IMPEACHMENT OF McDONALD IS TAKEN UP

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—General denial of all charges made against J. E. McDonald, state commissioner of agriculture and specific denial of each of 11 allegations were made today as the house opened on impeachment hearing to determine if he shall be removed from office.

The denials were announced by counsel immediately after the charges had been read by the house reading clerk. The answers will be filed at an afternoon session, it was announced.

The hearing proceeded with rival attorneys sitting at tables, each provided with a microphone. Two other microphones will carry the ruling of Franklin Speers, chairman, and testimony of witnesses to all parts of the house chamber.

Speers announced that he would rule on admissibility of evidence as it shall be presented. "He said precedent permits a variation from the strict rules of evidence for criminal and civil trials, but not for impeachment hearing."

Hides Face and Slaying Motive

She is shown, face hidden, in custody of police, who were unable to force her to state her motive for the crime.

JURY CHOSEN FOR TRIAL OF MOUNTAIN GIRL

WISE, Va., Nov. 18.—In a courtroom noisy with the wailing of babies and scuffling of mountaineer boots, a jury was chosen in 30 minutes to try Edith Maxwell, a girl who got "newfangled notions" in the outside world, on a charge of murdering her father.

He tried to whip her for staying out on a party until midnight.

Into the jury box filed the 12 men, before them the 24-year-old school teacher, who had broken the code of the mountain by staying out with her beau, Raymond Mead, hours after the curfew sounded.

The defense was prepared to admit Edith battled her father, Trigg Maxwell, on the night of July 20 when she got back to her home. Her defense will be she picked up a sharp heeled shoe and battered her father with it as he attempted to whip her with a fesson as to "what a decent woman should be doing."

Probation of Adult Prisoners In Texas Watched By Many

HOUSTON.—Prison authorities of 15 states which do not have adult probation laws will watch closely the type to be adopted by Texas under a recently adopted constitutional amendment, according to District Judge Langston G. King.

The jurist was one of the leaders at the annual congress of prison officials at Atlanta, Ga., during the last week of October.

"I discussed the matter with members of the National Probation Association," Judge King said. "They offered to help Texas work out one of the most modern and efficient systems in the nation."

ITALIANS ARE BITTER ABOUT THE SANCTIONS

Italy showed bitter resentment against most of the nations of the world today as League sanctions went into effect.

Demonstrations by 2,000,000 young Italians around embassies and legations showed the temper of the people, convinced by Mussolini that Italy is being given a raw deal.

Mussolini is determined not only to push his campaign in Africa to success in spite of combined opposition of 52 nations, linked in the greatest mass effort in history to stop a nation from making war, but to fight back economically.

To that end Italy will refuse to buy the products of nations which apply sanctions and even to pay her debts abroad, which are large.

The Italians, backing the dictator wholeheartedly, are prepared to make heavy sacrifices and word from Rome is Italy probably can go a year before the real pinch of the trade and financial penalties is felt.

By that time, judging by the steady success of the preliminary campaign in Ethiopia, the country can be subjugated.

The real danger lies in the possibility Britain, backed by the League of Nations, will not be content to let Mussolini have his way. If they do the League structure collapses and the nations will be in the position of having let one man defy them and get away with it.

If the League should vote for military penalties against Italy it is safe to assume Britain will carry out her reiterated pledge to back the League to the limit within the provisions of the covenant.

Strawn Mortician Attends Lectures

EX-MINISTER GOES ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

HOUSTON, Nov. 18.—The death penalty will be asked for Rev. Edgar Eskridge of Orange, Baptist minister, charged with murdering his friend, Police Chief Ed J. O'Reilly. Questions to prospective jurors indicated this as his trial opened here today.

More than a dozen veniremen were excused, many of them because they objected to infliction of the death penalty. Others were challenged by defense attorneys after being questioned regarding a plea of insanity in murder cases.

Mme. Stavisky Goes to Court

Somberly attired, her intent look showing she realizes the seriousness of the accusations against her, Mme. Arlette Stavisky, widow of the alleged arch-swindler, is shown in Paris, where she is on trial with 19 others. She is charged with guilty knowledge of the activities of her husband, whose operations are said to have involved high French officials.

Two Ranger Boys On Wesleyan Team

FORT WORTH, Nov. 18.—Texas Wesleyan has two boys from Ranger on its football squad this year. They are John Bray, tackle, and Roy Segars, center.

Bray reported to Coach Rhome this year as a center but as he already had one all-conference center he decided to use Bray's power in some other position and he was shifted to tackle in practice and showed so much power that Rhome left him there. He has been playing there ever since and stops most of the plays around his way and the other way too. He diagnoses plays and is usually there when the runner gets to the line of scrimmage.

Bray also does the kicking-off for the Rams and puts the ball over the goal line consistently. He is so fast he rushes down the field and stops the return with pile-driving tackling before the runner gets to the 15-yard line.

Bray has two more years and will be one of the best tackles in the southwest before he gets out of school. In numerous games the sports writers have said that he was the best they had ever seen out of the Southwest Conference.

Segars is a substitute center. He didn't come out for football until late in the year, but made the traveling squad after a week of practice. He will turn into a fine man and will be valuable to Rhome before he gets through school.

Third Man Is Held In Old Murder Case

NEWTON, Texas, Nov. 18.—Sheriff T. S. Hughes arrested a third man today in connection with his investigation of a 5-year-old murder which was revealed Thursday night when a skeleton was found buried in a country road near Scarpin's Valley.

The third man, believed to be Jim Bowie, a negro named by Marian Wells, 26, in a written statement Saturday, also has made a statement, Sheriff Hughes said.

WAS SECOND SECRETARY TO GOV. ALLRED

First License Expected To Be Issued By This Afternoon.

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—C. E. Miller, who has been second secretary to Gov. James V. Allred, today was selected liquor administrator for Texas under the new state liquor law.

Miller was chosen by the liquor board today following the arrival here of Joseph Williams, Port Arthur, last member of the board to be named by Governor Allred.

With Miller's assistance the board began a search for office space, expecting to be settled by this afternoon and issue the first license. The first application for a state license came from San Antonio.

Miller, 59, was formerly president of the First National Bank at Electra and was a city councilman there. He became chief enforcement officer of the attorney general's department when Allred was elected attorney general. When Allred became governor Miller was appointed second secretary.

Trade Agreement Is Criticized By Several Factions

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The administration's new reciprocal trade agreement with Canada drew generalized complaints today from agriculture and lumber interests.

The agreement to lower tariff barriers on many exports of both nations—hailed by the administration as a model instrument of revival of trade and strengthening world peace—attempted to balance concessions to the greatest mutual benefit.

Lumber and agricultural product tariffs were lowered to benefit Canadian goods. Manufactured goods in the United States will benefit.

Capital circles were cautious in their comments, insisting details must be studied to indicate results of the agreement.

But from farm labor and lumber interests of the west came generalized protests. In some cases it was insisted it would be "ruinous" to agriculture and others predicting it would lead to difficulties in the lumber industry.

Hail to the Symbol of a Foolish Era!

The return of a prodigal son is always a touching sight. Even when the prodigal has been reduced, not to the husks that the swine did eat, but to the daintier fare of swank European hotels, it moves the heart to see him drawing up his chair once more at the parental table. And so everybody must have been deeply moved to see Jimmy Walker return to New York.

New York gave him a welcome, of course. Whistles blew, people leaned out of windows, crowds cheered—there was nothing missing except a get-together on the steps of the city hall, and a last lingering remnant of good taste forbade that.

It would be foolish to say that New York has gained anything by dapper Jimmy's return; but it would be equally foolish for the good people of the country to grow indignant over the fact that he did get a welcome.

After all, this man Walker is a useful sort of person. That is, he is a symbol of the things that were wrong with us back in the gay days of the boom, and if he can only keep moving about in our midst he may save us from the folly of going back to those days.

For Walker, after all, was nothing more or less than the incarnation of the good-time Charley. He was triple-distilled Broadway, with its virtues as well as its faults. He was decorative and likable, and there was only one thing wrong with him: he was the last man on earth who ought to have been put in charge of the destinies of the nation's greatest city.

Being mayor of New York is one of the most tremendous jobs that any politician on earth can have. From the point of view of money spent and people affected, it is a bigger job than the premiership of many an independent nation.

In any half-way intelligent social order, the electorate would take a moderate amount of pains to fill it with a man who at least had a sense of social responsibility.

But New York, back in the boom days, picked a Jimmy Walker—and liked him. It turned its government over to a wisecracker and a playboy, and gloried in it.

Nobody saw anything especially wrong with it—until, of course, the depression came and the stupidity of such a move was revealed too obviously for anyone to miss.

That tells the story. That is, it shows how far the boom era carried us from a sensible approach to the problems of self-government. We speak of the damage which the depression has caused, and it is very real and terrible; but it was the pre-depression era which let us in for it, and our collective folly of that era is epitomized by the fact that Walker was mayor of New York.

So it's a good thing that he's back. If we work our way up to another boom, Jimmy Walker will be an excellent object lesson to have around.

War-Wounded Blindly Call For the Past

The world has treated itself to quite a few spectacles of human goofiness during the last few years, but few of them have been quite as striking as the demonstration put on in Vienna the other day by 7000 war veterans.

These veterans gathered to cheer the name of Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne. Most of them were wounded veterans; some were on crutches, some were armless, some were blind. But all of them got together to whoop it up for restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy in Austria, and the spectacle is pretty puzzling.

Austria today is as much a casualty of the war as any of the maimed, disfigured ex-soldiers who paraded in Vienna. The nation has been fighting off slow death for 17 years, while being aided by copious blood transfusion from the League of Nations. And it is hard to see how the country can blame anyone but its former rulers for its predicament.

The Hapsburgs in pre-war Vienna ruled a vast domain that was bound to fly apart. The empire had a sound enough economic basis, but politically it was a powder magazine full of flying sparks.

The pride and stubbornness of the monarchy stood in the way of the adjustments that would have to be made to prevent an explosion; and when the explosion finally came, wrecking most of Europe and leaving Austria as hopelessly crippled as the most horribly mangled of ex-soldiers, a large part of the responsibility went properly to the Hapsburgs.

That being the case, you would suppose that the last thing the service men of Austria would want would be a restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty. This, above everything else, would seem to be the one thing that would stir them to a frenzy of resistance.

But instead they pack the streets of Vienna and cheer lustily—the crippled, the war-ruined, the blind, the pathetic specters of defeat—for the Hapsburg who wants to re-ascend their throne.

The simple fact is that mankind is still groggy from the blows of war. A large part of it, like this bloc of Austrian ex-soldiers, realizes only that its present situation is unendurable. It is still too stunned to work out a new plan of salvation; it can only look back to the old-war days and strive blindly to revive that which is dead.

WITH customary reserve, Pacific Coast League baseball writers tell me that Joe Di Maggio is the best ball player ever developed out there.

"Oh-ho, I would say that there is only one finer ball player alive, and his name is Charley Gehring," says Tommy Laird, sports editor of the San Francisco News.

"Di Maggio is likely to kill an opposing infielder at any time," asserts Gene Coughlin, of the Los Angeles Post-Record.

"Di Maggio has the strongest and most accurate arm since Long Bob Meusel," testifies Bob Cronin, of the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News.

"Di Maggio never makes a mistake on the bases," says Rudy Hickey, of the Sacramento Bee. "You've seldom seen a more accomplished flycatcher," reports Cliff Harrison, of the Seattle Star.

"Di Maggio plays ball with grim intensity," asserts Billy Stepp, of the Portland News-Telegram.

Joe Has a Lot to Live Up to in 1936

WITH advance notices like that, Di Maggio, who reports to the St. Petersburg camp of the New York Yankees next spring, has a lot to live up to.

The Pacific Coast League has turned out some pretty good ones, Ivy Olson, Roger Peckinpaugh, Charley Hollocher, Dave Bancroft, the Waners, Curt Davis, Vean Gregg, Franklin Demaree, Stanley Hack, Jack Graneby, Bob Meusel, Willie Kamm, Earl Averill, Gussie Suhr, Tony Lazerri, Chic Gandil, Swede Risher, and Claude Williams, to mention a few.

TIME
Horace Mann once said, "You may as well borrow a person's money as his time." How we spend our time is a determining factor in any man's accomplishments.
Proper proportionment of our time is the thing that should be emphasized. Truly it can be said that a man is best fit who has properly proportioned his time to best meet his spiritual, mental and physical needs. We are all aware that we may forsake all others of these for the sake of any one of these and become unbalanced in our thinking, acting and doing.
There is one thing, sure, that we do know, and that is that a bit of clean, wholesome constructive thinking scattered all through the course of our time is elevating and uplifting.
We say that the actions of any nation's people is governed almost, if not exclusively, by their thinking.
We feel that the teacher's upmost purpose in teaching at the present time is to inspire and direct the child to think properly and not learn so many numbers and pages.
In being an efficient director we feel that we have influenced the child to think. Thus, spending time in thinking is the only way in which our many problems can be solved.
"An empty brain is a devil's workshop" is just as true and to cause this empty capacity to be filled is the duty of instructors and directors. It's a big job, but if we are not willing to work let's not hire out.

LITERARY SOCIETY NEWS

Our next program will be presented on Wednesday night, Nov. 27. This will be the night before Thanksgiving. Our program will not be representative of the time as much as we desired and we do not brand it as a Thanksgiving program. We hope to have a plan of the program in the "Oak Leaflet" next week.
We extend a welcome for the rendition of any special numbers by the outsiders in the community at any time.

TO PATRONS

We have a number of tardies each day. We as teachers would appreciate it if it is at all possible to see that their children are at school on time.

THE BEST IN LIFE

Sometimes we are caused to wonder just what is the best in life, or do we become so busy with the cares of every day that we lose sight of the best that life affords? Wordsworth says "That portion of a good man's life is his little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and love." And Sir Humphrey Davy tells us that "life is not made up of great sacrifices of duties, but of the little things, in which smiles and kindness and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart, and secure comfort."

The GOLDEN FEATHER by Robert Bruce

JEAN DUNN didn't get any answer when BOBBY WALLACE asks her to marry him at the Golden Feather night club.
SANDY HARKINS whose business connection is vague, "Sandy" introduced Bobby and Jean to a MI and MRS. LEWIS Bobby tells some words for Lewis who tells him to find out.
LARRY GLENN, federal agent is trailing WINDY LEWIS, bank robber. He learns about the bond transaction and questions Bobby. Larry believes the car Lewis bought is armored. Bobby undertakes to find out.
Jean agrees to a secret engagement with Sandy. The bank of which her father is president is robbed and Larry starts a search for the robbers.
Jean goes to see Sandy who has been injured. He and the Lewises are staying at a farmhouse. The whole party leaves the farm.
Meanwhile Larry has discovered Jean is with the robbers. He and his men reach the house where the crime is taking place.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XL
WHEN the guard brought Jean Dunn back to the house, she felt as if some queer paralysis of the spirit had descended on her making it impossible for her either to think or to feel any longer.
She knew the worst now. She was in the hands of the Red Jack-gang—the most notorious and dangerous and vicious gang of man-killers on the continent—the Jean Dunn gang had thought "It was an exciting lark to poke her nose inside The Golden Feather night club! She was in their power and the man she had promised to marry was one of the gang, and there was no possible chance that she could ever get away.
She stumbled along, until at last they came out of the woods into the clearing. The old house loomed up a dark, insidiously designed shadow against the star-flecked sky, the few lights in its rooms gleaming dimly through the night. Beyond it the surface of the lake was a black pool. In here and there by a touch of reflected starshine a breeze was rising, and there was a gentle rustling of leaves in the trees, a silky wash of wavelets on the beach.
The man conducted her straight to the house and marched her up the steps and into the hall. He stood there with her, his gun under his arm, and waited. A door opened somewhere, and Red Jackson came toward them.
He looked at the guard coldly. "What're you doin' in here?" he asked. "I thought you were supposed to be a lookout up the road. What's the idea comin' in here?"
The man hastily gestured toward Jean.
"Honest, chief, I had to come in," he said. "She was takin' it on the lam up through the woods, and I figured—
"Oh, you figured," said Jackson. "If I can ever get some of you pin-heads to remember that I'm supposed to be do the figuring around here . . . well, let it go. Go on back there now, junkhead, and the next time you find anybody wandering around loose give us a call—don't come in yourself."
The guard departed, obviously relieved to get away with no worse rebuke than this. Jean was left alone, facing America's Number One public enemy.
He eyed her coldly, his washed-out eyes seeming more lifeless than ever in the dim lamplight. "Just where was you going?" he DeMILLE BELIEVES MOTION PICTURES MAKE DAYS OF PAST "LIVE AND BREATHE" To Cecil B. DeMille the most interesting and dramatic thing to film is history.

"Not all history, of course," DeMille explained. "Some of it is boring, some of it is exact, and some of it is what Henry Ford said it was. But I mean the high lights of real history." He has just finished pondering what he believes to be the most important period of history for his latest production for Paramount, "The Crusades," now at the Connellee Theatre.

A couple thousand books, three truckloads, were available for reading up on the subject of "The Crusades."

"The Hindus gave us the best word yet on history," said DeMille. "They called it a sea in which an elephant might drown and in which a child might wade. Some of those books are so heavy and incomprehensible that you would well believe some elephant-minded historian had written them."

"The motive of the Crusades is quite easy to grasp. The Christians wanted the sacred place of Jerusalem. The Saracens, who owned it didn't want them to have it. Good historians make that point clear. The bad historians make it obscure, lost under tons of dull chronology."

DeMille opened the huge volumes of Michand's history of the Crusades. They were full of pictures by Gustave Dore.

"Why not a history composed entirely of pictures? Why not, indeed? With text given in spoken words, as in a play? Well, that's what we are going to do. With the battle on the screen, the songs and war-chants of the period, the heroes as they looked in life and as they spoke."

DeMille's theory is that history should not be so much conned as experienced. It should be told or pictured so graphically that the viewer will be caught up in it and given emotional impacts, and then he will know how men felt about the Crusades in those times. He will get the full emotional impact of it in an hour and a half, instead of laboriously digging into books for a year and a half and missing the feel of the Crusades entirely, said DeMille.

"No historical film will ever take the place of books, which bestow discipline on the mind. But the films can give the essence and feel of the subject. Pictures, though their intent is to entertain, may also become the guide to history. Even the best of historians of the Crusades use pictures to illustrate their text. In the film we shall reverse the process, use spoken text to enhance the pictures."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

It sometimes seems that the so-called cheap cuts of meat require so much fuel to cook that they are no real saving.

However, chopped meat cleverly handled may be cooked quite as quickly as the more expensive steaks and chops. Beef, veal, lamb and pork can all be chopped and used in many appetizing dishes.

During a winter I spent in Southern California years ago I had my first chicken tamales. Since then I have tried a mixture of veal and pork which is very satisfactory and much less expensive. Also instead of using layers of corn husks spread with cornmeal, I have learned to use one large corn husk for each tamale and to spread the sauce over the husk.

Hot Tamales

One cup cornmeal, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 cups boiling water, 1 cup cold water. Mix cornmeal, sugar and salt to a smooth paste with cold water and add boiling water and butter. Cook and stir for ten minutes. Make a sauce as follows:

Four tablespoons peanuts finely ground, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 red dry pepper, 1-2 teaspoon caraway seeds, 2 tablespoons raisins, 4 ripe olives, 1 hard cooked egg, 1-2 cups diced meat (cooked), 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup meat stock.

Put nuts, pepper and raisins through food chopper. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add meat stock, stirring constantly. Add remaining ingredients, cutting egg in slices.

Take four large corn husks and wash clean. Wipe dry. Spread each husk with paste and put 2

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Chilled sweet cider, cereal cooked with dates, cream, crisp cinnamon toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Hot tamales, hearts of celery and homemade pickles, baked pears chilled and served with custard sauce, milk, tea.

DINNER: Cream of onion soup, lamb meat balls, buttered potatoes, peas, cranberry salad, prune pudding, milk, coffee.

large spoonfuls of meat sauce on each husk. Fold and tie securely so that the filling can't escape and steam for one hour. Serve very hot.

Blanched almonds may be substituted for peanuts if you prefer. The meat should be cut in small pieces, thinner than if accurately diced.

Lamb Meat Balls

One and one-half pounds stewing lamb, 2 tablespoons beef dripping, 1-2 cups tomato juice, 1 tablespoon flour, chopped parsley, 1 minced onion, 2 whole cloves, 1 bay leaf, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar.

Put meat through food chopper season with 1 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper and make into small balls. Dust with flour. Heat beef drippings in frying pan and brown meat balls. Add tomato juice and remaining salt and pepper, sugar, onion, cloves and bay leaf. Simmer forty minutes closely covered. Remove meat balls and thicken sauce with flour stirred to a smooth paste with a little cold water. Bring sauce to the boiling point and pour over meat balls. Sprinkle with minced parsley and serve.

HE never eats onions yet he ordered a dish "souise." Can you imagine his chagrin? For any time you see "souise" you may know there'll be onion flavor just as "Florentine" means spinach.

An omelet Florentine is an ordinary French omelet on a bed of spinach.

It's important to know some of the more commonly-used fancy names of dishes. They come about in various ways. Sometimes a noted chef wants to honor a locality, a hotel, a club or a famous person and names a dish accordingly.

During the last three or four centuries many dishes have been named in these ways and have become universally known. Peach Melba was christened in honor of the great singer and consists of sponge cake, ice cream, peach and raspberry purée.

May Indicate Style of Serving Many names attached to dishes are French and indicate method of preparation or seasoning.

This a roast au jus is served in its own unthickened juices. Au beurre noir means with black butter.

The Methodist Missionary Society met Tuesday at the church for an all-day meeting in observance of the annual week of prayer. The program was led by the president, Mrs. Charles Lee. The devotional consisted of songs with comments about the authors, several prayers and many Scripture readings. The Missionary Council of the Southern Methodist Churches in their annual meeting each spring decides on two objects for which the week of prayer offerings will be used. One object is always in the home field and the other in the foreign field. This year the home object is the community center at Ensley, Ala., and the needs of this work were brought out in articles from the "World Outlook," with many pictures showing various activities there. The objects in the foreign field are the Laura Haygood School in Sochow, China, and the Evangelistic Center in Seoul, Korea. At noon a covered dish lunch was served, after which various playlets and articles were presented. Those present were Mmes. Charles Lee, S. E. Snodgrass, H. H. Nance, W. H. Whitworth, Ed Parks, W. C. Bedford, Preston Sparks, C. O. Bragg, and son, Charles, Misses Mollie O'Rear, Agatha Genoway, Edda Parks, Valla Whitworth.
