RAILROADS TO REDUCE WAGES AFTER JULY 1ST

WASHINGTON, May 12.—American railroads today formally notified laboring that they will reduce basic wages 15 percent on July 1. The wage cuts, which rail labor leaders have announced they will resist, will effect an estimated 1,000,000 workers. "This action is compelled by conditions now confronting the railroad industry," the statement said. "We wish the public and railroad employes to know what those conditions are." The action, calculated to save $250,000,000 annually invokes the machinery of a lengthy mediation system provided by the railway labor act. That statute provides for conferences between management and labor. Resistance by rail labor would delay final decision on the reduction far beyond July 1.

L O N SMITH RAPS ACTION ON SHUTDOWN

DALLAS, May 12.—Railroad Commissioner Lon Smith today condemned the action of Commissioners Ernest Thompson and C. V. Terrell in ordering Saturday shutdowns of Texas oil fields. Smith, the minority member, charged that the commission had failed to deal successfully with overproduction. "I favor a program of strict proration," he said. "This can be accomplished without closing down oil wells. The commission has failed and refused to employ agencies at its command in dealing with the situation. "Restricted drilling could have been enforced. The commission is authorized to meter wells and pipelines and this the commission has failed and refused to do." Thompson and Terrell issued an order for Saturday shutdowns for all Texas wells for the next four Saturdays, because of steady overproduction for several months Texas fields have been closed on Sunday.

Hughes Urges 'Spirit of the Just Judge'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the Supreme court admonished government quasi-judicial agencies to temper their actions with the "spirit of the just judge" and urged a vigilant guard against unqualified judges. she meant it, but of course Jackie could see through her. "It was nice of you to come," she returned politely. It was just lovely of you to spoil my whole evening, she might have added. But she had no intention of letting this other girl know that.

"Of course I'll see you again," Beryl said. "You'll be coming to the field to see Roger take off. You must be genuinely proud to be engaged to him!" As she said this last, she turned her big dark eyes toward Roger, with a look that, although Jackie did not know anything about love, could be easily read.

Why, Beryl Melrose was in love with Roger! Really in love with him. This knowledge was like an icy shower descending upon Jackie's head. She did not know why it should be that. It could not make any difference in her young life.

"Of course I'm proud of him," Jackie said. She had meant to say it. But she just did. She, too, gave Roger a look; a shy, smiling one that seemed to say how proud she was, more than any words. For suddenly Jackie had been seized with an idea of her own! She really would put on an act. She really would make people believe in this ridiculous engagement. Even Roger himself! Then she would indeed have the laugh on him.

HE was looking at her in his puzzled masculine way. "You sounded as though you meant that," he said. "I haven't done anything to be proud of yet."

"But you will!" Jackie flashed. Now she stepped closer to him, slipping an arm through his, looking up at him again. "You know," she said to Beryl Melrose, "Roger and I are going to be married just as soon as he comes back from his flight."

"We are!" Roger looked quite astonished at this news, as though it was the first he had heard of it—as indeed it was. "That tonight," Jackie said. "At least, I did." She flashed Roger another shy, sweet smile. She was not Evelyn La Farge's daughter for nothing, after all! "I found out—just tonight—that I must have that definitely understood—before Roger goes away, I mean."

"I understand," Beryl Melrose said. Her dark eyes looked into Jackie's a significant moment—as though she did understand, perhaps more than had been said.

Buying Power Gains a Bolster To Texas' Appeal

DALLAS, Tex. — Impressive gains for Texas as a whole and for "big five" cities over 100,000 population in 1937 retail sales and effective buying income" constitute further evidence, says a report of the All-South Development Council, of the states' potential to provide healthy and growing consumer markets for the industries its business leaders are bringing to attract.

A study of authoritative business surveys shows that the total effective buying income of Texas in 1937 was $2,996,100,000, a gain of $109,462,000 over the 1936 figure of $2,886,638,000, or 3.8 per cent, against the national average increase of 6.7 per cent for last year, in the matter of retail sales Texas ran ahead of the national average. In this, Texas totaled $1,666,880,000—a gain of 9.3 per cent—whereas the

No More Hunger for Bishop Noe

Having put on 65 pounds since his collapse last January from a long religious fast the Very Rev. Israel Harding Noe appears hale and hearty in the photo above, taken when he preached at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in his home town, Beaufort, N. C.

Roger said he would see her to her cab.

When he came back he found Jackie sitting in a secluded corner, sheltered by a mass of flowers and shrubs, screened from the dance platform and the gay lights. She looked as though she were waiting for him. Which was exactly how she had hoped to look.

"SEE here." Roger stood over her, "did you mean that—what you said to Beryl? Or were you still only pretending. . . Don't pretend with me now, Jackie, please!"

"I won't," Jackie answered. She lowered her long curling lashes. Maybe because she did not want him to see what her eyes really said. "No—I wasn't pretending. I . . . I guess you were right, Roger. About Beryl Melrose, I mean. I could not bear to see you with her—all evening." That was the truth. It had made her so angry that she had seen red.

"You mean that?" Roger took a step closer, he caught both of her hands in his. "Don't pretend with me now, Jackie—I warn you. This is just between us. Not for the benefit of your mother, or anyone else."

"Yes, it is just between us," Jackie said. This was how she would even the score with him. For getting her into this crazy idea of his, for everything. This was how—in the end—she would show him how she hated him. "Nobody else has anything to do with this," Jackie said.

Certainly nobody else had anything to do with what happened next. With one swift motion Roger drew her onto her feet. He caught her to him and held her closer than he ever had held her before. His eyes, that were as blue as the sky, looked down into hers a long moment. Then his lips found hers and clung to them.

Jackie did not know that there could be such a kiss as this, fierce, yet tender, delicious, yet thrilling, a kiss that lifted you out of yourself so that reality slipped from your senses, robbing you of reason, stirring your veins into a joyous tumult that was fearful, heart-filling. So that for a moment you almost believed in it yourself!

Jackie saw now that this idea of hers was almost as dangerous as a flight into the stratosphere! But Jackie was not afraid of anything. She would play this through, too—until the bitter end.

STAMPS IN THE NEWS

MODELED somewhat on the gigantic scale of the New Deal's TVA program is South America's largest and newest dam, impounding the waters of the Tercero in Cordoba province, Argentina.

Storage reservoirs have not been widely used in Argentina until now. But the huge Tercero dam, filling a vast bowl deep in the Sierra de los Condores, marks a new era in irrigation, conservation, navigation, power and industry.

Main portion of the dam is the cement barrier, higher than a 20-story building and topped by a quarter-mile three-lane highway. Below this is a second dam, now under construction, which will likewise water the fertile Argentine plains, turn the wheels of industry.

So the Tercero dam is big news these days in South America, is avidly welcomed in a country where rainfall is none too plentiful, where only a fraction of the arid land can be irrigated because water cannot be obtained. In scattered areas where irrigation has been used, grape culture has netted millions. Mendoza province annually produces 75 per cent of Argentina's wine, valued at $40,000,000. Mendoza uses mountain streams and canals to irrigate.

Typical Argentine farm scene is that shown here on a 1911 stamp of the republic. The scene appears also on 1914 and 1936 Argentine issues.

West Texans Told Of Mayan's Plight Because of Erosion

DALLAS—West Texans whose fertile farms are being blown away by dust storms are advised by F. Martin Brown, director of the Colorado Biological Survey, to study the history of the Mayan Indians.

"It wasn't a dust bowl problem that the Mayans faced, but you can draw a parallel between their problems and the one faced in the Southwest today," Brown said on a recent visit here.

"The Mayans lived in Central and South America, but they traded over almost all America, and evidence of the influences of their civilization are found as far north as Missouri.

"But their empire disintegrated because of soil erosion. The nation's primitive method of agriculture was to sow a crop and let the plants and the weeds grow up together. The next year, they cleared an additional space out of the jungle and left the old field to grow over for three or four years.

"The topsoil washed off into the chain of lakes which then existed. At first there was plenty of water. It destroyed the communications between cities and flooded fields.

"But eventually the wrong methods of agriculture destroyed the water supply. In the records we find mention of numerous lakes, but they're gone now."

KNUCKLES DOWN

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, shown facing a batter, is the newest American League mound star. With a baffling knuckle ball, Leonard of Washington matched Bob Feller's three-hit performance for 10 innings, and went on to shut out the Cleveland Indians, 1-0, in 13. Leonard yielded six hits in all, and walked nary a man. The right-hander previously shut out the Philadelphia Athletics, and with Brooklyn in 1934 and '35.

A wise man once said there are two ways to save money: "Increase your income, or cut down your outgo."

Much as we'd like to, few of us can regulate the amount of money we take in each week. But all of us have control over what we spend. And many a family bank account has been made possible by careful spending.

That's why it will pay you to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Day after day they show you where to get the things you need . . . where to get the fullest dollar's worth for every dollar you spend.

A careful reading of the advertisements . . . today, tomorrow, and every day after . . . will help you to do something that we'd like to do: But what you want—and have money left over!
