Colorado Sand Yields An Ancient Monster's Bones

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col.—A fragment of some large bone, believed to have been from the skeleton of a dinosaur, was removed from the city trash pit and scientists are seeking other parts of the skeleton. The fragment was found lodged next to a large rock. A study of the strata in the bank where it was found indicated by the straightness that the place was once a bore hole of some large body of water and the monster, part of whose skeleton was found, had been buried when the land was dry. Scientists have been unable to determine whether the bone was from a mastodon or a dinosaur. Part of the skeleton of a dinosaur was discovered at one time in the Garden of the Gods and several years ago bones, said to be part of the skeleton of a little three-toed horse, were found in the travel pit at Manitou Springs, a suburb of Colorado Springs. Scientists had searched this area for evidence that three-toed horses had existed here after skeletons of four-toed horses were recovered. The little three-toed horses were only two or three feet tall.

TAXPAYERS INVITED ON WPA CARAVAN

R. Towner Dickinson, area engineer for the Works Progress Administration, Tuesday invited all taxpayers to participate in an autocade for the inspection of projects Wednesday. The autocade, to be led by WPA officials, of political subdivisions and chamber of commerce secretaries and officials, will begin at 9 o'clock at the city hall in Ranger. Projects at Ranger, Eastland, Gorman and Cisco will be visited. County road projects will be visited in transit. "For nearly three years," declared Dickinson in a form letter, "the WPA, in cooperation with Eastland county and political subdivisions within the limits of the county, have been spending your money—the taxpayers' money. This money has been spent to give employment to men who, through no fault of their own, would have no other means of providing a living for themselves and their families. "It is the policy of the WPA to undertake work and to execute projects only which are of a permanent character and of benefit to the community. "The taxpayers owe it to themselves to take advantage of this trip to view the accomplishments of the last three years that they may judge for themselves the accomplishments of the county, the community and the WPA."

Cleveland's Torso Killer Strikes Again

From the greasy Cuyhoga river in the center of Cleveland, detectives drag a burlap bag containing the dismembered torso of a 25-year-old woman—the 10th victim of the mad butcher-killer who has terrorized the city since 1934. Thus is written another chapter in what is probably the most gruesome and bizarre crime mystery in American history. Though the killer is known to have struck at least 10 times, police are without clues as to his identity or the identity of most of the victims, all of whom have been decapitated.

County's Rates Announced For Crop Insurance

COLLEGE STATION.—Crop insurance which will guarantee insured wheat growers three-fourths of an average wheat crop in 1939 will cost farmers of Eastland county an average of nine bushels per acre, according to figures announced at the state wheat meeting recently held at Amarillo. For insurance that guarantees one-half of an average crop, the rate will average two bushels per acre in Eastland county. The county rates reflect the average per acre loss in this county during the 10 years 1926-1936. The premium that an individual wheat grower will have to pay for insurance will depend half on his county rate and half on the crop losses on his own farm. The rates for each farm will be computed in the branch office of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. The cost of insurance is not based on the average amount of yield but on the year-to-year variations in yield. "Two farmers with the same average yield for the 10-year period would not necessarily pay the same premium for the same percentage," E. N. Holmgren, administrative officer of the Texas AAA office at Texas A. & M. College, who attended the meeting, pointed out. The farmer who suffered but little crop loss would pay less than the farmer who suffered frequent and heavy losses, even though their average yields were the same. "The figures farmers need for calculating their insurance will be available for farms which took part in wheat adjustment programs in the office of the county agricultural agent and the county committee, about which the county crop insurance program will center. Farms on which figures are not available will be appraised. The premium a farmer pays covers only the actual cost of the insurance. Administration costs and costs for storage of insurance reserved will be paid by the corporation."

WAR RUMBLE OVERSHADOWS PEACE MOVES

The rumble of war in China and Spain mounted today as Great Britain sought to maneuver the League of Nations into legalizing her new policy of keeping Europe's peace by "realistic" diplomacy. Even as British statesmen argued at Geneva, the greatest Japanese offensive of the China war got underway. In the Szechow area 800,000 Chinese were coming to a death grip with the encircling invaders and far to the south at Amoy, where Japanese naval forces and airplanes made a surprise attack. At Hongkong a United States warship was dispatched to Amoy to evacuate Americans endangered by the Japanese attack. United States authorities said 26 Americans and 23 Filipino citizens resided in Amoy. In Spain loyalist troops defending the road to Valencia, rallied under the leadership of Canadian volunteers and reportedly seized important positions behind the insurgent lines. Fighting also was renewed in the League of Nations Council, Britain, backed by France, asked the league to ignore past policy and provide a legal pretext or recognizing the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. Such recognition is the key to Britain's new friendship with Italy. Chinese representatives reported their armies had "shattered the myth" of Japanese military invincibility, but demanded that theirization be given aid. Elsewhere: Czechoslovakia: The government ordered cabinet ministers to remain "on call" as one of the most critical weeks in Czech history brought closer a showdown with the Nazis. Berlin: Adolf Hitler, returning from his visit to Rome, was greeted with a mass demonstration. Foreign office sources reported that Hitler and Mussolini had agreed that a four-power friendship treaty with France and Britain must give Germany a free hand in Central Europe. German newspapers emphasized that the visit had strengthened the Rome-Berlin axis to the point where an unwritten military alliance existed. That version, however, was not borne out in Rome where it was reported Mussolini went no further than to promise neutrality in event of war in Czechoslovakia.

OIL WORKER QUESTIONED IN OLD MURDER

HOUSTON, May 10.—A 36-year-old oil field worker, held in city jail, was eliminated by officers today as a suspect in the torture murders of Mrs. Weston Frome and her daughter, Nancy, but he was questioned further about a murder in Missouri. The man was arrested in Fort Bend county on information from El Paso and Van Horn, where the Frome killings occurred March 30th. After notifying West Texas officers, however, Houston police were informed the man was not the suspect wanted for forgery in El Paso, on which the Frome angle was based. A nine-year-old boy found with the man was questioned on his story the man killed another in Dover, Mo., or in Oklahoma in 1922 or 1923, ran away with his victim's wife and assumed the dead man's name. Elsewhere: Czechoslovakia: The government ordered cabinet ministers to remain "on call" as one of the most critical weeks in Czech history brought closer a showdown with the Nazis. Berlin: Adolf Hitler, returning from his visit to Rome, was greeted with a mass demonstration. Foreign office sources reported that Hitler and Mussolini had agreed that a four-power friendship treaty with France and Britain must give Germany a free hand in Central Europe. German newspapers emphasized that the visit had strengthened the Rome-Berlin axis to the point where an unwritten military alliance existed. That version, however, was not borne out in Rome where it was reported Mussolini went no further than to promise neutrality in event of war in Czechoslovakia.

A Teacher, a Student, and a Log

We are approaching the season when college and university presidents, beaming down from commencement platforms, will proudly announce that good old Alumnus So-and-So has been moved by the spirit of philanthropy to give half a million or so for new buildings or endowment.

Dr. Thomas Whitney Surette, of the faculty of Black Mountain College told a New York audience the other day that his college wouldn't take a million dollars if someone offered it.

Black Mountain College is situated near Asheville, N. C. It is a small institution, with a student body of 50 or thereabouts, and it wants to stay small.

In a day when almost every college is straining its nerves to be as big and as rich as possible, it is extremely refreshing to run across one which is content to both small and poor.

"We have been called radical and strange, but I call our plan just old. It is a sloughing off of all this paraphernalia which clutters up most education, and a getting down to human beings.

There is a great deal of good sense in that. Remember the old saying?—that a college is nothing more, essentially, than a log with a teacher sitting on one end and a student sitting on the other.

We have managed to confuse bigness with goodness in almost every walk of American life. Our commonest delusion is that no human institution can really work right unless it has plenty of money and knows how to get more.

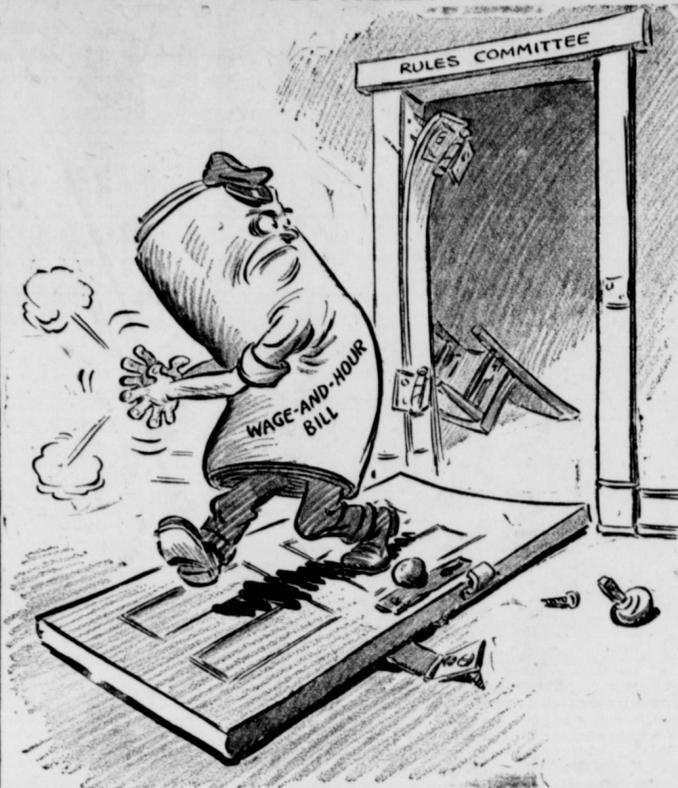

So we tend to appoint "good moneyraisers" or "able administrators" to our college and university presidencies, and let the thirst for pure learning take care of itself.

It is a good thing to realize that there is another standard for judging such things—a standard by which neither money nor size is so very important.

Q. Of what woods was the capitol wainscoting constructed and why was wood used?

A. The wainscoting is of native Texas woods to show the excellence of Texas building material. It includes oak, pine, cherry, cedar, walnut, ash and mahogany.

Q. What was the cost of the present capitol of Texas?

A. The building was erected in exchange for 3,000,000 acres of land in the Texas Panhandle, the estimated value of which at the time was $1.00 an acre.

Q. What route did the Ramon-Hidalgo expedition follow to the Texas country?

A. The route was the general direction of the Camino Real (Old San Antonio Road) by way of the sites of the present New Braunfels and San Marcos, crossing Plum creek at Lyton Springs and the Colorado river a short distance below Austin and thence across Brushy creek in a general north-easterly direction.

Q. What are the dimensions of the Texas State capitol building?

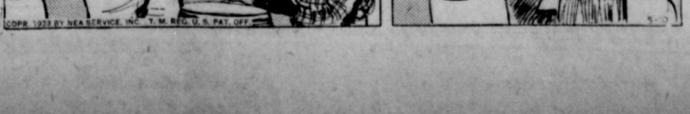

A. Including porticos, but not the steps, the length is 528 feet, the depth, 290 feet. The height from the grade line to the top of the star on the statue is 311 feet, seven feet taller than the National capitol. The building covers three acres of ground and has 18 acres of floor space.

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON--The movement to cancel the embargo on arms to Spain has accumulated a great deal of unseemly strength.

German Ambassador Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff has been so sensitive to this fact that he recently called at the State Department with a remarkable secret warning.

In case this government was considering lifting the embargo, he said, he wanted to suggest that any American arms bought by the Spanish loyalist government probably would fall into the hands of Rebel General Franco and that, if not shipped, carry such arms would almost certainly be sunk.

Since this government doesn't accord belligerent rights to Franco and doesn't recognize that Germany--or Italy--has any place in the Spanish war picture or any right to talk to this government about it, the reaction was sour in high places.

Especially since it is commonly believed that the Franco blockade of loyalist ports is made effective only by German and Italian submarines.

But the reluctance of top American officials to aid fascist nations conquer democratic nations is exceeded only by their fear of getting into foreign quarrels.

It was after Dieckhoff's visit that President Roosevelt told a visiting senator of the dangers involved in lifting the Spanish embargo.

A majority of members of the Senate Foreign Relations committee is understood to be sympathetic to lifting the embargo and officials whose support for the movement would be decisive admit the embargo was an injustice.

The administration's failure to act, plus the fact that the question still remains very much at issue, stands against a background which emphasizes the confused Washington attitude toward the European situation ever since Roosevelt and Secretary Hull were jolted by the forced resignation of Foreign Minister Anthony Eden.

The embargo on arms to Spain was devised in the State Department and railroaded through Congress under the name of "neutrality," while Secretary Hull was away. Unprecedented in its denial of war supplies to a recognized, friendly government, the measure was admittedly meant to supplement the British "non-intervention" policy.

But Hitler and Mussolini poured troops and materials into Spain until the government's position became desperate and this government has been informed that its embargo was the biggest single factor in fascist victories.

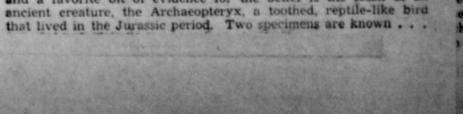

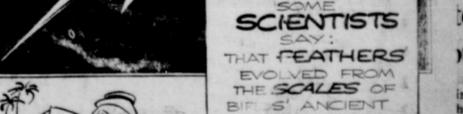

The dominant forces in the British government appear to have been pro-Franco all the time. The British "non-intervention" policy long ago became farcical and the Chamberlain government now has approved maintenance of Italian troops in Spain until they win the war.

Loyalist Spain's need for planes and other war materials she wants to buy has been obvious and one of Roosevelt's two or three most influential foreign affairs advisers says "We are about as neutral as if we had sent the Marine Corps to fight for Franco."

"Girls perched on high stools the men rested their evening pumps on the chromium rail. Chet had a brunet with pearls on his left. That was how he thought of them. Terry had been right in her guess that Si's friends would like him. He had lost weight since his dress suit had been made and it hung loosely on his long rangy figure. But he wore it with the cool indifference of a man to which trifles matter not, and the girls found his lean and earnest face and intense dark eyes interesting."

It was the exotic Si herself, spoiled darling of New York society and niece of the wealthy Mrs. Towers, who found the earnest young architect who came to call on Terry Hilton, her aunt's secretary, more than "interesting." Si was one of those "who have" but that did not prevent her from setting out to steal Chet from Terry. If you judge wealth by dollars and cents only, Terry was poor, but when Refus Fowler, polo player and society favorite, met her he was to find a genuineness and sincerity which he had sought for in vain in his own set.
