Forests Can Be Saved By Being Left Alone

When the Civilian Conservation Corps was sent into the woods with its axes, its picks and shovels, and its educational pamphlets, lovers of the great outdoors sat back comfortably and concluded that America's wilderness areas were at last to be made safe for the bull moose, the red squirrel, and the future generation.

But it develops that this sigh of relief was a little premature.

Few organizations have a more alert interest in our wilderness heritage than the American Nature Association; and this group, speaking in the current issue of Nature Magazine, asserts that our primeval forests are actually endangered by activities of the outfit that was supposed to protect them—the CCC.

This isn't the CCC's fault. The point is that one of the jobs given the CCC has been to build roads through the forests; and the Nature Magazine protests that no one in Washington seems to realize that if you build enough roads into a wilderness, and dot it with hotels and camp sites, it very speedily ceases to be a wilderness.

"The Cascade crest in Washington has been literally riddled by roads of the CCC," says the article. "To the north and west of Mount Adams truck trails have opened up an unsurpassable wilderness country; the headwaters of the Selway are invaded by CCC camps; and the Lolo Trail is only a memory. We have not only conquered the wilderness; we have destroyed it."

All this is not merely a matter to be deplored by arm chair philosophers or a few scattered outdoors enthusiasts. The frontier—not simply the new land that awaits settlement, but the wild tract that challenges an individual to make his way through it on his own power—has been a potent force in shaping American character.

It has given us something extremely precious—some point tinge of that self-reliant and imperturbable sense of kinship with nature which created what was best in the Indian race. We cannot lightly give it up.

We seem to be approaching a time in which the average man will have more leisure than he ever had before. In such a time it will be of the highest importance to have these wilderness areas available—not to automobile parties and hotel guests, but to venturers who can plunge in on foot, carrying what they need on their own backs and finding in the depths of pathless forests a tranquility, a spiritual orientation, that can be bained in no other way.

In short, the best thing we can do with our remaining wilderness areas is to leave them alone. We can defeat our own ends by building too many trails and clearing away too much brush. Let Washington call a halt to these activities before it is too late.

All Wars—

Of world figures, Butler had the following to say:

Hitler—"Zeck's Bad Boy."

Mussolini—"The Greatest Show-mar of This Time."

Of President Roosevelt and his clamping down the neutrality act, Butler praised him for performing "the greatest service in history."

Dictators, said Butler, have to appeal to basic instincts of their countries' citizens to remain in power. He pointed out that Hitler's Jewish purge was to arouse the German, while Mussolini did the same in Italy by inspiring national feeling against Catholics.

After the dictators appeal to the basic instinct "then they have them in that condition when they can do whatever they want to."

Italy's Ethiopian invasion will result in the death of one million Italians, Butler predicted.

Mussolini was slipping in power, said Butler, his nation was "bursting" so he had to create a state of national feeling. War offers profits from 6 to 150 per cent, Butler stated, as a reason of the Italo-Ethiopian situation.

"Somebody's behind him," General Butler asserted. Possibility of oil in Ethiopia is a likely reason for the Italian military moves, he said.

While international attention is directed to Italy and Ethiopia, Japan "is having the time of its life," Butler said.

Butler charged that munitions makers promote wars for their personal gain. Orders were given in the World War not to destroy munitions factories. The munition manufacturing business is not an international racket, the speaker said.

Punctuated in plain language, Butler's talk was greeted by applause throughout the evening.

He suggested to citizens: "Don't rubberneck on their ships," referring to foreign nations.

To men whom he charged want war for profit, General Butler said, "Capitalists have got to lay off taking our young men."

Butler rapped at Hearst newspapers occasionally, who he said colored up possibility of Japan taking over the Philippines.

"Those who take a Hearst paper wake up every morning and find a Japanese ship under their bed."

"Let her have the Philippines; it'll make her sick, too."

Butler urged the citizens to "stand by" President Roosevelt on the United States neutrality in the Italo-Ethiopian situation.

Natural, spontaneous, the twice Congressional Medal decorated man won his audience easily.

Before service for 33 years in the Marine Corps, was tense, sizing his audience.

He presented an unusual figure, standing natural, his voice carrying from a confidential radiance-wide whisper to tones of that of a commanding military man.

Varying his standing position with one arm frequently on his hip and the other fingering his tousled hair, General Butler spoke for 90 minutes.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON—The strong American determination to stay neutral may be complicated by the possibility that, officially, there will never be any more wars.

Just as the custom of leaving calling cards tends to fall into disuse, the modern tendency among nations is to dispense with formal declarations of war.

Consequently, according to rules of international law, Italians might kill any number of Ethiopians on Ethiopian soil and still not be at war.

When the attack came it was carefully explained at the State Department that this government didn't recognize the African fighting as war. This fact complicated application of the new neutrality act.

It was made clear that the United States probably would follow the League of Nations lead—if the league decided this was a war—and apply embargoes.

But we are in no way bound by league decisions, and international law leaves the way open to any administration which in the future decides to ignore conflict and carnage with the pretense that all is serene and peaceful.

When the Japanese were killing thousands of Chinese in Manchuria and around Shanghai a few years ago, Secretary of State Stimson remarked that the two nations were "in a state of profound peace." The other nations of the world agreed.

The international law of it was that there hadn't been any violation of the Kellogg treaty until both nations declared war or a state of war.

Perhaps the point isn't important. But it offers a chance for a lot of diplomatic sidestepping and phengaling.

YOUR correspondent finds himself unable to suppress this story: A man in New York who makes frequent business trips to Washington bears a closer facial resemblance to Herbert Hoover than any other known human being.

Not long ago he and a friend were celebrating at the Cotton Club, center of the capital's "Little Harlem." About midnight they had conducted themselves with sufficient exuberance to cause them to be bounced out.

The New York man found a wooden box and mounted it at the corner of 15th and U streets. He announced his candidacy for president of the United States on a platform calling for the closing of the Cotton Club.

Two colored policemen came to the scene as he thundered on. But his friend restrained them, saying: "Don't you recognize Herbert Hoover when you see him? Give him a chance. After all, this doesn't happen very often."

The cops promptly devoted themselves to keeping back the crowd, which soon amounted to nearly 200 people.

No one knows how long this might have gone on if a couple of girls hadn't come along in a car and invited the speaker for a ride down town. He said good night to his audience and accepted at once.

Everything Is Being Considered, These Days

Senators Argue Drink Sales Bill

AUSTIN, Tex.—Sen. Gro Woodruff from dry Decatur is making a powerful argument for Sen. Clint mall's bill to prevent all sales of liquor by the drink. Sen. Ken Regan, Pecos, interrupted to assure Woodruff that any bill passed by the Senate would protect rigorously the integrity of dry territories such as that in Senator Woodruff's district. "I am not so sure about the Woodruff said. Then he narrated his experience in motoring from Decatur to Austin. He drove south from Wayne (wet) for half an hour behind a truck that was wrenched from side to side of the road, endangering traffic. Finally the truck stopped and found the driver drunk. "That was in dry territory Woodruff said impressively. "Did he get all that load by drink or did he carry a bottle?" quired wet Senator Welly Hopk Gonzales. Woodruff did not know. Rep. R. E. Morse, Houston, not discouraged over prospects, pass his liquor bill permitting drinks with meals, just because Senate has favored Small's drink bill. "I have seen sicker cows that get well," cheerfully remarked Morse. The remedy to be applied, it rumored, will be amendments to the Small bill that will out-dry drys in their efforts to limit liquor traffic. "Historic sword missed from London Tower." Maybe that's one II Duce has heard John B. rattling.

Farmers Unite As Minute Men

DES MOINES, Ia.—Farmers of Iowa are mobilizing a militant army, to be known as "Minute Men," to assist in protecting agricultural interests against any crisis. More than 15,000 men will be organized before December, said Charles E. Hearst, president of the Iowa Farm Bureau, which is sponsoring the movement. When the "Minute Men" are ready for action, there will be nine of their number in each township of the state, according to Hearst. The new division of the farm bureau will act as "a flying wedge" to present accurate information on the national agricultural program to farmers in each county. "Through them," Hearst pointed out, "agriculture will have a working army which can obtain more concerted action when progress made by organized agriculture is threatened by privileged interests." During the past four months more than a dozen counties have been organized. The farm bureau reported 80 counties, which unanimously favored the "Minute Men" organization at a recent meeting, are mobilizing forces. There are 99 counties in the state. The chief purpose of the "army" is to combat huge volumes of propaganda being poured into the

I got these bonds that are worth fourteen and a half—if a fellow can hold 'em a year or two, I'd be willing to let 'em go for the price of the car. If I could find a fellow that'd take 'em off my hands that way, see?"

The GOLDEN FEATHER by Robert Bruce

LEWIS stared at the drink which the waiter put in front of him, and held the glass capped in his hand for a long time, studying it intently. "Listen," he said to Bobby at last. "You and I might be able to do some business, one of these days."

"You mean," Bobby said slowly, "it would amount to my buying these bonds for $10,000, selling them for $12,000 and pocketing the difference?"

Bobby leaned back and wrinkled his brows. "You mean," he said slowly, "that it would amount to my buying them from you for ten, selling them for twelve, and pocketing the difference?"

When she hung up she stared at her typewriter and wondered what had made her say that. Only the day before she had insisted to Sandy that she was "practically engaged" to Bobby, today, when Bobby mentioned the matter, she had reminded him that perhaps the engagement wasn't so very definite after all.

Auto Travel From U.S. to Mexico City Is Growing Fast

MEXICO CITY. — Automobile travel from the United States to Mexico City has become a commonplace occurrence. Motorists from various parts of the United States are now driving all the way in increasing numbers. This flow is expected to increase now that the dry season is at hand, and will reach a grand climax when an expected 1,500 automobiles will drive from Dallas, Texas, when the Laredo-Mexico City highway is officially inaugurated in December.

CHICAGO.—The lateral will pass itself into disuse. In not so few words, but just as definitely, Jock Sutherland, famous coach of the University of Pittsburgh, predicts the future of this play, now the most popular. With hundreds of football teams from coast to coast developing the lateral for all it is worth, why should the veteran Panther mentor see such a dark outlook for it? Certainly it is not because Sutherland does not have a squad which can execute the lateral. No team in the country used it to better advantage than did his last fall. Moreover, the Panthers this year will take every advantage this play offers. Thus, his gloomy prediction is not based on personal feelings.
