked. Her husband could come to her, if he wished. But she did not listen for his footsteps, for she was sure that he would not come. Because bitterness had melted out of her heart she was able to put herself in his place that night. She felt the grief and pain he must be suffering. Recoiled from the thought of love-making, even of seeking comfort, just as he must be recoiling. Poor John! Poor, torn victim of passion he had thought dead, and of a love that was still too new and delicate to weather the storm of that fierce, reviving passion for a woman who was unworthy but incredibly desirable. Poor John! She could almost hear him groan: "God forgive me, for I love two

WOMEN . . .

That night Nan wept for him, rather than for herself, and so heading was the temporary forgetfulness of self that soon she slept, and the next morning felt more light-hearted and strong than she had ever hoped to feel again.

She needed courage and strength to carry her through the days that followed immediately upon Iris' return. Her husband was a stricken man, though he tried, with obvious and heartbreaking conscientiousness, to present a normally cheerful face to his family and to his downtown world. He was pathetically grateful for Nan's quiet acceptance of his moodiness, and she believed, for her unmistakably firm "Good night" in the drawing-room each evening. Sometimes, when she was thus making it clear that she did not expect him to play the lover or husband while his heart was a battleground, his eyes met hers with wistful questioning, as if they were mute-ly asking: "Do you really understand and forgive me, Nan? Do you see how it is with me? Don't you know that I love you, too, but that I can't come to you just yet?"

And her own round, childish but wise eyes told him: "I do understand. Don't you worry your dear head about me now. But love me as much as you can."

Two days after Iris' return John Curtis Morgan presented his legal wife with a smart little coupe, explaining awkwardly:

"A prosperous firm like ours ought to be able to afford two cars, don't you think? I want you to feel free to come and go as you please, without bothering about how I'm going to get around."

As she thanked him, Nan's heart contracted sharply. Was the car a clumsy attempt at peace-making? Surely he did not think he had to bribe her to be patient and cheerful! Then she dismissed the suspicion as unworthy of both of them. The car would be a great convenience. It would permit her to stay at home later in the mornings, so that she could put a greater emphasis upon her housekeeping and home-making. Another weapon against Iris, who had not cared enough to turn the house into a home. Of course, she would miss those companionable trips downtown together, Nan reflected ruefully, but these last two days they had been a strain upon both of them. Was that, possibly, the reason he had contrived to make them unnecessary?

For four days father and son made afternoon trips to the hospital to see the woman who had deserted them and who had now flung herself upon their mercy. After that first day, those trips

WERE NOT MENTIONED.

Not even Curtis referred to them, but each evening he had no appetite for his dinner, and Nan realized, helplessly, that Iris was stuffing him with unwholesome sweets. And she could imagine the boy's quick retort: "I guess my own mother knows what's good for me!" Nor, her hands were tied.

The fourth day after Iris' return was Christmas eve. Nan had bought an elaborate carpentering outfit for Curtis, as well as all the materials he could need in constructing a toy airplane. His father had consulted her anxiously as to the advisability of giving the boy a bicycle. Knowing Curtis' passionate desire for the wheel, Nan had encouraged its purchase, with the assurance that he would obey her injunctions to ride only on sidewalks. But the bicycle had not been bought. On Christmas eve Morgan confessed hesitatingly:

"His mother was afraid of an accident. She—I thought perhaps a toy automobile would be more safer. It's quite big. Operates with pedals, you know. I hope he'll like it."

Nan flushed hotly as she applauded the choice with apparent cheerfulness. Of course Iris had put her in the wrong, had made John feel that his son's very life was in danger, so long as Nan had control of him.

Decorating the Christmas tree was a rather ghastly ordeal, for the ghost of the living mother who should have been there hovered over the girl and the man during the whole ceremony.

"No fair peeping or shaking the box," Morgan warned Nan, with a forced jocularity that made her throat ache with tears, as he tied her present to a branch of the tree.

"I wonder if he's giving Iris a Christmas present," she could not help asking herself. "Of course he helped Curtis choose something for her, and I'm glad he did. But ah, I'll be relieved when Christmas is over!"

But when Christmas day actually dawned, all her own private heart-ache was swallowed up in a terrible anxiety about Curtis. Nan and Morgan had said to each other with pretended ruefulness that they supposed the boy would be up before daylight, whooping over his tree and presents, and making it impossible for anyone else to sleep, but when 8 o'clock came there had been no sound from his room. Vaguely worried, Nan went to wake him and found him heavy-eyed with fever. Within half an hour Dr. Black was there, looking grave, and pronouncing the trouble an upset digestion.

"And I've been holding you up as an example to all the mothers on my list," the doctor chided Nan gently. "Have you been falling down on your job?"

John Curtis Morgan, who was standing beside his wife, answered for her, his face flushed with embarrassment. "I'll take the blame, doctor. I'm afraid I've been indulging the boy behind his mother's back. She never lets him eat between meals, but I—!" He stumbled over the lie, shifted his eyes.

The doctor nodded, his eyes narrowed. "I think I understand, Morgan. But no one must be permitted to tamper with Nan's discipline of the boy. Not one!"

At the end of the long, anxious day came a telegram for John Curtis Morgan.

ASTROLOGERS CAN PREVENT MANY ACCIDENTS ON SEA

BERLIN—Now it can be told. The thrift of shipping men, their reluctance to pay out good money for astrologers on their staff, is responsible for disasters at sea.

Ships that have met with disaster were launched at an unfavorable moment—from an astrological point of view, that is. And it would have been so easy to have selected more propitious hours for the launchings, or at least to have avoided unfavorable hours. A well-paid first-class astrologer would never have permitted a launching to take place if for instance there is a new moon in the sign of the "Akasha-Tatwa," or if Saturnus is under the sign of the Capricorn.

All of this knowledge we owe to Wilhelm Becker who confesses he is an eminent astrologer. If the shipping magnates of the North German Lloyd Line had heard about him earlier, they might have been spared the loss of their new giant vessel "Europa," which was almost completely destroyed by fire recently in Hamburg Harbor. If you won't believe it, listen to what Wilhelm Becker had to say in the periodical "Astrology" way back in September, 1928. Then he cast the horoscope for the "Europa," and although he did not predict the conflagration he declared that things did not augur too well.

At the time of the launching of the "Europa," on Aug. 15, 1928, at 5:15 p. m., the juxtaposition of Wilhelm Becker was as follows: "There was a new moon in the sign of the 'Akasha-Tatwa.' Saturnus was under the sign of the Capricorn, and what is more, the former was in 'receding' opposition to Mars, while the quadrant of Venus dwelt in the eighth house."

This may mean little or nothing to you. But the expert eye of Wilhelm saw at once that this kind of juxtaposition was extremely unfavorable, not to say sinister, for, so Wilhelm claims, it signified that "five planets were in the house of death."

Wilhelm Becker added that he did not want to give away to "Cassandric Cries," but that, nevertheless, he felt it his duty to recall a similarly unfavorable horoscope, that of the ill-fated "Titanic," the giant vessel which floundered in mid-ocean after smashing into an iceberg one dark night in the middle of April, 1912.

And all this disaster may be avoided. It is only necessary to select the most propitious hour for the launching of a vessel. Launching hours are equal to the birth of a child, Wilhelm Becker claims. But while the latter has to be taken "as is," the launching of a ship can be regulated at will to always be under a lucky star. If the shipping men themselves cannot decide this lucky hour, as apparently they cannot, why, they ought to hire Wilhelm Becker or someone in his class.

OLD BELL PRESERVED.

BRADY, Texas, July 2.—Brady's historic town bell will ring again, but no more from the old courthouse steeple. This historic relic has been donated to the Richards' park and placed into the athletic stadium right aside of the Judge's stand, where it will toll out the time of the horse races on July 3, 4 and 5. For many years this old bell hung in the courthouse steeple, sounded the alarm for Brady's "bucket brigade" and was rung in other emergencies. With the passing of the "bucket brigade" and other pioneer methods, this bell was supplanted by an electric siren, less sentimental in tone but more practical to operate. Recently it was unearthed in a pile of debris, and given to the park.

Honest Facts

About the modern Electric Range and what it can do in your kitchen

Few persons realize just what conveniences and comforts an electric range brings into the home—the exact sources from which electric cookery derives its value. Some of the outstanding advantages follow:

- Simplicity—There is nothing complicated about electric cookery—it is the "easiest thing in the world" to do. And you are certain of obtaining the same good results repeatedly.
- Safety—Even a child may cook on an electric range without fear of any harm whatever. Every electric range we sell has been approved in accordance with the Underwriter's code and bears the seal of Good Housekeeping Institute.
- Flavor—Better cooking, dishes more savory and tempting, more delicious and inviting, rich in nourishment and flavor through the distinctive processes of electric cooking.
- Automatic—Perfect automatic regulation for time and temperature. Just a turn of the switch and your cooking takes care of itself. You can come home after a day's shopping and find dinner cooked and ready to serve, steaming hot.
- Economy—In electric cookery all the heat is concentrated where the cooking is done—none is wasted. You even turn off the heat before the cooking is done and finish with soiled heat. There is no shrinkage of foods cooked in the electric oven. Less time is demanded from the homemaker, giving her more time to do the things she has always wanted to do.

Convenient terms—liberal allowance on your old range.

"Orgatone Is a Wonderful Opportunity for Relief," He Says

"I Suffered 8 Years and Took All Kinds of Medicines But Now Only Three Bottles of It Has Made a New Man of Me," Says Desdemona, Texas, Oil Worker.

"Yes, sir, Orgatone is a wonderful opportunity for relief, for all those who suffer as I did. I was troubled with stomach trouble for eight long years and since taking three bottles of it, I have made a new man of me," said C. S. Lorenzen, of Desdemona, Texas, who in the drug store recently for more Orgatone, and while talking with Orgatone representative.

"I lost my appetite, and got to where, it was impossible for me to eat hardly anything at all. If I ate a heavy meal, I would suffer untold agony, with my stomach at the highest of foods, and had to be very careful of my diet. It got to where, I just suffered from indigestion all the time, and gas would form on my stomach, and I would have a puffed up feeling. At times, it just seemed as if there was a hard lump, right in the pit of my stomach, and it pained me terribly. I was very nervous and restless, and at times would not get any sleep at all. I had a very bad case of constipation, and took strong laxatives or purgatives, all the time.

"While talking with a druggist about my condition, he recommended Orgatone to me. I am now on my third bottle of it, and feel simply great. After taking the first bottle, I didn't have a sign of constipation. I have been improving right along, and now haven't an ache or pain. I have a good appetite and eat anything now, and have no more pains or gas on my stomach. My food digests perfectly. I sleep fine every night, and wake up feeling refreshed and full of pep and energy. If anyone suffers as I did, I would advise them to try Orgatone, for it is sure a wonderful medicine."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy, but a new scientific remedy, containing no alcohol or other stimulating drugs and is sold in Eastland exclusively by Tombs & Richardson, Phone 263, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Adv.

TEXAS LEAGUE

San Antonio put on an old-fashioned July Fourth celebration and capped both ends of a double header from the Waco Cubs, 5 to 2 and 4 to 1. The first game went 11 innings. Two former college athletes—Neal Baker, of Texas U., and Hobo Carson, former Texas Christian university star—did the twirling in both games for the Indians. Carson held the Cubs to one hit in the nightcap which was called in the seventh by darkness and rain.

At Houston the downpour forced postponement of both games with the Beaumont Exporters.

Fort Worth and Wichita Falls, playing at Fort Worth, divided the two holiday games, the Spudders taking the first with a score of 7 to 4, while the Cats came back to cop the second, 9 to 5. Turgeon and Hermann knocked homers for Chicago dropped to second place in the National league when the Cubs were able to do not better than break even with the Cincinnati Reds. Cincinnati won the first game, 9 to 8, checking a threatening Cub rally in the eighth with a triple play. The first game was called at the end of the eighth by agreement. In the second Chicago scored six runs in the third and were never again in danger, winning 10 to 5.

The New York Giants divided a doubleheader at Boston, losing the first game, 4 to 3, and winning the second, 8 to 0. Larry Benton shut out the Braves in the final contest allowing but six scattered hits.

Brooklyn lost a weird slugfest to the Philadelphia Phillies, 14 to 12 in the first of the holiday bill at Brooklyn, but came back in the second to win, 5 to 3, behind the effective hurling of Morrison, who allowed only eight hits.

The Yanks continued their seemingly futile pursuit of the Philadelphia Athletics, winning two games from Washington, at New York, without gaining a step on the league leaders. The Yanks started their first game with four runs in the first inning and were never headed, winning 8 to 4. In the second Washington got a two run lead but New York countered with six runs in the fourth and went on to win, 14 to 4. Not a member of the world's champions hit a home run in the two games.

Philadelphia trampled twice on the Boston Red Sox, at Philadelphia by scores of 3 to 1 and 8 to 1. In the first game Lefty Grove held the Sox to six hits and in the second Jack Quinn allowed Boston eight safe blows.

St. Louis followed the leaders with a double victory over Detroit. Seventeen hits paved the way for victory in the first game, 12 to 6, but Detroit outhit the Browns, 14 to 10, in the second, only to lose by a 7 to 6 score.

Chicago and Cleveland divided at the latter city. The White Sox, behind Red Faber, who pitched an effective game, won the first, 9 to 2. Miljus held the Chicagoans in the second and Cleveland won, 12 to 5.

The Dallas and Shreveport clubs played their third 2 to 2 tie in the season when, before the home club finished batting in the sixth inning of the first, the game was called. When the umpires called it off the Sports held a 4 to 3 lead, one was out, Jim Moore on second and Irin Jeffries on first for Dallas.

Yesterday's hero—Adam Comorosky, whose home run in the seventh inning of the second game at Pittsburgh scored four runs and clinched the Pirates' night to first place in the National league. Pittsburgh took two games from the stumbling St. Louis Cardinals by scores of 8 to 4 and 8 to 2, Kremer holding the 1928 pennant winners to six hits in the second. The victories put Pittsburgh in the lead, .002 points ahead of the Chicago Cubs.

Evidence of Texas Cannibal Feasts

AUSTIN—Extensive exploration of a series of Indian mounds around Blockhouse Spring on the Judge A. S. Walker estate, about three miles west of Cedar Park, Texas, is being carried on by J. E. Pearce, professor of anthropology at the University of Texas.

Blockhouse Spring, so called because of its proximity to an old Texas fort erected for defense against the Indians, became a rendezvous of the Comanche Indians, and as a consequence kitchen midden refuse in great abundance was left there. Additional evidences of the presence of the Indians are being unearthed daily by Professor Pearce and his crew of workers.

Professor Pearce is still carrying on archaeological exploration in the Cedar Park mound. This mound is the largest source of archaeological material he has yet located. It is seven feet deep in its central portions and covers an acre and a half of ground space.

Evidences of three cannibal feasts have been found in this mound, including split human bones, which indicate that the tribe ate the marrow from the bones.

Some rare pottery and many flint instruments have also been discovered in the Cedar Park mound. Professor Pearce is endeavoring to protect the mound from the plunderings of amateurs and to establish it as a permanent exhibit for students of archaeology.

Professor Pearce is conducting these explorations under the terms of a research grant in the social sciences. The grant provides funds for five years of research, at the end of which time Professor Pearce will classify the results of his study and will compile his findings in a volume on Texas archaeology.

But it was only a cardboard devil, painted red, that Aimee had made for the occasion. The evangelist tried to preach a sermon from the ring, but the fight crowd was in no mood to listen.

cially be the sentence of the divine Judge on the last day according to which these shall be condemned to everlasting fire who during their lifetime neglected the works of mercy (Matt. XXV. 41). Heaven is the reward of good works; he who neglects them does not obtain it. If, then O Christian, you are lukewarm in doing good, if you will not hear of prayer, of the word of God, of the reception of the sacraments, of spiritual reading and of charity, you have reason to dread the fate of the evil tree.—Rev. M. Collins.

St. Francis Xavier Church

July 7, 1929, Mass at 10 a. m. This is the seventh Sunday after Pentecost and the Gospel is from St. Matthew VIII. 15-21. In this Gospel we are told that "Every tree that brings forth not forth good fruit, shall be cut down, and shall be cast into the fire." According to this divine utterance, not only those who do evil, but those also who do no good, shall be rejected. The Christian justice required for salvation comprises two things, the avoidance of evil and the practice of good. We are taught this in the parable of the unprofitable servant who did not waste his talent but only buried it (Matt. XXV. 30) in this parable of the foolish virgins who were excluded from the nuptial feast only because they had no oil in their lamps (because they were destitute of good work); and espe-
