Lusitania, Sad Symbol of Human Futility

They have found the submerged hulk of the Lusitania, at last, deep in the water off Kinsale Head, and divers have gone to the bottom and brought back rusty rivetheads for proof; and the whole triumphant exploit makes up one of the saddest commentaries imaginable on the state of human affairs today.

Consider the implications of this whole story of the Lusitania.

There was, first of all, the ship itself; a marvelous triumph of human intelligence, of human mastery of raw iron and brute force, a floating city, more comfortable and luxurious than any palace that Saesar or Pharaoh ever saw, capable of bridging the Atlantic in less than a week.

The mere fact that mankind had reached a point where it could conceive, design, and build such a ship spoke volumes about the development of human intelligence.

Next, there was the Lusitania's sinking. A submarine lay in wait in the waters, unseen by its victim, and a man peered through an arrangement of mirrors to draw a bead on a ship which, in actual fact, he could not really see at all—for he was 20 feet under water at the time.

A torpedo was released, it sped through the water some hundreds of yards as accurately as though Death himself perched on its nose as a helmsman, and the Lusitania went to the bottom.

There, again, was another marvel of our skill; for a submarine and its torpedo are, between them, supreme evidence of the fiendish cleverness with which we can manipulate inanimate materials.

And, lastly, a salvage boat has found the wreck, men have gone down some scores of fathoms to look at it, and in the course of time every compartment will be examined, valuable will be recovered, and Navy Jones' locker itself will be thoroughly and competently rifled.

And now think of this: we, the human race as a whole, had the brains, the imagination, and the power to do all these remarkable things; to design and build a marvel like the Lusitania, to strike her down with a weapon almost incredibly ingenious, and to come back two decades later and explore the sunken wreckage—but we have not at any time had the simple good sense and good will to use all this ingenuity and skill to our own advantage!

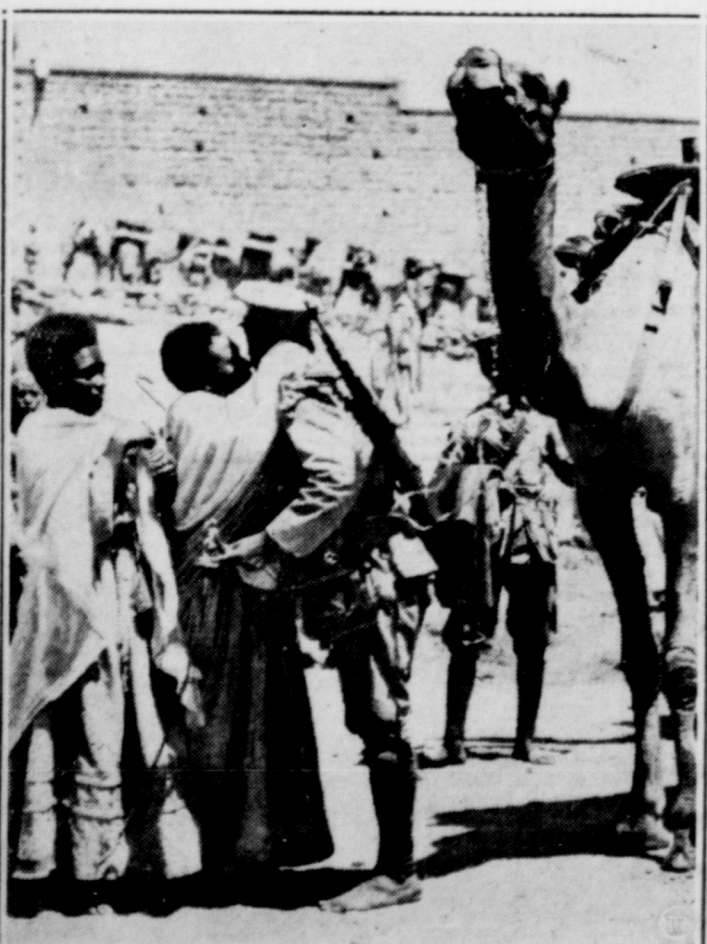

Able to build ships like the Lusitania, we are unable to protect them from our own destructiveness. We can make them, but we can't use them.

We devoted quite as much thought and effort to the submarine and its torpedo as to the Lusitania itself. We learned how to equip ourselves for a good life, and then wrecked our equipment; and today the best thing we can do is send divers to the bottom to have a peek at the wreckage.

This Lusitania story will tell future historians all they need to know about us; that we won mastery over everything but—ourselves.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON—Much of the New Deal's idealism, sincere enough in its time, is wearing off in the face of practical political realities.

Anyone here can feel the federal machine bracing itself for the election campaign. Old-line civil service employees aren't so concerned, but those in the emergency agencies—many of whom never cared a whoop about politics before—are beginning to take active interest as a result of fear for their jobs, for an administration they admire, or both.

Federal employees will be asked, quietly enough, to dig down and contribute to campaign funds. With most wealthy men opposed to the New Deal, the Democratic party will have relatively few "fat cats" this year.

Someone must pay the bills. It's all right to talk about the work-relief billions as a "campaign fund," but you can't divert any of that money to operation of campaign machinery which will take several millions—and there's a heavy party deficit right now. How much coercion will be used to make jobholders kick in remains to be seen.

MANY officials with political background are spending more or much of their time and thought on politics, making occasional trips back home and keeping in constant touch through correspondence.

An increasing number of minor employees plan to join the Young Democrats and vote for the first time in their lives.

The high command, meanwhile, able to make comfortable weight cover for the home grown wool, if the wool is scoured perfectly and carefully carded, says Mrs. J. D. Robertson, member of the Hagerman Home Demonstration club of Grayson county.

This lady recommends that the wool be spread on paper in the sun to dry, and where the air can circulate around it fully. The wool loses about one-half its weight in washing. A three pound bat is about the average for comforts.

The first terraces in Gillespie county were constructed in 1916. Since that time terraces have been built on farms in every community, but not more than half of the farm land that needs terracing has been terraced.

Heavy rains this year have convinced many farmers that they must terrace if they are to continue growing crops. At a recent meeting, they decided that they would build their terraces themselves with such equipment as they had, and would also use available county equipment.

Under the auspices of the Re-fugio County Farm Demonstration Council, 35 farmers and ranchers interested in pasture improvement recently made a tour of several ranches in Kingsville.

The group made a tour of the Rhodes grass pastures and feed lots on the House and Hollmann ranch, the Worth Wright ranch and the famous King ranch. There are 17,000 acres of Rhodes grass on the King ranch and more is being planted. It is said to compare in food value with timothy grass.

SAN ANGELO. — "Beets are thriving in my winter lettuce bed and are protected from insects there," Mrs. E. R. Buchanan, pantry demonstrator of the Water Valley Home Demonstration Club in Tom Green county, told Miss Dora Crowder, home demonstration agent.

After planting two rows of beets in her fall garden, Mrs. Buchanan broadcast the rest of her seed in the winter greens bed which is six feet long and four and one-half feet wide. She then covered the bed with canvas which was removed occasionally to admit more sunlight.

Grasshoppers and other insects ate up the young beets which were planted in the garden while those in the bed grew rapidly and are now furnishing greens and beets for the table. Mrs. Buchanan planted home grown seed of the variety which she raised last year.

EDINBURG.—The 1,622 containers of food valued at $208.64 in the pantry of Mrs. R. E. Bowker, Hidalgo county pantry demonstrator, has served her family other than by supplying an abundance of food for the table. Food was exchanged for the services of a trained nurse, and 300 cans of tomato juice and tomatoes have been sold for cash. Mrs. Bowker told Miss Mattie Wilroy, home demonstration agent. Fifty cans of broccoli and spinach were also sold.

HENDERSON.—By taking advantage of every rain to do some planting and by keeping the soil loose so as to retain moisture, Christine Moore, Rusk county 4-H club girl, was able to keep fresh vegetables in the garden throughout the summer. Her family now has tomatoes, okra, beans and bell pepper to use, and a fall garden has been started. Care was taken to work spongy dried fertilizer into the soil to hasten growth and to prevent the soil from packing.

SINTON.—That three crops can be successfully grown in the same year has been demonstrated by J. T. Scott of the Hayden community in Van Zandt county, according to V. O. Teddlie, county agricultural agent.

Scott had three-fourths of an acre which he planted to Irish potatoes. He harvested 100 bushels of marketable potatoes which brought him $76. He then planted the ground to corn, and in 58 days he had roasting ears. From these he sold $10 worth in addition to the amount he used at home, and he then saved the stalks to be grounds for roughage.

Scott now has the plot growing Irish potatoes, turnip greens and beans.

ive pecan tree which has never been very productive, E. S. Abshier of Chambers county expects to harvest a crop of paper shell pecans in 1938.

Acting under the direction of R. H. Mathis, county agricultural agent, Abshier top worked the tree in January, 1934. In June, 1935, he inserted about 50 paper shell buds on the sprout which had grown out on the tree where the big limbs had been cut off. Abshier reports that 90 per cent of the buds are living and that a great many of them have already put out limbs ranging from six inches to two feet in length.

By 1937 Abshier expects to be able to prune out all of the old native pecan growth, leaving the new top composed entirely of the paper shell variety.

CHAPTER XIII
"They were sitting in the living room of Jean's little apartment. Jean, her father and Larry Glenn Refreshed by 12 solid hours of sleep, Jean sat in an arm chair glancing fondly at the new but it's not good for much of anything else. As an investment, it's a complete washout. What Montague wanted to do was simply transfer title to the place to Jackson himself.

"That was what you took down there—faked papers, by which it appeared that Jackson had come into ownership of the place some six or seven years ago, at the time this man Roubidoux got rid of it. It had never actually been carried in Montague's own name, by the way. Included in the package were directions on how to get there, and a note to the caretaker instructing him to turn everything over to Jackson. Harkins and Lewis went on ahead, took the place over, and then burned this note. Harkins told me that, along with some other stuff, before he died.

"Montague, do you see, thought you were an ideal messenger. He thought that sending these papers with you was infinitely safer than either entrusting them to the mails or trying to get an underworld messenger through. He never expected you to come back, and he didn't especially care. The Jackson gang, I should add, had planned to lie low there for six months or a year, until the furor died down in this part of the country."

HE smiled. "You more than made up for everything when you shot Jackson," he added. "And that reminds me—Bobby has atoned for his slip in the matter of the bonds, too. He was able to give my office enough information and evidence to warrant a raise on an obscure factory building, out on the southeastern edge of town. We descended on it today—and found Bobby's employer, Mark Hopkins, engaged in the manufacture of armored cars for the gangster trade. And since we seized the car the Jackson outfit had, and are able to prove that Lewis bought it from Hopkins about a month ago, Mr. Hopkins will be going to prison to join Mr. Montague.

"Those are the links in the chain I'm telling you about—men like Montague and Hopkins. Men like these miserable Doc Deckers out in Chicago, who's another man due for a trip to prison. People like the Engles, down at Midlothian, who harbored these gangsters, and who are also going to prison for a while.

"Gangsters don't stand alone, you see. They need all kinds of help, and it takes a long string of people in widely separated walks of life to give it to them. In this case we've got only de-royed a gang—we've also broken the supporting chain."

The apartment buzzer sounded, and Jean stepped to the speaking tube. She said, "Oh—come on up." In a queer, flat voice, then she turned and said, "It's Bobby Wallace."

Larry Glenn smiled and got up. "Mr. Dunn," he said, "it's a delightful evening outside. Don't you think you and I should go for a little stroll, to get some fresh air?"

Mr. Dunn looked at him and wagged his head understandingly.

Low Bridge! But Sandboat Couldn't Stop

A boat that couldn't stop and a bridge that couldn't be raised suffered heavy damage in this Chicago river collision. Because an elevated train was passing over it, the Wells Street span could not be raised as the 620-ton sandboat H. Dahke approached, and the boat, unable to resist the current, smashed into the lowered span. Firemen worked several hours to extricate the craft.

Most Eloquent And Forceful Speakers Named

By United Press AUSTIN, Tex.—Sen. T. J. Holbrook, Galveston, was introduced at legislative memorial services for Will Rogers as "the most eloquent living Texan."

Rivals perhaps would be former Gov. Pat M. Neff, now president of Baylor University, and former state Sen. T. H. McGregor, Austin, if the field is limited to those who have been active in politics.

For effective rough and ready speaking as contrasted with pure oratory, Texas politics can furnish a liberal supply of entrants. The list would include Former Gov. James E. Ferguson, Gov. James V. Allred and Attorney General William McCraw, U. S. Senators Morris Shappard and Tom Connally owe part of their political success to fluent speaking.

McCraw long will be remembered as the "most entertaining" Congressman, Governors, a Washington senator and others spoke at a recent legislative ceremony honoring Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, McCraw, called in from the crowd for an impromptu statement, made the shortest speech of all. But it was printed verbatim by most newspapers, while long, carefully-prepared speeches were dismissed with a few sentences.

Capitol newspaper men who have covered speeches of various kinds for many years might give "the most eloquent" title to a Texan outside politics—Dr. George W. Truett, Dallas Baptist minister. Dr. Truett and Holbrook speak with the same air of sincerity although the minister's method is to use a modulation fitting to a clergyman rather than the vigorous tones sometimes used by Holbrook to drive home a point in the Senate debate.

Sen. Welly K. Hopkins, Gonzales, can hold the Senate's attention for long periods on even the most technical matters, by his clear logic and happy form of expression. Sen. Tom DeBerry, Bogata, relies on a homely and at times caustic form of wit to fix attention.

Sen. Clint Small, Amarillo, has won many a battle in the Senate by keeping in good humor, letting opponents wear out their attacks, and then replying softly and convincingly.

Sen. Ben G. Oneal, Wichita Falls, depends on knowing his subject from start to finish and the history of other senators on the topic. Sens. Joe Hill, Henderson, and W. R. Poage, Waco, frequently carry their hearers along by their own enthusiasm. In the house of representatives, J. Bryan Bradbury, Abilene, would probably win the oratory prize.

Securities Act Is Praised As Model

AUSTIN.—That the Texas Securities Act is a model of its kind, is becoming common knowledge throughout the country, according to D. Leon Harp, Texas Securities Commissioner and Secretary of State R. B. Stanford, who are the two officials charged with its enforcement.

"Gerald C. Mann, former secretary of state of Texas, and now Washington representative of the Texas Planning Board, has been invited to address the National Association of Securities Commissioners at their annual convention at Miami, Fla., in December. "Mann, who was primarily responsible for the enactment of the Texas Securities Law, has long made a study of securities legislation. The Texas law, in the opinion of securities officials in many states, is looked upon as a model of its kind. The invitation to address the commissioners was extended by Harold K. Bradford, president of the association, who wrote the Texas, "several members of our executive committee and numerous secretaries of state from different sections of the country have asked that you be especially invited to address us."

This is the girl who handles your telephone calls. Every part of the far-flung Bell System organization exists largely to help her do the best possible job of connecting you with the people to whom you want to talk.

Linemen cling to icy poles to keep the voice-paths open to her touch. Staff experts of American Telephone & Telegraph Company, parent company of the System, hunt better methods for her to use. Scientists of Bell Telephone Laboratories seek new inventions to place at her finger-tips.

And the factories and shops of Western Electric, supply unit of the Bell System, are busy making the insulators, the wires and the equipment she needs to flash your voice around the block, across the state, or across the nation.
