Japanese Bow To Regimented Way Of Living Without Thought of Protest

TOKYO — Regimentation, abhorred in the United States, is accepted with a meek shrug in Japan. The government puts into effect a law restricting the use of gasoline and the Japanese motor car owner, without protest, rides street cars and buses. The government invokes a law providing for registration of all citizens and for regular reports on their activities. There are no mass meetings to denounce invasion of personal rights. Taxes are raised, press and personal freedom are restricted, it is decreed that wood fiber must go into wearing apparel—still no public uproar. The Japanese have a word for it. "Shikatanagai," they say, a fatalistic expression indicating that the matter is beyond human control. They say it as they pull their belts tighter and pay higher prices for every-day commodities. They say it when sons are killed at the front or when a favorite nephew who would prefer to be a doctor or teacher is called to the colors as a soldier. Always Loyal to Emperor. There is no thought of non-cooperation. Many Japanese are not in favor of the war in China, but they would not think of refusing help. That would be disloyalty to the emperor, the most serious crime possible. The China conflict thus far has not resulted in any food scarcity in Japan. Food costs more but there seems to be an ample supply. "I think the people would stand for almost anything as long as their leaders obtain food for them," said an American who has watched the phenomenon for several years. "I sincerely believe they could tear up the street-car tracks or tear down buildings to obtain steel if it should become necessary and the people would not grumble greatly. If the results at the end were not considered sufficient reason then there may be trouble. "But while the fight is on they work together. I don't see any signs of a collapse in public morale." There has been much discussion of a possible financial collapse in Japan. The latest issue of the Oriental Economist, a monthly report of social, economic and political conditions in Japan, discussed the question. War Costs Estimated. "The emergency war disbursements up to March 20 were less than 1,600,000,000 yen," the magazine stated. "Calculated on the basis of 100 yen equalling $29, emergency expenditures do not exceed $464,000,000. Spread over the eight months since the outbreak of the hostilities, this represents an average monthly outlay of less than $58,000,000." The writer estimated that even with mounting emergency expenditures "it remains doubtful whether the entire supplementary appropriations approved by the Diet session can be used up within the next year." Since August, 1937, exports and imports of gold and of certain other commodities have not been made public. This has been interpreted as covering a weakened position. The Oriental Economist stated that while the individual items have not been published they have been included in published totals which show that Japan's import balance is not so unfavorable as might be supposed. The trade figures are withheld under the industrial espionage law so that foreign governments and the people at home may not know the details of how much is going into munitions. It is the fashion in Japan for leaders to talk of "a national crisis" or a "drastic emergency." It is sometimes thought that alarms are raised occasionally so that greater grants of power may be accorded those in control. Following up that line of thought, it might be reasoned that perhaps the present situation is not so serious as some of Japan's harsh control methods might indicate. Leaders might be using the current circumstances to impose a type of government which would not be popular in less strenuous times. In recent years the economic structure of Japan has been shifting toward a cartel system with the government sponsoring combinations of firms in related industrial fields. The government has begun a process which easily could make absolute government monopolies out of all basic industries. Industry in Japan is so firmly controlled that a reduction in production of non-essentials can be put into effect almost overnight. Conversely, a war industry can be stepped to higher production with a speed which would not be possible under a more loosely held management.

Pastor Offers a Code for Marriage

PITTSBURGH — Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, who married 1,000 couples as pastor of the First Baptist church here, has drawn up "Ten Commandments for Marriage" as follows: 1. Simplify your life. Get along with as little money as possible. Spend less than you earn. 2. Set aside time for quiet together. Do not let life tire you out. Manage your hours. 3. Never let a lie last an hour between you. 4. Quickly forgive. 5. Share all joys and disappointments. Do not protect each other from bad news. 6. Cultivate complete candor and frankness. 7. Know everything you can learn about life together. Read books, consult the experts. Ignorance is not innocence. 8. Audit the books together. Marriage is a financial partnership and allows no fiscal secrets. 9. Never think of marriage as tentative. It is your career. Make it a lifetime project. 10. Base it on religious fellowship. Mixed marriages fail only because they lack unity of religious life. I have never seen a couple come to grief who were consistently and untidily busy in a single church.

MOVES MADE TODAY AMPEN WAR THREATS

Diplomatic and economic moves appeared to be developing today in an effort to dampen the fires of war in Europe and the Far East. Following a United States note to Japan insisting on American property rights in China, Great Britain prepared to take the lead in treating an armistice in the Spanish war as a foundation for further stabilization of European peace. The first British move met with success when Soviet Russia withdrew objections to a generally-accepted plan for evacuation from Spain of foreign volunteers. Russia agreed to a message of counting volunteers, but declared that unless the withdrawal started in 40 days the proposed closing of the Spanish frontier must lapse. Peace in Spain is essential to the program undertaken by British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain when he first decided to talk terms with Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy.

Votes and Taxes Are Closely Related

The President apparently was thinking out loud, rather than making a serious proposal, when he remarked at a recent press conference that it might be a good idea to have the citizens pay their taxes on election day.

Whether such a stunt would be at all popular is an open question. Election day seems to be tough enough as it is; at any rate, about half of us can't even take the trouble to go to the polls. Making it tax-payment day as well would just make a tough day tougher.

And in any case the President wasn't offering a formal plan; he was just tossing out a suggestion, and the odds are that the suggestion will never be acted on. But when you stop to think about it there is a good deal to recommend it.

There are two things about which we do a lot of empty talking: democracy, and taxes.

We plume ourselves on our democracy, in season and out of season. We enjoy reading about the fake elections of the dictators, and we like to remind ourselves how different it all is over here—how every man has a vote which he casts according to the dictates of his own conscience, how all men are equal at the ballot box, and how we are absolute masters of our own destiny.

Then, in the next breath, we like to complain about taxes. They are too high, too numerous, too complicated. The money that goes into them is not well spent. We don't get much for our dollars; the politicians are wasteful and spend without proper forethought.

And so we go on; we brag about our voting rights and lament about our taxes, and never stop to realize the direct connection there is between the two.

If we set aside one day for the exercise of both functions, we might realize, for one thing, that our citizenship is a privilege that is well worth paying for. Not many people in this modern world enjoy the freedom of the polls. The mere fact that we do have it sets us apart. We enjoy a boon denied to many millions of people; can't we pay for it with a good grace?

Second, we might also realize that the way we exercise this privilege of voting has a most immediate bearing on the way in which we are called upon to shoulder the duty of paying taxes. For these despised politicians who spend our money are, after all, elected by ourselves, and they are extremely sensitive about trying to do what they think we want them to do. If they soak us through high tax rates, excessive spending programs and all the rest, it can not possibly be anyone's fault but our own.

If we went direct from the polling booth to the tax collector's office we ought to have a much clearer idea about the privilege of the ballot—and the responsibility that goes with it.

Makes Report

H. E. ROBINSON

Deputy State Superintendent of Schools H. E. Robinson of Brownwood has recently submitted his annual report to the Austin office of the State Department of Education. He has charge of eight central Texas counties consisting of Brown, Comanche, Eastland, Erath, Hamilton, Lampasas, Mills and San Saba.

The district has 286 schools that employed 1,264 teachers for 34,402 pupils during the 1937-38 term. There are 29 standardized rural schools in the district, 17 of which have reached the standards during the past twelve months. There are 48 fully accredited high schools in the district, 10 of which finished their accreditation during the past twelve months. Eastland county has thirteen such schools. They are Alameda, Carbon, Cisco, Colony, Desdemona, Eastland, Gorman, Murton Valley, Olden, Pioneer, Ranger, Rising Star, Seranton.

The deputy state superintendent travelled 20,537 miles in the performance of his duties during the past school term. He attended 40 educational conferences and made 95 addresses in the various counties in the district. There are 3,220 rural children, who were transported to attend accredited high schools. Approximately 250,000.00 of Rural Aid Funds were allocated to the district to transport these children pay their high school tuition, and to supplement teachers' salaries in the rural aid schools.

Mr. Robinson serves as the personal representative of State Superintendent L. A. Woods in the performance of his various supervisory and administrative duties. He has been in his present position since January 1, 1937.

Carbon

Scoutmaster F. M. Wood and several other scouters of Carbon brought the members of troop 29 to Lake Brownwood park last Thursday for a two-day outing. Hiking, fishing, swimming, as well as test passing were engaged in during the days and a very impressive campfire ceremony was held Thursday evening.

Stephenville

A court of honor for Stephenville scouts will be held the evening of June 10. Saturday night, Scouts H. E. Robinson of Brownwood has recently submitted his annual report to the Austin office of the State Department of Education. He has charge of eight central Texas counties consisting of Brown, Comanche, Eastland, Erath, Hamilton, Lampasas, Mills and San Saba.

Comanche

Both scout troops in Comanche have recently re-registered for their scout year of 1938-39. Much activity is being planned for these boys during the summer months.

Blanket

A very unique totem pole is being made by the scouts of Blanket to be placed in front of their scout hut. Each boy has a piece of wood on which he is carving an emblem of some phase of scouting. All of these pieces will be assembled to make a large pole.

San Saba

Eight scouts of San Saba have completed the American Red Cross life saving course in Risin's pool during the past two weeks and passed the examinations. Insignia will be presented these boys by the Red Cross, perhaps this week-end. Scoutmaster Stuart Painter was instructor and examiner for the course.

Brownwood

Troop 8 of Brownwood had a hike recently that was out of the ordinary and very enjoyable. Fifteen members of the troop with their scoutmaster, Carl Arnsperger, left troop headquarters to go to the home of Scout Tom Yantis, where weiners for their supper were secured. Next place visited was the home of Scout Billy London for buns. Then across the way to Scout L. M. Busby's for cakes. On to Dr. Karl H. Moore's home for apples, and to Edwin McGhee's for bananas. From there to a bottling plant for soft drinks. The last lap of the hike was to the home of the scoutmaster. Chili was secured there, and on the back lawn of this home the meal was prepared and eaten.

Clothing Bill In North Is Less Than In South

By FRED BAILEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—The Department of Agriculture's nationwide consumer purchase survey has turned up a lot of startling facts, but none more paradoxical than this:

Southern villagers spend 25 per cent more for clothing than do northern villagers.

A family-living study in 32 villages in Georgia, Mississippi, North and South Carolina showed 2,083 husbands averaged $56 a year each for clothes and their wives $57.

A similar study including 2,877 families in 46 villages in Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin disclosed the husbands spend an average of $38 and the wives $42 a year for clothing.

The survey included only non-relief white families for 12 months in the 1935-36 period. The figures were given by the families themselves in personal interviews with department representatives.

In the lower income group—$500 to $2,000—husbands and wives spent virtually the same for clothing. When the family income reached $5,000 or more expenditures for clothing took a big jump.

For husbands it averaged $180 and for wives $232 a year.

In both the north and the south husbands and wives spent more for coats and other wraps. For the husbands the average was $66 and for wives $12. Husbands spent $26 for suits and wives $16 for dresses.

The husbands averaged $3 a month for hats and the wives $4 each an average of $9 a year.

The survey bore out the contention of most fathers that it costs more to clothe daughters than sons. On the whole, fathers spent more for clothing than their grown sons, but grown daughters spent more than their mothers.

In the $2,000 to $3,000 a year income group, sons spent an average of $78 a year for clothing; husbands, $77; wives, $80, and daughters, $95. The husband earning $5,000 or more a year spent an average of $180 for clothing for himself, $160 for his son, $232 for his wife and $332 for his grown daughter.
