Allred is Criticized and Praised for Message

SOLONS HAVE MIXED VIEWS ON MESSAGE

Word to "Get Busy" Ires Some While Others Believe He Is Right.

AUSTIN, Oct. 21.—Governor Allred was denounced and defended on the floor of the house for his message last week ordering legislators to "get busy."

Representatives Sam Hanna, Dallas, and Sam Cooper, Lindale, resented the governor's message. Representative Franklin Spears, Antonio, commended Allred.

Senators by a 19 to 8 vote sent a resolution to the finance committee asking the governor to give specific views on the pension situation. Before the resolution was passed Governor Allred was taken to task for speaking in "glittering generalities."

Senators Cline Small, Amarillo, and Allan Shivers, Port Arthur, commended the administration for not attempting to tell them what to do.

"At the first session he put liquor regulation and a salary bill first. Now he says old age pensions must come first," Cooper told house members. "But nobody in a long time has accused a governor of being consistent and sincere. He is trying to throw 181 legislators to the lions to further his own political ambitions. I am not going to be a sacrifice without a protest. Probably the legislators when they get a taste of blood may go out and eat a lion."

Who's Prettier?

If you had been judging the international beauty contest in Brussels, Belgium, the other day, to which of these high-ranking beauties would you have given first honors? Your vote, more than likely, would go to winsome Louise Lyman, top photo, 19-year-old daughter of the late Chester Walcutt Lyman, American paper manufacturer. But pretty Louise was given third place, the judges giving the crown to an Egyptian girl, Charlotte Wessell, 18, below.

MAN IS IN A BAD CONDITION AFTER A FIGHT

One man was in the City-County hospital at Ranger and another had been turned over to county officers under $750 bond in connection with a fight in Ranger late Saturday night, it was stated today by Chief of Police Jim Ingram of Ranger.

Noah Welsh, about 32, was in a critical condition at the hospital, with some doubt about his recovery, as the result of a severe beating. Welsh was reported to have suffered broken bones about the face and severe lacerations that made his condition serious.

George Stewart was placed under $750 bond by Justice of the Peace J. N. McFatter at Ranger and turned over to county officers on a charge of assault on person, the chief of police stated, pending the outcome of Welsh's condition.

No motive for the fight was immediately determined, though the chief of police said that it occurred between North Marston street and the mountain to the north.

"Welsh was the worst beat up man I ever saw," the chief of police stated Monday morning, "and I did not believe that he would live. However, today, he was reported as showing some improvement."

HOW ESTATE MAY BE BUILT WITH FEDERAL "BABY BONDS" IS TOLD

Building of an estate in the federal government's "baby bonds" was explained to members of the Rotary club in Eastland Monday by W. A. Thomas of Dallas, collector of internal revenue.

The government, Thomas declared, is offering the average American citizen an opportunity to save effectively and safely out of small means.

The speaker sketched the history of government financing in early days to modern times, telling of changes which have occurred with economic conditions.

A portion of Mr. Thomas' address:

"United States savings bonds are issued in denominations of: Twenty-five dollars, fifty dollars, one hundred dollars, five hundred dollars, and one thousand dollars. Those are their maturity values. They mature in 10 years. The prices at which you can buy them today are: $18.75 for the $25 bond; $37.50 for the $50 bond; $75 for the $100 bond; $375 for the $500 bond; and $750 for the $1,000 bond. Regular monthly investment in United States savings bonds, through the magic of compound interest, gives surprising results. This is the way it works out: $18.75 invested each month for 120 months in United States savings bonds will build an income estate of $3,000 guaranteed by the

At the same time two Italian ships passed through Port Said with 1,000 wounded on the Somaliland front, according to the battles in the Ethiopian interior have been far more savage than official dispatches indicate.

Bankhead Act Will Get Test In High Court

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Gov. Eugene Talmadge, bitter new deal foe and presidential aspirant, today won supreme court recognition of his fight to have the Bankhead cotton control act declared unconstitutional.

Government officials named in a suit by the State of Georgia asked permission to file the suit on Oct. 14.

The complaint was nominally filed by the Georgia Attorney General but the brief made clear the action had been brought under the direct instruction of Talmadge, who has used the Bankhead act as a basis for much criticism of the new deal.

Prior to Georgia's petition the court had accepted jurisdiction in an attack on the law brought by Lee Moore, a Texas cotton plantation owner.

Moore's suit did not involve the United States and it was doubtful until the Georgia action was begun whether the new deal would join in the argument.

A Hungry Boy Suicide In A Rich Country!

Someone once said that you can judge a civilization by the way in which it treats its children.

If that is true, what are we to say about the United States of America of the year 1935, in which an 11-year-old boy has just hanged himself so that a little of the weight of the depression might be lifted from the shoulders of his family?

That happened. Unbelievable and tragic as it sounds, it actually happened; in the rich middle western section of the richest nation in the world—in the small city of Willard, O., to be exact.

The boy was Eugene Trushel. At 11, he was the oldest of the five sons of John Trushel, a railway locomotive fireman who lost his job four years ago and has been unable to find work ever since.

For four years the family has been on relief. Every two weeks they have been getting $5 worth of groceries from the local relief office. That isn't very much food for a man and his wife and five healthy children, but it did keep them alive. But the other day the family was told that the local relief office would be closed, and that the grocery orders would cease altogether.

They had a family conference. The parents talked of sending the children to the county orphanage. Eugene begged them not to. He had a pet rabbit, he pointed out; they could eat it, and thus postpone the arrival of actual starvation by at least one day. You must imagine how his father and mother felt when he bravely made this offer.

The matter was left unsettled, and the children went off to school—all but Eugene, who went into the house and hanged himself, so that with one less mouth to feed, his parents might be able to save the other children from the orphanage. His body was discovered, the coroner came, asked questions, and wrote, "Suicide: due to dependency," after the child's name in his record books; and the case was closed.

That's all there is to the story—except for the fact that half an hour later the family learned that it was a false alarm about the relief station closing—and there is pitifully little that we can say about it that will do anyone any good. There is a great deal that we might have done about it, as a society, perhaps, but no words will lessen the shock of the tragedy.

But we ought to keep it in mind. It might keep us from saying insane things like, "People on relief don't really want to work," from clamoring for an end of the "dole" or from supposing innocently that children don't suffer in their very souls from the effect of the depression.

It might help us to understand that simple, ordinary joblessness is the greatest curse of the age—and that if the richest country on earth cannot keep things like this from happening, it is perilously close to spiritual bankruptcy.

Opium Raiders Busy In China

By United Press

HONG KONG, China. — Forty-one persons, 53 pipes and 17 lamps, forming one of the largest opium dives yet discovered here, has been brought to light in a report made by the superintendent of imports and exports.

Daily raids to check the illicit use of opium in the crowded quarters of Victoria and Kowloon seldom fail to bring in large hauls of the prohibited powder. The following is a translation of three notices found in a dive just raided. Waitresses were employed here—a comparatively new departure from the regular routine.

A—"Even to the best friends no credit is allowed here. If credit is asked for after smoking, no consideration will be given."

B—"Nowadays business competition is keen and financial difficulties are great. The proprietor, realizing this, has chosen genuine goods of the best quality and, especially as a sacrifice, is cutting down the price to $1 for 3 mace in order to benefit his customers. Purchases made for smoking either on or off the premises are much welcomed. Night sales carry on until 2 a. m."

In the older style dives the usual Chinese type boards are used for beds. Heroin is more costly—10 cents for four superior or seven inferior pills, whereas the regular cooile spends only 5 cents for a smoke of inferior opium. Heroin is cleaner to handle, does not cause the breath to become foul and is used by the more discriminating smokers who also have the added price to pay for the drug.

A fine of $2,000 recently was imposed on an aged Chinese named Cheung Ching-fu with the alternative of ten months' hard labor, for the possession of sufficient heroin to make 60,000 pills. Another large haul was discovered in a vegetable market basket, contraband from Macao, the Portuguese settlement three hours by boat distant from Hong Kong. There were 1,360 taels of raw opium in the basket, valued at $4,000.

"When our friends favor us with their patronage, payment must be made in cash. No credit is to be given. Will our good friends please excuse this? The place is clean and tidy; the pipes are beautiful and the lamps nice; tea and water are generously supplied; the assistants render good service. For one mace the charge is 35 cents. The opium is good and worthy to be smoked."

Heroin dives are more exclusive and there are more women clients in these. They are also better furnished with European style beds with spring mattresses occasionally found in the more modern dives.

It but remains for each of us to select the income estate we shall demand of our ability to save. Surely the real question is not what we can afford to save with which to buy United States savings bonds, but how much we can afford to spend and take it from our ability to make these regular purchases. United States savings bonds may be bought jointly in the name of husband and wife, two or more children or otherwise. They are exempt both as principal and interest from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, any state, city, county, or other local taxing authority or any possession of the United States, except inheritance taxes, excess profit taxes, war profit taxes and surtaxes on income. As to surtaxes, it must be remembered that under the present income tax law, no surtaxes are paid on moderate incomes; and further, there are certain exemptions applied to certain owners of United States savings and other government bonds. All of which, stated simply and stripped of technical terms, means that United States savings bonds are ordinarily free of all taxation for the small investor. "Your government guarantees you back one-third more at the end of the 10 years than you pay for the purchase of United States savings bonds. This difference between what you pay and what you receive represents an annual interest accruing to you at the rate of 2.9 per cent compounded semi-annually. "Instead of sending you this interest annually or semi-annually, the government retains it and gives you interest on interest, so that at the end of ten years your original investments have grown one-third greater than they were when you made them. Thus the owner of United States savings bonds knows exactly what they will earn for him. He never has to bother about them from the day he buys them at the post office or direct by mail from the United States Treasury, until the day they mature. He doesn't have to remember to clip coupons, because there are no coupons. He doesn't have to reinvest his interest, because it is already reinvested at compound interest. "The owner of a United States savings bond does not have to worry about his bond being stolen or lost or burned up, because it is a registered bond. From the beginning it is in the owner's name and a record of that name is kept by the government. "In short, it is not just a bond, but HIS BOND. If a thief should steal one he would be wasting his time because the bond is not negotiable. The bond cannot depreciate in value. "United States savings bonds are not transferable nor can they be used as security for a loan or otherwise traded in. This provision is made for the sole and excellent reason of protection to the owners of these bonds. "As stated, after 60 days from date of purchase of any of these bonds, the United States Treasury will redeem them on the request of the owner. You can withdraw your purchase money, plus accumulation of interest due, at any time. "But United States savings bonds are savings bonds in the truest sense and should not be bought except for the purpose of meeting some future need and the creation of an income estate. "The fact that these bonds are not transferable means that no person or syndicate need attempt to buy them up at a discount, for it cannot be done. "These bonds have fixed values from the day they are issued until they mature and their price cannot be beaten down on account of any of the owners being forced to sell. "A table of redemption values is included in all descriptive literature and it is also printed on all United States savings bonds. No one can redeem any of these bonds except the owners in whose names they are registered. "These bonds are issued: "To stimulate among the people greater interest in government financing, debt, taxes and expenditures. "To give opportunity to as many as are able, without undue privation, to become actual financial partners with their government, to the end that they may take the same personal interest in its affairs as do stockholders in other corporations. "There are many millions of our citizens who can, with but little self-denial, undertake for their own and their dependants' benefits this safe and profitable plan of systematic saving for future needs. "It is true that these bonds have a 10-year maturity and 10 years from now seems an unending time to work, to wait and to save—but 10 years ago was but yesterday. "This year 1935 will seem as close to us in '45 and '25 seems today. Let's each of us now determine to build our income estate and begin its enjoyment 10 years from now with the same gratification we would have today if this was the year of its maturity. "Your post office is a sales agency for United States savings bonds and you can purchase them there just as easily as you buy a money order. There is no red tape, no waiting, no delay. Should it better suit your convenience you may order your bond purchases direct by mail from the United States Treasury. Any time you desire to buy a bond, or bonds, all you need to do is to write a letter to the United States Treasury, at Washington, D. C., stating the amount of bonds you desire to purchase, and enclose your check or money order to cover and your bond or bonds will be mailed direct to you. "If you are confused over prices or other details, call your post office. "The Secretary of the Treasury can terminate this offering at any time, but the present plan is that these bonds shall remain a permanent feature of the government financing. "The congress in authorizing this issue felt that it was a sound policy that there be as large an infusion of tax-free government securities among the people as possible. "It is suggested that you buy these bonds with only your own purposes and needs in mind such as the assurance of a college education for one or more of the younger members of the family, or to augment your own retirement fund, or any other definite future need. "Remember, you will not be serving yourself or your country by purchasing more than you can afford to save. Buy with a view to getting the most out of your investment and since the government pays you interest on interest, the longer you hold your bonds the greater will be your return. Buy with a view of holding your bonds until 10 years from now. "And now, in conclusion, may I be permitted to say that the treasury and post office departments, in having me come before you today to deliver this message have a two-fold purpose. "The one is to interest each one of you personally in the United States savings bonds. "The other is to have you thoroughly understand the meaning and the purpose of these bonds to the end that you may help further their sale. "We feel that the members of your great organization will prove a most potent force in making known the advantages of the United States savings bonds and we bespeak your individual cooperation which will be most highly appreciated."

At last he shook his head in bitter self-condemnation. "Did you ever see a bigger fool than me?" he asked miserably. Larry smiled at him. "You have seen pretty much of a fool, Bobby," he said. Citrus Marketing Plan Is Approved

MALLEN, Tex.—Officials of the South Texas Citrus Growers' League here announced that they believe the drive to sign up sales contracts with growers of 80 per cent of the lower Rio Grande Valley's 1935-36 citrus tonnage under the Banks L. Miller marketing plan had been successful.

League leaders pointed out that dozens of individual committees, in addition to chambers of commerce and civic organizations, had been at work for the past month and that reports from each of the many groups probably could not be received and tabulated for several days.

Reports from most of the citrus-producing communities indicated, however, that the campaign had been a success and that efforts will be made as soon as definite results are known to place the plan in immediate operation.

Miller, Mallem financier and proponent of centralized marketing of Valley agricultural products, was asked by the League to submit a proposal for marketing the crop through a single agency.

U. S. Annexes Pacific Isles as Air Route Links

Shrouded in secrecy for more than half a year, American "colonization" of Howland, Baker and Jarvis Islands, shown in map above, for use as stepping-stones in a projected transpacific air route to Australia and New Zealand, has been revealed. An American citizen, Harry L. Theiss, is pictured above raising the Stars and Stripes over Howland Island after four Hawaiians, American citizens, had been placed on each island to make them United States property. Though Great Britain is believed to have rival claims to the three Pacific "pin-points," the U. S. State Department asserts that official American claims go back to 1856.

MAVERICK

Words of the writer of Big Dam Chatter at Cisco seems to have been well chosen when commenting on the Eastland-Ranger game so the Maverick Shooter is passing it on to the local boosters:

"Hostle. That's what the Eastland Mavericks have. The Mavs are small, somewhere around the size of the Loboes, but they beat the heavier Ranger Bulldogs Friday through hustling and playing smart heads-up football.

"Take the deciding touchdown, for example. The score was tied at 7-all and Ranger was trying to score. Walsh heaved a pass to Payton in the left side flat. Sikes, Maverick back, was in on the play and, instead of tackling Payton, snatched the ball from his hands and galloped half the length of the field for a score.

"Eastland played that kind of football all afternoon, watching for breaks to take advantage of and making few of those breaks. The Eastland line, outweighed by the Ranger forwards, sifted through continually to stop the big Bulldogs backs before they could get started and block for one another.

"At the same time, the Eastlanders were using some of the prettiest blocking yet seen by small men. When a Maverick leading a play hit a Bulldog, he took him off his feet.

"The Mavs, pepped up by their win over Ranger, will be out to take the scalp of Cisco again when they and the Loboes get together on Chesley field.

"Ranger has a good passing combination in Walsh and Payton, the latter being one of the best receivers to make his appearance in the district in, two or three years.

"Key of Eastland showed much improvement over the first game form in the matter of passing. He still loops his heaves, but his men somehow or other manage to get them much of the time.

"Incidentally, this column, which lamented the fact that Eastland had such a poor excuse for a football stadium last fall, found the field much better than it was at that time, while a near capacity crowd filled the stands on both sides of the field, with many persons on the sidelines.

There ought to be something done to keep the spectators in the stands and away from the fence surrounding the playing field. The higher the perch the better the view is anyway.

Word from East Texas State Teacher's college states Johnny Garrison, ex-Mav, is doing quite right at his new location. He is under the tutelage of Eastland's former coach, S. J. Petty, now assistant ESTC coach. Garrison made two touchdowns for ESTC while playing against the University of Texas freshman team. One of the pay stripe runs was for 95 yards. Garrison also kicked one goal in the game, according to reports.

TEXAS TURKEY CROP SMALLER THAN LAST YEAR

DALLAS—The turkey crop in Texas, which annually supplies a large part of the birds for the nation's Thanksgiving dinner, will probably be about 20 or 25 per cent smaller this year than last year, according to a recent survey.

Last year Texas shipped approximately 1,600 car loads of turkeys, with an average of about 1,900 birds to a car. This season estimates are that between 1,300 and 1,500 carloads will be shipped.

The decrease in this year's crop is generally attributed by growers to heavy rains which occurred during the hatching and incubating season early last spring. The wet weather resulted in losses ranging as high as 40 per cent in some localities where turkey raising is a major farming industry.

At Cuero, in South Texas, where the annual "Turkey Trot" is a major festival at the marketing season, it is estimated that crop will be 25 per cent less than last year.

Meridian and Stockdale, both fairly large turkey marketing centers, indicate that the number of birds shipped this year will be about 40 per cent less than last year.

The price of turkeys for the Thanksgiving market is highly uncertain, according to shippers, and depends largely on the out-of-storage movement of a large supply of frozen birds.

Last year in Texas turkeys sold for about 25 cents a pound at Thanksgiving and 25 cents a pound at Christmas. Shipments generally begin about Nov. 20 to the large Eastern markets.

One encouraging factor is turkeys are generally reported to be of a better quality this year than last. Most growers indicate that their birds will be of better size and the quality of the meat far superior to last year.

Because of the better size, shippers estimate that about 1,600 or 1,700 birds will make a carload this year whereas last year 1,900 were required.

SOUTH DISLIKES TRACTOR
MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Kansas wheat farmers and Iowa corn producers may trade their teams for the tractor, but never the southern cotton-grower. In one week, more than 1,000 mules were sold on the local market recently, all of them bound for the cotton and tobacco fields of the South.
