The Realist as Blunderer

The starry-eyed idealist can get into a good deal of trouble, what with his habit of stepping out into traffic with his eyes on the heavens. But there are times when it does seem that the coldly practical realist can get into more of a tangle than a dozen idealists put together.

What ails the international set-up in Europe these days, if not a dose of super-realism, applied cold-bloodedly by practical men whose boast it is that they have tossed idealism overboard as a delusion and a snare?

We are witnessing right now the final death-rattle of the League of Nations. When Britain and France inform the League, as they are to do within a few days, that they are giving formal recognition to Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, the League will be just about ready for the undertaker. And when they follow that by requesting the League to abandon the Stimson policy of refusing to recognize territories acquired by force, as they are expected to do, the work of nailing down the coffin lid will have begun.

All of which has a direct bearing on this question of idealism versus realism.

With all its faults, the League was the work of idealists. That is, it did represent an effort to substitute international law for the law of the jungle. The effort may have been weak, and half-hearted, but it was a step toward a more enlightened and civilized world order for all that.

What is replacing it is, very clearly, nothing less than a return to the ancient balance-of-power system. Europe once more divides into armed camps, whose inmates arm to the teeth and remain at peace only so long as neither side can see any percentage in starting a fight. That is a system which makes peace expensive and war inevitable. It could be followed, one would think, only by people who had completely blinded themselves to the painful lesson of 1914.

Yet it is precisely this system which is being revived by the clear-eyed realists.

Prime Minister Chamberlain of England has openly said that he is following a policy of realism. His French allies have said the same. On the opposite side of the fence, Dictators Hitler and Mussolini have long boasted of the utter absence from their scheme of things of any taint of idealism.

Yet this vaunted realism can give the world nothing better than a return to the road to war!

The idealist may stumble and fall often enough, with his eyes on the stars. But can he ever get the world into a worse mess than this which the realists are cooking up?

A New York dance teacher declares the modern dance ought to have less of the spirit of defiance in it, and more of the spirit of love and appreciation. He probably wants it to set an example for the audiences.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

HAILSTORM IS DAMAGING TO CISCO LANDS

CISCO, May 28.—The desolation of mid-winter reigns over a strip about a mile wide and four miles long northwest of Cisco where Thursday night the worst hailstorm in a generation denuded trees of every shred leaf, beat bountiful wheat and oat crops into the ground and destroyed thousands of acres of heavy grass range. Damage will run into many thousands of dollars for the farmers and ranchers in the narrow strip affected.

Shingle roofs were beaten off buildings, windows were smashed and even iron clad roofs were rumbled up by the terrific force of the hail. Possibility exists that some cattle and other livestock may have perished in the storm. The hail appeared to follow the course of Battle creek on the east side. The worst part of the strip extended from the Lone Star Gasoline company's plant northwest of Cisco 13 miles on Highway 23 to the creek. Within that area limbs were broken from trees, bark stripped from their trunks and even sapling-beaten to the earth. Grass and other vegetation was pounded into pulpy masses on the ground.

The greatest fury of the hail seemed to have expended itself on the Dyer and Qualls ranches, owned by G. P. Mitcham, where 700 acres of wheat and oats were completely ruined, without a stalk left upright. The fields appeared as if they had been cut. Windows in the Mitcham show barns were smashed, shingle roofs on buildings beaten away, and tin roofs rumbled by the volleys of icy missiles, some of which were as large as a man's hand.

Van Farmer, whose farm lies on the edge of the affected strip, said that wheat and oats which he was preparing to harvest were not worth the effort, although his fields were less damaged than those farther west. The Pence and Agnew ranches suffered damage similar to that of the Mitcham properties. The McClelland farms likewise sustained heavy damage.

Many farm homes throughout the area were practically without roofs today. The Cottonwood school house had holes knocked in the roof large enough to put an arm through. The storm broke shortly before 8 o'clock Thursday night and continued for about 30 minutes Mr. Farmer said. Drifts of hailstones a foot or more in height piled up, and melted into masses of rotter ice, which soaked the desolated soil with water.

Appearance of the denuded strip cutting across the rich green country like a dark, wintry scar, was almost unbelievable. Many of the farmers and ranchers have been left in almost hopeless condition so far as revenues this year are concerned. Total damage cannot be estimated, but an idea of its extent may be gained from Mr. Mitcham's estimate of his own loss, which he placed at not less than $10,000. Although the wheat and oat crop loss is heavy, ranchers regarded damage to their pastures as the most serious item. The finest grass cover in years was ruined and considerable time will be required before it puts out again in sufficient amount to carry the stock.

Fortunately, the strip did not extend very far and only a small proportion of the grain crops and the range will be affected. But that which was in the path of the hail is now a total loss.

DEBT OF 1894 PAID

By United Press. PIERCE CITY, Mo.—An old man who said he had "been aiming to get around for some time" gave Ed Buchner, a store operator here, a bushel of apples for payment of a debt he had contracted in 1894. Buchner could find no record of the debt but the old man said he owed the money for a laprobe.

A wise man once said there are two ways to save money: "Increase your income, or cut down your outgo."

Much as we'd like to, few of us can regulate the amount of money we take in each week. But all of us have control over what we spend. And many a family bank account has been made possible by careful spending.

That's why it will pay you to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Day after day they show you where to get the things you need . . . where to get the fullest dollar's worth for every dollar you spend.

A careful reading of the advertisements . . . today, tomorrow, and every day after . . . will help you to do something that we'd like to do: But what you want—and have money left over!

CHAPTER XXIV

THE telegram that Jackie had received was from Beryl. It stated that she was returning at once and that she was bringing with her a famous surgeon in whom she had the greatest confidence.

"I told her it was no use," Roger said. "Dr. Watson ought to know his stuff—what can any other doctor do? But you know how Beryl is—she seems to take the blame for all this on herself—she simply won't give up."

"She's a wonderful person," Jackie said. "Poor Beryl... of course she was taking it on herself. Hadn't she told Jackie that if anything serious happened to Roger she never would forgive herself? But as for giving up, well Jackie would not do that either. She would never surrender the hope that Roger would be made well, that he would walk again. Maybe her faith, her prayers, would help in this as they had before.

The surgeon and Beryl arrived that next morning. Beryl herself had piloted the ship back. She had felt there was no time to lose. Jackie never knew to what lengths she had gone to persuade this great doctor to accompany her, what amount of money she must have paid to secure his service. She did know that Beryl would have spent her entire fortune, gladly, if that could have made Roger well.

"Do you really think there is any chance?" Jackie asked Beryl during the long hours of waiting that the two spent together. Perhaps it would have been easier for Roger at least, not to have been given this new spark of hope if it would blaze but a brief moment into sputter and burn into dead ashes of despair again.

Beryl did not answer at once. Perhaps she was thinking the same thing. For if the verdict this time was that Roger never would be able to walk, then hope would indeed be dead.

"There is—just a chance," she said. "It lies in the fact that Roger was able to crawl all that distance after the plane crashed. You see he couldn't have done that if his back had been injured as Doctor Watson believed it was."

It was when I told this to Doctor Vendetti that he consented to take Roger's case. But he would not hold out much hope, even then.

"Well, we will!" Jackie returned stubbornly. It was simply impossible to accept the fact that Roger would never walk again. It was a miracle now that he was alive, a miracle brought about by courage and faith and love. If one miracle could be achieved by such power as was contained in these three things, why not another?

Miracles do happen, sometimes more than once. And who knows but what it is love and faith and courage, though they be intangible things, that bring them about? Jackie could not have answered these questions; perhaps no one could. But Doctor Vendetti, great surgeon that he was, decided after he had made his examination, that an operation might bring this miracle about. And Doctor Vendetti added that he would have to rely in part on those same intangible powers.

"There is a chance," the great surgeon told Jackie and Beryl, "that this operation will fix this boy's back, but we must all have great faith, great courage, if we are to help make him well."

"You mean," Beryl asked, her dark eyes returning the great doctor's keen, piercing look, "that there is also the chance that Roger may not be able to put through—your operation?"

The great man inclined his head. "Is this the only way?" Jackie protested. "Unless you operate, Roger can never walk again?"

"Even then it is only a chance," the doctor said sternly. "Sir, there is no one else to make it. I must leave it up to you."

Beryl turned to Jackie. "You are the one," she said. "Doctor Vendetti doesn't operate Roger will live—but he'll never walk. If the operation is successful Roger may not only walk, but maybe he will even fly again!"

Jackie did indeed have to summon all her courage, all her faith, now. If her love had not been bigger than these, bigger than anything else in the world, she would not have answered as she did. "I would like you to perform the operation, Doctor Vendetti," she said. "I know that that is what Roger would want me to say... for him."

Doctor Vendetti inclined his head again, before he turned on his heel and strode briskly out of the hospital waiting room. But his keen eyes had paid Jackie tribute for her brave decision. The operation was performed that same day. There was no point in postponement. Jackie wondered how the sun could go on shining so gayly in the town's little square, how life could go on, as usual, while Roger lay unconscious, still, on an operating table in the little hospital at the mercy of a surgeon's knife, in the unseen hands of a greater power.

But Roger died, if he never came out of that strange sleep, she—Jackie, who loved him so—would feel that her hands, too, had broken the delicate thread that held his life.

HAD she been right in believing that Roger would not want to live unless he could walk again? Roger who had lived among the clouds, who had piloted a silver ship high up above this world in the stratosphere.

But Roger did not die. Doctor Vendetti and those intangible powers performed that second miracle. The operation was successful. Roger not only would live, but some day would walk again.

"I will take time now," the great surgeon told Jackie gravely, as he bid her goodbye, for Beryl was to fly him back East again. "You must still stand by, my dear, and help this boy fight through. It will be a long, slow, tedious battle, but the victory will be so triumphant that it will be worthwhile in the end. Weeks yet in bed, months in a wheel chair, natches at first after that. But your young man will learn to walk again. And yes, the keen eyes, help him fight through, teach him to walk again."

This was the news that Jackie would give Roger when he regained consciousness again. She could be by his side when he called her name, she would stand by, help him fight through, teach him to walk again.

That was a big enough job for any woman, enough to fill one's life. Jackie did not want to do anything more important than that. Gladly, gratefully she would dedicate her life to this.

"Your young man is calling for you now," a nurse beckoned to Jackie. "Will you follow me, please."

Yes, Jackie would follow—follow her love for all eternity, with courage and faith, but with such love as can induce conquer the stratosphere.

THE END.

Public cordially invited.

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 29.

The Golden Text is: "Take heed that no man deceive you" (Matthew 24:4).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Put on the whole armour of God," that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil" (Ephesians 6:11).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Never fear the mental malpractitioner, the mental assassin, who, in attempting to rule mankind, tramples upon the divine Principle of metaphysics; for God is the only power" (page 419).

Witness Tells Why Students Pay Fees On Some Exams

AUSTIN, Tex.—A country school official testifying at the trial of Miss Edgar Ellen Wilson, second assistant state school superintendent who was acquitted a few days ago on charges of misapplication of public funds, told why pupils in small schools are willing to pay fees for entrance examinations to college, instead of taking the examinations free at the colleges.

The examinations directed by the state education department are conducted at the high schools, saving the students the expense of a trip to the college town—an expense that would be useless if the student failed to pass the examination. The quiz questions are sent out by the state department of education to an official who conducts the examination and re-

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—No one can tell yet how well or badly the new farm program will work out, but events have progressed far enough to indicate that it may be headed for plenty of trouble.

The wheat carryover threatens to be the largest in history and the government is fairly certain to be up to its neck in loans to farmers on that commodity. The cotton carryover is being estimated at around 12,000,000 bales and although a 35 per cent cut in cotton acreage has been called for, farmers are reported piling so much fertilizer on their soil that the effectiveness of the cut is problematical.

The corn crop situation also worries AAA officials.

Some pessimists predict that the government will have to keep on making crop loans and that acreage cuts in future years must be made increasingly more drastic as larger supplies accumulate. The specter of non-operation is especially bothering AAA.

Under the act, no marketing quota is provided for the 1938 crop. But the supply is so large that Secretary Wallace is expected to make allotments for the 1938 crop which would cut wheat acreage from 80 million acres to 70 million acres. Wheat loans on the 1938 crop seem certain.

COTTON: Growers voted more than 90 per cent in favor of marketing quotas on the 1938 crop. Acreage allotments reduced a program average of 42,800,000 acres to 28,000,000 acres. The supply for this year is about 24,500,000 bales, whereas a supply of only 19,500,000 bales is required in order to have a marketing quota vote.

CORN: Acreage allotments have been cut from 47 to 40 million acres in "commercial" corn counties. The carryover next October is expected to be two average size. August crop reports will tell whether the quota level of 2,800,000,000 bushels supply exceeded. If so, Wallace will announce corn marketing quotas of the 1938 crop, subject to ratification by a two-thirds vote of eligible farmers.

TOBACCO: Farmers have voted for marketing quotas on flue-cured and dark air-cured and freeze-dried tobacco, supplies having overrun quota levels. Individual allotments on burley tobacco haven't yet been made.

RICE: No marketing quota was provided for rice for 1938, although the supply is above the quota level. Acreage allotments are yet to be made.

Here's what is happening under this program to date:

WHEAT: Confusion as to allotments was expected, as winter

Weekly Sunday School Lesson
Maintaining Efficiency.
Text: Daniel 1:8-16, 19, 20; 1 Cor. 9:24-27.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

DANIEL stands among those great typical figures of heroic virtue, so many of whom the Jewish people have given to the world.

He is the great example of the man with the courage of his convictions, whose strength of character and firmness of purpose were rooted in self-discipline and temperance. When he had the privileges of the court with all its luxuries and dainties, he refused to weaken himself with indulgence in these, or in strong drink, and he asked the prince of the eunuchs, who had charge of these matters, that he might be permitted to decline them.

It is well to note that, instead of being put down as a weakling or a sissy or whatever might have corresponded to this in those days, the prince of the eunuchs respected Daniel's convictions. He had the mistaken notion that high living is conducive to prosperity and health, and he feared for the result if Daniel should appear in worse form and appearance than the youths who had been entrusted to his care.

ALL Daniel wanted was the opportunity to prove that temperance, restraint, and self-discipline would produce the right results.

Ten days were sufficient to settle the matter, for the astemuous Daniel and his companions after the 10 days' fast showed themselves in far better health than those who had partaken of wine and high foods.

The lesson is one that is being widely neglected today, but it is one of the greatest of the facts of life and history. Here and there some man of phenomenal physique seems to thrive in spite of his evil habits, but such a man is the exception, and even he is usually overcome in the end.

History, the records of athletes and of endurance, are all on the side of temperance and self-control.

Paul, who was a keen observer, enforced the rule of temperance from the ancient games and contests. He observed that it was only those who were well trained and disciplined who won the prizes in these ancient games. He drew the conclusion that, if these athletes would undergo strict self-discipline for the sake of an earthly crown, why should they not do the same for the sake of an incorruptible crown?

"DARE to be a Daniel" is still a good watchword for modern youth.

We of the older generation sing it:

Dare to be a Daniel,
Dare to stand alone!
Dare to have a purpose firm,
And dare to make it known!

It is good counsel for an age that needs independence and character.

Many Trips Are Ruined by Tires

Advent of Spring is responsible for ruining the temper and disposition of many an otherwise peaceful motorist.

At least that's the opinion of C. T. Lucas of Lucas Service Station, local dealer for The Good-Year Tire & Rubber Company, and when you've heard his explanation, it sounds logical.

"The explanation is simple," said Mr. Lucas. "In the first place Spring brings those nice warm days—everyone has been longing for all Winter. When the warm days come the average motorist gets the urge to get off the crowded streets of the town or city, and take a nice trip through the country. And that's where the trouble starts if—and this is a big "if"—he hasn't carefully checked his tires before starting.

"A lot of car owners will get the old bus out the first warm Sunday, shine it all up, have the engine checked over, and then get the wife and kids and start out for an afternoon's drive, without even thinking about tires, or if they do think about them, decide they'd probably be okay for another few thousand miles anyway.

"That's where they make their big mistake. Oh, thin, worn tires are the kind that usually fail first. Heat is the natural enemy of tire life and the highways get pretty hot these days. First thing the motorist knows one of his old tires has failed, possibly sending the car into the ditch or into the line of oncoming traffic, with serious results. On any case, a tire failure means delay, inconvenience and ruined tempers.

"Answer, of course, is to replace old tires with brand new ones. Then the car owner is assured of the best possible performance during the Summer with maximum protection against tire failure. And, too, if he gets tires with center traction, such as the Goodyear G-3 or R-1, he also has maximum protection against dangerous skids in event the pavement is made slippery by rain."

DRIVING AS SCIENCE URGED

By United Press
STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal.—Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, advocates as future basis for traffic accident prevention the persistent and prolonged education of future drivers from childhood. He declares improvements in the automobile have been perfected to such an extent that highway safety will depend more on the driver than on the car.

Cooling Power of Sun Spots Great

By United Press
MINNEAPOLIS—Sun spots are the best refrigerator known to man, and they work on the same principle as man-made refrigerators, according to Prof. John W. Evans, acting chairman of the University of Minnesota astronomy department.

He explained that "the heated gas expands and cools the atmosphere. While the temperature of the sun is 10,800 degrees Fahrenheit, the center of this whirlpool is only 7,200 degrees. The sun spot could make an object taken from the sun's atmosphere 3,600 degrees cooler."

Magnetic storms seem to correlate closely with the appearance of sun spots, he said. The aurora borealis also apparently is correlated with sun spots crossing the sun. Experiments at the University of Arizona have proved that trees grow better at a maximum period of the sun spots, he said.

"Although the sun spots appear black," he said, "if all light from the sun were shut off, they would be too bright to look at. If an observer from another planet saw our tornadoes, they would appear similar to the sunspots, which travel at a rate of 150 miles a second."

The spots are so large—100,000 miles in diameter—that our earth could be dropped through the center "and it would be lost somewhere in the core," Evans said.

Four Wichita Falls Stars Are Selected On "North" Team

By United Press
LUBBOCK, Tex.—Four football stars from the 1937 Wichita Falls high school team that lost the Texas Interscholastic league championship to Longview will head the 22-man "North" Texas football heroes in a game here Aug. 6.

The two all-star teams will be coached by Harry Stuldreher of Wisconsin (North) and Lynn Waldorf of Northwestern (South) as part of the Texas High School Coaches Association school.

The "North" squad was chosen by Howard Lynch of Amarillo high, Bill Meyers of Paschal (Ft.

Worth), and Harry Taylor of San Angelo. Besides the four members of the sectional champion Wichita Falls teams—Fullback Harold Fleming, Guard Arthur Goforth, Center Odell Damerall, and Tackle Ed Brand—the coaches chose four Fort Worth players, three from Dallas, two from El Paso, and one each from Lubbock, Amarillo, San Angelo, Pampa, Ol-ney, Sweetwater, and Nocona. Jack Crain, backfield star of the 1937 Nocona team, was the only "North" nominee from Class B ranks.

Other players chosen: Ends—Brumbaugh, Riverside (Ft. Worth); Judd, Vernon; King, Amarillo; Melton, Woodrow Wilson (Dallas). Tackles—Lowry, Austin (El Paso); Ware, Lubbock; Crawford, North Side (Ft. Worth). Guards—Pappa, San Angelo; Matthews, Pampa; Lowery, Paschal (Fort Worth). Center—Virden, Abilene. Backs—Wardy, Austin (El Paso); Reese, North Side (Fort Worth); Patrick, Olney; Niblo, Adamson (Dallas); Young, Sweetwater; Gay, Highland Park (Dallas).
