Czechs Like Their Country Just as Is

Flags waved, bands played, and 200,000 Czech citizens jammed Prague's main street as seen above, to pledge support of their present democratic government. The demonstration was a protest against the pro-Nazi aims of Konrad Henlein, who has demanded the right to create "a state within a state" with his Sudeten-German minority group.

BRITAIN PUTS POWER BEHIND PEACE MOVE

Great Britain threw her full strength behind European peace today, while in the Far East Japan struck with redoubled fury in her conquest of China. The British bid, backed by powerful air rearmament to prevent a German war on Czechoslovakia, was far more determined than expected. Konrad Henlein, Czech Nazi leader, flew to London to discuss German minority demands. In Asia two powerful Japanese armies were wrecking defenses in North China where the Chinese had hundreds of thousands of troops along the Lanchow railroad. At the same time Japanese naval and air forces along the South China coast, gave strong indications that a delayed offensive in that area, where Britain has huge interests, was about to open. The American Baptist mission and Italian Catholic mission at Chengchow, near Hankow, were bombed today by Japanese airplanes, causing heavy Chinese casualties and widespread damage. The chapel of the Presbyterian mission in Suchow was demolished in yesterday's air raids, in which 200 refugees were killed, according to reports today.

Cupid's Latest Royal Victim

Latest European royalist to sacrifice his high station for love of a commoner is Archduke Albert of Hungary, above, who was expelled from the ancient House of Hapsburg when he wed Katherine Bueskay, 27-year-old school teacher. Archduke Otto, head of the House and pretender to the non-existent throne of Hungary, had ruled that marriage beneath their rank automatically excommunicates Hapsburgs from the imperial family.

TRIAL OPENED IN DISTRICT COURT FRIDAY

Ex-Wife of Late Ranger Stockman Also Takes Stand. Carr replied Friday morning to a question of his attorney, Frank Sparks, if he shot J. B. Ames, Ranger rancher and stockman, with "Yes, Sir" in a firm tone, giving as his reason self defense in the case in which he is defendant in 88th district court at Eastland. The case in which Carr is charged with murder in connection with the death of Ames February 6, opened Friday morning. Carr, father of four children who recently worked on the Works Progress Administration projects near Desdemona, where he lives, took the stand shortly before noon. He characterized Ames, his former brother-in-law, as "dangerous." The defendant related how he tried to avoid Ames continually and that he frequently went out of his way to avoid encountering Carr. Carr told the jurors that on the night of Ames' death he was staying at the home of his sister, Frona Ames, divorced wife of the rancher, and had gone to bed when a horn sounded outside the residence. Carr had been living in his sister's home several months while engaged in tearing down oil tanks near Ranger. Carr described how he went to the door, saw that the occupant of the automobile, whose horn was sounded was Ames, and that he went back to bed, believing with Ames wanted to see his sister, that she was not there and he wanted to continue avoiding the stockman. Then, continued the defendant, Ames entered the residence, going through the front rooms. He turned on the lights of the porch where Carr slept, he stated, and then turned them off. "Who do you want?" Carr testified he asked when Ames entered the sleeping porch. Carr related that Ames explained, "You, you." Following that Ames, Carr testified, began striking him with a cane. "That's how the fight started," continued Carr. "I looked like death one way or another," Carr declared in explaining how he took a pistol from under his pillow and shot Ames. He told the jurors that he knew Ames carried a gun continually. Earl Conner, Jr., criminal district attorney, drew denials from the defendant when he interrogated him if he had ever threatened Ames. Frona Ames, ex-wife of the rancher, told jurors that she had been divorced from Ames three years at the time of his death. She stated that Ames had beaten her twice with a belt during their separation and marriage but that she had not received such alleged treatment after their divorce. "She stated that several 'felt like he (Ames) was pretty bad'." Sparks was appointed by the court to represent Carr.

ROOSEVELT IS SEEKING WAY TO END SLUMP

WASHINGTON, May 13.—President Roosevelt said today he was seeking methods to prevent over-accumulation of inventories and huge price increases, which he characterized as major factors in bringing on the present economic recession. He said no effective plan has yet developed, but he hoped a solution might be found in the anti-monopoly study, which he has recommended in Congress. He said that the NRA was an honest experiment, which sought to deal with this problem. He made plain, however, that he had no proposal in mind for reviving the NRA.

CAR'S PAPERS MAY BE CLUE IN FROME CASE

EL PASO, May 13.—Registration papers of a black, 1936 Plymouth sedan from California, found near the spot where Mrs. Weston Frome and her daughter were slain, may be the "most important" clue in solving the murders, sheriff's officials believed Monday. Fort Bliss soldiers found the papers two miles from where the bodies were discovered east of Van Horn. The car in which the murderer and a woman companion followed the Fromes from El Paso has been described as a dark Plymouth sedan. The papers were weather-beaten and may have been exposed since Mar. 30, when the women were slain.

SENATE SENDS BIG NAVY BILL TO ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Senate today passed and sent to President Roosevelt the $1,156,000,000 naval expansion program, designed to give the United States its most powerful navy. Final approval was given the bill after the neutrality bloc attacked a provision which would give Mr. Roosevelt discretion to determine whether the United States should build 45,000-ton dreadnaughts, the largest in naval history. Opponents contended that the huge battleships would place the United States in the lead in the world armament race. In addition to the dreadnaughts the bill provides for 43 other combat ships, 23 auxiliaries, 950 air planes and two aircraft carriers. Meanwhile, the Senate foreign relations committee shelved a resolution to lift the embargo against shipment of arms to Spain after being warned by Secretary of State Cordell Hull that relaxation of the embargo would subject American neutrality to a risk. The committee action ended all possibility of revising American neutrality policies during this session of Congress. President Roosevelt asked Congress to appropriate $72,500 to aid in the move to care for political refugees from Germany, Austria and other countries.

Preparing Salad Hints Are Given

Lettuce or other green used must be fresh, crisp, tender and thoroughly cleaned, the Flatwood 4-H Club girls were told by their sponsor, Mrs. W. M. Grieger, in a regular club meeting recently at the home of Mrs. Grieger. All salad ingredients should be prepared in advance and kept cool until ready to combine, which should be just before serving. Lettuce or cabbage should be cut in small pieces or shredded; carrots are grated. A simple edible garnish is most attractive. Custom no longer demands the garnish be left. All of the girls have completed their goals up to the present date. We met again May 16 at Flatwood church house in an all day meet and will have as our guest, the Kokomo 4-H club girls. Those present: Lorene Deshane, Margaret Grieger, Margaret Arnold, Jewel Justice and Emma Lou Byrd.—Reporter.

Man's Inventiveness as a Two-Edged Tool

One of the things that make our modern age so hard to understand and manage is the fact that most of its greatest achievements can produce evil as well as good. They are two-edged tools, and someone is apt to get cut whenever intelligence or good will is lacking in the handling of them.

The United Press wires carried recently a little story that spoke volumes on this point. The story was from Bakersfield, California, and it read like this:

"The city schools are having difficulties with 16 Chinese children who were sent here from the battle areas of China. They do not speak English, and when airplanes fly over the city they hide to escape bombs. It is sometimes difficult to locate them afterward."

There is hardly a city in America where the sound of airplanes flying overhead is not a familiar every-day thing. The ordinary American youngster does not look up when he hears the motors in the sky; if he gives the matter a second thought—late at night, perhaps, when he lies in bed and hears the mail plane going through—he feels a little glow of excitement at the romance and wonder of human flight.

Now the romance and wonder of human flight are perfectly genuine, and the airplane has abundantly justified itself by the work it has done in peaceful America. But in China it is another story, and the Chinese children react very differently.

There is no casual acceptance of the airplane in their make-up, and no thrill at its romantic wonder. They know it is an instrument of terror; a fearsome thing which drops death from the skies, destroys villages, kills helpless children, breaks up families and turns the smiling surface of earth into a moking hell. Small wonder that they run for cover when a plane goes by! It is not hard to see why "it is sometimes difficult to locate them afterward."

So we get here a prime example of the double-edged nature of the tools which modern inventiveness has placed in our hands.

The airplane in itself is a marvelous achievement. It can be used to open new frontiers and to strengthen the bonds which bind men together in harmonious industry. But it can also be used to inflict horrors unheard of upon helpless people; and when it is so used it becomes an agent in the destruction of civilization itself.

And much the same thing seems to be true of nearly all of our pet achievements. We have such a highly integrated and elaborately organized civilization that when our own stupidity or folly throws it into reverse it can do great damage to a great many people. War is more destructive than formerly, dictatorship is more efficient and violent, economic distress more far-reaching.

Which simply means that our responsibility is greater now than ever before. We can hurt ourselves more than we once could. It is up to us to learn how to live in the miraculous new world we have created.

India keeps up with the times. Thirty-five men have been arrested there for selling a native drink as genuine Scotch.

A man was held up with a beer bottle the other day, and don't think he isn't mad as hops.

THE CALL OF THE GREAT OUTDOORS

High School Auto Death Rate Is Up By 130 Per Cent

NEW YORK—Automobile drivers of high-school age are involved in the times as many fatal accidents, per miles driven, as the driver of 45 to 50 years, according to an analysis of road accidents published today by The American Magazine.

"Furthermore, the high-school record has been getting worse," the magazine states. "In the last eleven years there has been a 25 per cent decrease in traffic deaths of children 5 to 9 years old, and only a slight increase in those 10 to 14. That is, the safety campaigns to teach children to watch out for themselves in the streets are having their effect."

"But in the ages 15 to 19, the high-school age, there has been in this same period an increase of 130 per cent in traffic deaths. The reason is obvious. Fifteen is about the age when children begin to drive."

Pointing out that this age of greatest danger is also the best age for teaching motor car operation, the article urges wide extension of such work as that now being done by Amos Neyhart, former professor of industrial management at Pennsylvania State College, who is heading up a national program for training high-school students to drive.

Nearly 200 high schools are now using this plan of instruction, the article states, and this summer 60 to 70 colleges will have courses for high-school teachers in the technique of teaching automobile operation.

"Ultimately," it predicts, "a motorcar for teaching driving, or a fleet of such cars, will be as much a recognized part of the equipment of any progressive high-school as is today the kitchen equipment in the domestic science course or the tools in the manual training shop, and a driving course will be required before graduation from a public high school."

First Year Death Claims Total 83,000 During Past Year

NEW YORK—Approximately 83,600 active and healthy people in the United States, who took out life insurance policies during 1937, died within from one day to twelve months after buying a policy. Such first-year death claims, more than a third of them resulting from accidents to adults, totaled $29,000,000, according to a nationwide survey made by the Weekly Underwriter, insurance trade publication.

Returns on the investment of one year's premium averaged about 2,500 per cent. Many double indemnity benefits were under 40. Pneumonia was one of the leading causes for first-year claims.

About 25,000 claims were paid to families of policyholders who lived less than three months after taking out life insurance. One large company alone reported more than 6,000 policies that became claims before a quarter of a year had elapsed.

"The army of early claimants who bought their policies 'just in time' were healthy and active when they applied for insurance," the Weekly Underwriter points out. "They were considered good insurance risks. Many of them could look forward to a normal expectancy of 30 or 40 years. Yet within a few months they had passed on, from some cause that could not be foreseen."

"If a policyholder lives only equipment of any progressive high-school as is today the kitchen equipment in the domestic science course or the tools in the manual training shop, and a driving course will be required before graduation from a public high school."

long enough to pay one year's premium, his beneficiary receives a return on his life insurance investment averaging 2,500 per cent, depending on the form of policy purchased, his age and other factors. Where death is due to accident, and the double indemnity clause was included in the contract, the payment of double the face value of the policy represents a much larger return on the premium investment.

"There were numerous cases where death occurred before the policy could be delivered, or within a few days after the application was signed, and the benefits were in full force only because of pre-payment of the premium. In such instances a few days' delay in applying for life insurance, or neglect to make a premium deposit with the application, would have deprived dependents of needed protection."

"These quickly maturing policies indicated a weekly average last year of 1,600 claims for over $1,115,000 insurance. Considered on the basis of daily payments, there were 230 first year policy settlements totaling close to $160,000 for every single day of the year."

Newspaper Editor Is "Scooped" Upon Story All His Own

By United Press
EL PASO—Even the editor of a newspaper may be "scooped" by the opposition when he has been "holding back" a news story which seems particularly important to him.

W. J. Hooten, city editor of a local paper, had been saving such a story for some time. Then the news "broke" just in time for the competing daily to carry it first.

Mrs. Hooten gave birth to a son just after her husband's paper circulated its final edition of the day.

Trial Flight

BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES COPYRIGHT, 1938, BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

CASE OF CHARACTERS
JACKIE DENN—heroine; she wanted to fly.
BRYL MELROSE—hero; he wanted to test the stratosphere.
JACKIE DENN—she wanted Roger.
BRYL MELROSE—she wanted a son-in-law.

CHAPTER XI
ROGER did not get to take off for the west coast quite as soon as he had anticipated. He was obliged to "hang-around," as he expressed it, until the weather was more favorable.

"I don't want anything to happen on the way out—before I get to make my flight," he told Jackie, his blue eyes earnest. "I've got to make good on this now. If anything happened and I felt I'd let Beryl down, after having her pick me for the job, I'd never be able to look her in the eye again. She's a wonderful person, Jackie—you've no idea."

It seemed to Jackie that she had been hearing how wonderful Beryl was often enough lately to arrive at some conception.
"If aviation ever achieves its ultimate goal, it will be because of people like her," Roger said. "People who are willing to give not only thousands of dollars, but their time and almost their very heart itself. People with foresight and vision."

"You forget even such wonderful people have to have pilots to fly their ships," Jackie broke in. "You're the one who's taking the chance, Roger. Sometimes I think people like Mrs. Melrose—and I know you think she's perfection personified—simply like to share in the reflected glory of someone else. I suppose if you break all records on this trip, she'll think she did it—and want all the medals."

ROGER stopped chewing the end of his toothpick; he glanced across at Jackie; they were having hamburgers and coffee at the Airport Inn, waiting for Beryl Melrose to join them. This might be their last meeting for some time as, if the weather "broke," everything was in readiness for the take-off.

"Why don't you like Beryl?" Roger asked. "She thinks you're swell, Jackie. She told me so—just the other day." His eyes crinkled at their corners. "Not still jealous, are you? Now that we're really engaged," Jackie had absolutely sold him on her idea. Since the night of the announcement party—and that kiss behind the banked flowers—Roger believed Jackie intended to marry him on his return.

"Certainly I'm not jealous!" Jackie flared. Just the same she did not like the other girl any better than she had from the first. "Except that I think I'm the one who should be going with you to the coast. But of course I'm only your fiancée, not a beautiful widow with millions of dollars to buy my way anywhere. It seems to me, Roger, she should be satisfied to stay here and wait, the same as I must do."

"After all, it's her ship," Roger reminded. "It's only natural she should want to go along. If it weren't for my argument against it, Beryl would make the trial flight with me. She's that interested—and plucky."

"I suppose you told her it was much too dangerous for her!" Jackie said, with some bitterness. "It's too risky for any woman," Roger said. "But that wasn't my main argument. I want as light a load as possible to make the fastest possible speed. And—this may sound selfish—but somehow I want to feel I've done this all alone."

JACKIE could understand that; it was the way she would want it, too.
"See here," Roger changed the subject abruptly; he leaned toward her, his blue eyes earnest again. "There's something I want to give you, Jackie, before I go—that is, if you'll wear it." He looked as though he did not know quite how to say what he wanted to say; as though he still felt uncertain as to how Jackie would react to it.

She said, "What do you want me to wear?" carelessly, not prepared for what would come next. "You mean you will?" "Why not?"

He looked at her another moment searchingly, direct. Then he unfastened the small aviation pin, symbol of his achievements, that he always wore clasped to his lapel. "I want you to wear it," he said, offering it to Jackie. "Until I come back . . . and if anything should happen. . . Well, I haven't anything else much to leave you, my love."

For once Jackie did not ask him not to call her that. He had said it in such a different way, not on that light note of mockery. He had said it as though he had meant it. But that had not been what made Jackie draw back. "No, no," she said. "I can't take it, Roger." This was going a bit too far with her joke. Somehow it might make the last laugh bitter-sweet.

"Why not?" "You told me you'd never fly without it—that it brings you luck." "It will bring me more, if you wear it for me this time." "I'd rather not."

"Please do!" His tone was urgent, as though more than that he knew depended upon it. "I can't give you a ring, or anything else, Jackie. Not until I get back. I want you to wear it. I'm asking you to."

"IN that case . . ." Jackie reached out for it, but still reluctantly.
"Here . . . let me pin it on you!" He was on his feet, bending over her, his fingers fumbling at the lapel of her coat—the lapel that was over her heart. His face, almost as flushed as her own, was close now, his eyes looking into hers a breathless moment. "To pledge our troth . . ." he said, in a voice curiously unlike his own.

"Oh, here you are!" Another voice—Beryl Melrose—broke in on them, shattering the moment as though it had been made of thin crystal, delicately wrought. Then she must have been aware that she had shattered something. A flash of pain swept her face, as though it had been something within herself. "I have been looking for you. I've got great news . . ." She sat down in the chair Roger had vacated, her manner poised as usual, her smile as gracious.

But Jackie had seen her face when it had been unguarded. She had seen that flash of pain. Somehow she could not feel as resentful toward this other girl now. Or as triumphant for herself.

"We can take off in the morning," Beryl said now. "The weather's cleared. The bureau reports just came in, clear from the coast. No more waiting, Roger. Isn't that grand?"

"Swell!" Roger said briefly. But it was enough. His blue eyes, looking into Beryl's, were alight with the fire of all his dreams. He had forgotten Jackie's existence once more. This moment belonged just to Beryl.

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Long experience in political warfare might well have taught Mr. Roosevelt never to lead with his chin. If so, he forgot the lesson when he invited Mr. Henry Ford to the White House.

As a political boner, that one ranks only with the enticement of the "little business men" to Washington in the hope that they would give the President and his policies a pat on the back. Mr. Ford is an American tradition and his support at this time would have been a great boon.

But almost anyone who knew the automobile man could have told the President that Ford could be counted on to cast more raspberries than posies. What the President did was to hand Ford the White House as a sounding board for some criticisms of the New Deal.

The invitation was based on a supposition that Ford would feel inspired to deliver a public message full of co-operation, confidence and good cheer. Mr. G. Hall Roosevelt, brother of Mrs. Roosevelt, was told by F. D. R. that Ford would be so impressed with the show that he would publicly support the current administration recovery effort. But G. Hall Roosevelt is in the dog-house now.

Versions as to what was said at the White House conference differ. One story is that Ford commented snappily on various New Deal theories, especially those of Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, firm believer in the necessity of spending for recovery.

Super Pan-American University Planned

By United Press
SAN ANTONIO—Establishment of a super Pan-American university at San Antonio or Santa Fe, N. M., which would be open to the brightest of the youth of the Americas—Indians, Mexicans or descendants of other peoples, regardless of their financial status—is the dream of Dr. F. M. Kersheville, head of the University of New Mexico Spanish department.

Dr. Kersheville, who spoke before the state convention of the Pan American Round Tables recently, advocated the establishment of such a university in the Southwest, preferably at San Antonio or Santa Fe, in the near future.

In such an institution, the educator said, the English and Spanish languages, the geography, traditions and culture of the Americas could be stressed. He advocated also the establishment

A wise man once said there are two ways to save money: "Increase your income, or cut down your outgo."

Much as we'd like to, few of us can regulate the amount of money we take in each week. But all of us have control over what we spend. And many a family bank account has been made possible by careful spending.

That's why it will pay you to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Day after day they show you where to get the things you need . . . where to get the fullest dollar's worth for every dollar you spend.

A careful reading of the advertisements . . . today, tomorrow, and every day after . . . will help you to do something that we'd like to do: But what you want—and have money left over!

1843, was addressed by Maverick—a Yale University graduate, participant in the Battle of San Jacinto, signer of the Texas Declaration of Independence, and first Texas Congressman from Bexar district—to Jose Maria Bocanegra, Mexican secretary of state and foreign affairs. After detailing that he was one of 55 Texian prisoners imprisoned at Perote and giving particulars of their arrest, Maverick wrote in part:

"Here at Perote, after being locked up twelve hours, on cold stone floors, without sufficient clothing, in chains and misery, we were turned out to a breakfast consisting of a very small cup of hot water of a darkish color and a fragment of bread which weighs three Mexican ounces. We are then hurried out, with hand hammers and cart, loaded with horse manure and the multiplied filth of this place. "We are then marched off to the adjacent mountain to pack in loads of stone, a distance of one league,—or to a considerable distance for loads of sand—a labor which the human machine cannot stand on three ounces of bread and the false coffee of Perote. "It is not the work, but the kind of work, and the work without adequate food, that I would complain of."
