JAPS BATTLE CHINESE OVER SUCHOW AREA

Japanese troops battled a desperate Chinese rear guard in devastated Suchow today, while their general offensive spread out all along the northern front. Suchow, strategic city along the Lunghai railway, was stubbornly defended. In Mexico, President Cardenas sought to end threats of internal strife by retiring Gen. Saturno Cedillo, who was rumored to be planning a rebellion in San Luis Potosi state, and by making a personal tour of the troubled area to "restore tranquility." The United States, seeking to maintain its good neighbor policy, despite Mexico's suspension of relations with Great Britain, was threatened with diplomatic troubles in Brazil. The government-controlled German press opened a bitter campaign against Americans. In Washington, President Roosevelt signed the $1,157,000,000 naval expansion bill, putting America in the lead of the world's greatest rearmament race. In Great Britain, former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who split with Prime Minister Chamberlain, was reported to have rejected an offer to become first lord of the admiralty.

A New Confession of Impotence

You can get an idea of the queer kind of thinking that desperate people resort to by noticing that a League of Nations commission is now formally considering the creation of neutral zones in wartime for the protection of children.

This proposition, advanced by a well-meaning delegation from Rumania, would have such neutral zones established whenever war broke out. By international agreement, the zones would not be bombed, sprayed by poison gas, or visited by any other of the distinguishing features of civilized warfare.

To these zones would be moved, en masse, all the children from the potential battle areas of the warring countries.

Now the practical objections to this are so many and so obvious that it is hardly necessary to mention them.

The really significant thing is that the mere fact that the proposal was made indicates how desperate the human race is growing under the spur of its own failure to become civilized, and how fuzzy its thinking is under such circumstances.

No man who pretends to be civilized can look on the bombing of cities, the wholesale destruction of non-combatants, the indiscriminate attacks on densely-populated districts, without feeling the most profound horror.

But to suggest, by the way of cure, that we elaborately erect neutral zones and transport children to them by the hundreds of thousands is to confess our utter impotence to solve a problem which we ourselves created.

For the way to stop this horror, after all, is simple: stop bombing cities.

No child was ever killed by a bomb that hit an infantry platoon, an airport, a dockyard, an arsenal, a fort, a barracks or a battleship.

Children are killed only when the generals send their bombers out to attack the districts where the children live.

It is not expecting too much of the generals to ask that they fight soldiers instead of children. After all, their descent into barbarism has not even the saving excuse of practicality; no war and no battle has yet been won by the bombing of children. By continuing the practice, all generals convict themselves of unfitnes to inhabit a civilized world.

And unless we can think of something better than neutral zones, we convict ourselves along with them.

Somebody stole a traffic light in Syracuse, and now the motorists can't steal a base at that spot any more.

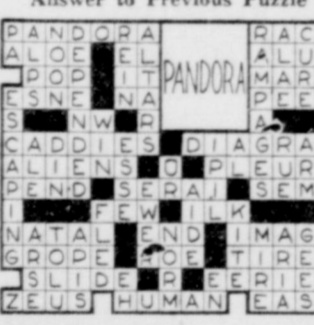

A tornado in Illinois tried to outdo Anthony Comstock. It hurled a book fifty miles.

'GENTLEMEN—PLEASE—ONE AT A TIME!'

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox NEA Service Staff Writer

CAKE is like a woman—happier for two hats. Two frostings for alternate days turns a simple cake into a festival. Here's an easy cake recipe with two flattering frostings to use one after the other.

Busy Day Cake

(2 dozen cup cakes) Three cups sifted cake flour, 1 teaspoon combination baking powder, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 cup softened butter or other shortening, 3 eggs well beaten, 1 1/4 cups milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and sugar, and sift together three times. Add butter. Combine eggs, milk and vanilla and add to flour mixture, stirring until all flour is dampened.

Then beat vigorously for 1 minute. Bake in three greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 25 minutes. Spread orange butter frosting between layers and on top of cake.

If you prefer cup cakes for picnics, this cake may be baked in greased large cup-cake pans in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 20 to 25 minutes, or until done. Spread with chocolate mocha frosting.

Orange Butter Frosting

One and one-half tablespoons grated orange rind, 3/4 tablespoon grated lemon rind, 6 tablespoons orange juice, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 4 1/2 cups sifted confectioners' sugar.

Chocolate Mocha Frosting

Two tablespoons butter, 2 1/4 cups sifted confectioners' sugar, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1-2 square unsweetened chocolate melted, 3 tablespoons strong coffee.

Cream butter. Add part of sugar gradually, blending after each addition. Add vanilla, salt and chocolate and mix well. Add remaining sugar alternately with coffee, until of right consistency to spread.

Tomorrow's Menu

- BREAKFAST: Bananas and cereal, cream, popovers, bacon, jam, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Noodles with creamed shrimp, mixed green salad, dates stuffed with cream cheese, tea, coffee.
DINNER: Breaded veal cutlet, mushroom sauce, mashed potatoes, steamed green beans, Romaine salad, busy day cake with orange butter frosting, coffee, milk.

utes. Strain if desired. Cream butter. Add egg yolk and salt and mix well. Add part of sugar gradually, blending after each addition. Add remaining sugar alternately with fruit juice, until of right consistency to spread. Beat after each addition until smooth. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of three 9-inch layers, or generously the top and sides of 8x8x2 inch cake, or about 3 dozen cup cakes.

SPORT GLANCES By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Service Sports Editor

BALTIMORE—If Dauber, the blunderer, or Maurice Peters, aboard him, can manage to make fewer mistakes, Willie duPont's stretch-running son of Pennant should win the Preakness, May 14.

Owners and trainers held Fighting Fox and the Keeneland track record-setting Bull Lea in such high regard that Stormscurd, Bourbon King, Neddayr, Sun Egret, Bull Whip, Pasteurized, Cravat, and the crack filly Anafame were not shipped from the east to Louisville.

Another good one going in the Preakness, which is at a mile and three-sixteenths, is Quick Devil, a son of Diavolo, which looked mighty sweet copping a pair of races at Jamaica.

Neddayr, though a disappointment in the Wood Memorial, apparently is an animal that is late coming to hand.

DAUBER finished away back in the Wood, but a reputation of his Chesapeake Stakes performance might stir up trouble in the Preakness.

Getting back to the Derby, Dauber was the finest horse in the race—but seems to be one of those thoroughbreds that is always in difficulties.

Shortly after passing the half mile pole, Peters was forced to pull Dauber up when one of the leaders closed over toward the rail.

From there on in it was take to the outside, and turning into the stretch the sapphire colors and blue cap could be seen on the far outside.

Peters waited too long and lost too much ground. Giving you a rough idea of just how good a finisher Dauber is: the chestnut picked up six or seven lengths in the last three-eighths and pushed Lawrin at the wire, to which he was beaten a length.

Songs of Clerk Are Tried by Tenor of Metropolitan Opera

By United Press

BUTLER, Pa.—A 25-year-old shoe store clerk nightly sits at his piano pounding out original compositions because Joseph Bentonelli, Metropolitan tenor, has given him a "new starting point." Howard Green, who does his composing after hours of clerking in his father's shoe store, wants to develop an individual style and "make my own way." He redoubled his efforts at music composition after Bentonelli premiered one of his original songs. Green, who began studying the piano when a boy of 9, has been sending his compositions to Bentonelli since 1936. His first, titled "The Lament," was received with encouragement from the tenor. "I am not certain, but I think I should like to program it some time if the occasion arises." Several weeks ago, Green sent "You are the Evening Cloud." He heard nothing from Bentonelli but while vacationing in Mexico, the tenor was singing Green's song at the American Bankers' association convention in Oklahoma. "His singing is the starting point for me," Green said, who told that his song had been selected by the well-known tenor. "I want to develop an individual style, make my own way. This is the greatest encouragement I can get." Some west coast fishermen have been complaining that pelicans grab their catches right off the hooks. Can you imagine coming back from a fishing trip and finding to get away with that one?

A wise man once said there are two ways to save money: "Increase your income, or cut down your outgo." Much as we'd like to, few of us can regulate the amount of money we take in each week. But all of us have control over what we spend. And many a family bank account has been made possible by careful spending. That's why it will pay you to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Day after day they show you where to get the things you need . . . where to get the fullest dollar's worth for every dollar you spend.

A careful reading of the advertisements . . . today, tomorrow, and every day after . . . will help you to do something that we'd like to do: But what you want—and have money left over!

"And they list her: HOUSEWIFE,"
On census report, or tax return, she may be listed only "housewife," while her husband bears the more definite title of "lawyer," or "doctor," or "storekeeper."
But housewife hardly does this wife and mother justice. She is the modern Jill-of-all-trades. Her job includes being dietician, interior decorator, costume designer, gardener, chauffeur—not to mention educator and health authority.
How does she get away with it? She is informed! Just as her husband depends upon business news in this paper, she finds in the advertising pages the latest facts and price quotations on all the materials needed for her various jobs.
Food for the family? Butcher and grocer answer on these pages... Curtains, spring dresses for mother and daughter, slip covers? Department store and specialty shop are ready. She has preferences about fuels and milk, dental creams and even motor oil—all determined by her persistent, intelligent reading of advertisements.
That's why, when she is termed officially "housewife," she can run six jobs instead of one, and have time left over for amusement and relaxation. (The advertisements help her here too.)

Someone who has me out all night until 3 in the morning, running around."

Trial Flight

BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES COPYRIGHT, 1938, BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JACKIE DUNN—heroine; she is a pilot.
ROGER BRECKEN—hero; he is a pilot.
BERYL MELBROE—heroine; she is a pilot.
LARRY LA FARGE—Jackie's father; he is a pilot.

Yesterday, grimly awaiting the news of Roger, Jackie called the airport. The news that searchers have found Roger's wrecked ship but not Roger.

CHAPTER XV

As long as she lived Jackie would never forget that night of the following day. For during those hours the girl who had been equine Dunn died and a woman was born, a woman who understood the real meaning of life, to face not only life, but death as well, and the dark despair of a living death could be.

Roger's ship had been found, a beautiful silver plane, its nose smashed against a lonely mountain side, its left wing mangled like a discarded piece of paper. But aside from the helmet and parachute—and a splash of blood here and there—no single piece of Roger could be discovered.

It was believed that the pilot, though undoubtedly seriously injured, had managed to climb out of the wreckage of the ship, fully realizing the danger of explosion of fire.

The papers probed Roger up as he who rode his ship down, instead of balling out. Until the very end he had tried to save the 2,000 plane. By so doing he had, in fact, saved his trial flight from being a total failure, for the paragraph, containing the vital words of the speed and altitude, remained intact. It revealed that Roger had broken all records of altitude and speed and had added another page to the glory of future aviation.

As though that mattered, Jackie said to Mac. As soon as she could get there, she had driven to the field again. "As though anything mattered except that you must find Roger."

At least he was alive since his body had not been found, trapped in the cockpit. So that now hope was like a silver star once more.

It had been almost nightfall when the ship had been discovered.

The searchers had diligently increased their forces and zeal, hoping to find Roger before night settled down. In the thick underbrush of the high range it would not be easy, at any time, to find a man—or his body. But after darkness had descended the task would be doubly difficult.

"They'll find him," Mac assured Jackie. "Maybe not until daylight now—it was midnight in the little tower and as yet no word had been received—but they're bound to find him, Jackie. He could not have gone very far, you know, and even after night, they'll send up flares and Roger will see them, or hear them calling."

"If he can answer," Jackie said. Roger had been alive when the ship had cracked up, but that did not mean he was alive now. That last message from him had come through around nine o'clock in the morning; 15 hours had elapsed since then. If those blood stains meant he had been badly cut, he might have bled to death by now. Or he might have been internally injured. Although it was late May, the nights were damp and cold in the densely wooded Alleghenies, so that the long exposure, without food or medicine, might prove fatal, too.

But she would not give up hope. Not even after that long night had finally come to an end, and a dawn broke that was filled with despair, the silver star of hope almost vanished.

"He can't be dead... he can't be..." Jackie repeated over and over to herself all through the following day. She must hold on to that thought so grimly, so faithfully that it would be answered, like a prayer.

Jackie could think of Beryl now in pity and sympathy, all her resentment against this other woman, all her anger and jealousy swept aside. For Beryl had loved Roger, though Jackie alone had known that. Jackie, who knew now—too late—that she, too, had loved him.

FOR this was the awakening, the growing into womanhood that came to Jackie during those agonized waiting hours. She knew that she had loved Roger from the first. She had tried to put up a defense, not only against love itself, but against him. She had thought that love need not hold any place in her life. And now she saw, with this sudden, terrible clarity, that without it—without Roger, life could hold no meaning, nothing except emptiness.

Oh, she was glad now that Mac had managed to slip in that word "two," and that almost the last words Roger had heard had been "Jackie sends luck—and love."

For Roger had known, with such clarity, too, that that had not been pretense—that he had loved her with him.

Though it had not brought him much luck—or the fact that she had worn his pin, Jackie knew now she should not have accepted it. Not in the way she had in anger, in pretense, her heart steeled against him.

Oh, if only Roger could be found in time, so that in some way she could make all this up to him, prove to him how big, how fine her love would be for him.

Prayers sometimes are answered, Jackie's was. Though she was not to know, even then, in her rejoicing, in her thanksgiving and great relief, that her prayer—with all its promises—was to be put to still another test.

ROGER was found that day about four o'clock. He had managed at last, through a long and painful process, to reach the side of a road and to attract the attention of a passing motorist. He had lain unconscious during most of the night, weakened from loss of blood from a severe head wound; chilled and thirsty and hungry. He had managed to half crawl, half drag himself through the heavy underbrush, only a few feet at a time. He had seen the planes searching for him, circling high over head, heard the shots and some distant shouts from the ground, but he had been unable to shout back in response.

His condition was critical, the reports said, but there was hope for his recovery. He had been rushed to the hospital at Phillipsburg.

It was only when she read the last that Jackie burst into tears, a wild fit of weeping that was beyond control. She had held back those tears so long. She had tried so hard to be brave, to hold on to that faintly shining star of hope.

Now, at last, she could let go, find relief in the balm of tears, healing for her spirit—such joy, such gratitude, as she had never known could exist within one human heart.
