Joe Kennedy Talks a Lot of Sense

The presence of that red-headed Irishman at the Court of St. James makes a lot of Americans feel better about their country's chance for peace. Joe Kennedy gives signs of being the ambassador that the United States has needed for a long time. That first speech was simple, it was straight-forward, it was sensible. If Great Britain—or any other country—gets funny ideas about how the average American looks at the world scene, it won't be Joe Kennedy's fault.

It was good to read in Kennedy's speech such passages as these:

"Most Americans insist that their country retain its independent and unmortgaged judgment as to the merits of world crisis as and when they arise."

"Where the present interests of Great Britain and the United States meet is in the prevention of this generally feared world war."

"If the nations should again become engulfed in the cataclysm of a general war, we should make ourselves very strong and then pursue whatever course we considered to be best for the United States."

"Best for the United States"—that's putting it the way it ought to be put and leaving room for no misinterpretation. Joe Kennedy is a plain-speaking man. He wants the position of his country to be understood. He said that two ideas were wrong. One was that the U. S. wouldn't fight under any circumstances short of actual invasion, and the other was that the U. S. could never remain neutral in the event of a general war. When Kennedy says that majority of the American people prefer the middle ground he is right. The American people believe that keeping to such a course is the surest way to keep out of war.

Joe Kennedy will be no errand boy at St. James. He will like no boots. And the British should like him and respect him for those reasons. They received his speech enthusiastically, even when he frankly warned that the U. S. would go whichever way seemed best to the U. S.

Kennedy said that Americans refuse to believe in the inevitability of war. That is true. The American outlook is not fatalistic. Neither is it foolish. Americans know that there is a good chance that most of the big nations of the world will be at one another's throats—and soon. But with men like Joe Kennedy in the important posts in the foreign service, a great many Americans feel that their nation is a great deal less likely to mix in the bloody mess. They remember all too well Ambassador Page's maneuverings prior to America's entrance into the World War. Many of them still blame Page. And the great majority of them hope that Joe Kennedy won't make the same mistakes.

McDonald Finds Historic Emblem In Neighbor City

William H. McDonald, state land commissioner, this week found a historic emblem that he had been looking for for years—and discovered a bit of his charge, that it was within 10 miles of his home town of Eastland. It was the tulle-torn, weather-worn flag of the famous Parsons' brigade of Civil War fame. The famous flag, made by women volunteer workers of the old Houston Bayou region, had passed from one member of the Parsons' brigade to another until Capt. Robert Willis Bonner, blind veteran of Weatherford, gained control of it. He kept it for several years, but later turned it over to General Marshbanks of Waxahachie, the commander. When Gen. Marshbanks died—the last surviving member of the famous Texas fighters—he had made a provision in his will that the flag should be perpetuated, and willed it to Mrs. A. B. Conway, of Ranger, 10 miles from McDonald's home town, the daughter of the blind Capt. Bonner. She now lives at Mineral Wells. Mrs. Conway, a leader in Texas D. A. R. circles, placed the flag in a miniature museum of G. A. Holland at Weatherford for years.

Fire Commissioner Urges Observation Of Clean-Up Week

AUSTIN.—Marvin Hall, state fire insurance commissioner, today urged statewide observance of Clean-Up Week as an effective means of fire prevention. The week of April 3-10 has been set aside by Governor James V. Allred for the annual clean-up campaign.

"This will be an excellent opportunity to dispose of unnecessary rubbish, combustible materials, and inflammable goods or solutions which naturally accumulate around the home, store and factory," Hall said. "These, and other hazards, can be removed or reduced to the direct benefit of all concerned."

Hall explained that the people of Texas had made great progress with their fire prevention activities during the past few years, and that reduction in insurance cost had been the result.

"We cannot afford to jeopardize this good record," he said. "Clean-Up Week will be an appropriate time for us to eliminate any hazards or conditions that might start or spread a fire."

"It is only through such care and diligence that fire prevention can be successful," Hall pointed out. "For this reason I urge every Texas citizen to observe Clean-Up Week, and to extend the fire prevention activities of that week to include every day in the year."

RAINS "DRY" IN OREGON

By United Press SALEM, Ore.—Oregon rain is dry rain. That is how a CCC enrollee from Georgia described it in a letter to his family. When the youth gave the letter to the camp educational instructor for correction, he was asked what he meant by "dry rain." He replied, "In Georgia rain pours down, but in Oregon it rains a lot drier."

Dairy Products in State Are Increased

AUSTIN.—Dairy manufactured products in Texas during February increased substantially over the corresponding month of last year, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research stated.

Reports to the bureau from representative groups of dairy manufacturing plants indicate an increase over February last year of 43.9 per cent in butter production, 38.3 per cent in cheese production, and 25.9 per cent in ice cream production. During the first two months of the year the respective increases were: Butter, 32.4 per cent; cheese, 35.9 per cent, and ice cream, 33.5 per cent.

It is of interest to note that although ice cream production was sharply above that of February last year, sales were 6.7 per cent

LOVE LAUGHS AT THE DOCTOR

by ELINORE COWAN STONE

CAST OF CHARACTERS—CONSTANCE MAIDWELL—heroine; the stand-in. DEREK MAINTON—an artist who looks money-wise. HILDEGARDE THORVALD—Derek's girl. DR. ROGERS—he met his most difficult case.

Yesterday, Spring Derek alone for the first time since arrival at the Thorvalds, Constance forgot everything else in the joy of his presence.

CHAPTER XVII DEREK had evidently just returned from one of the moonlight gallops about which he had written, for he was wearing jodhpurs and a soft white shirt, open at the throat. As Constance came up, he was standing, his bright head bare to the moonlight, with one footed foot on a low stone wall that ran along the edge of the grove, flicking idly at a weed with his riding crop.

At some faint sound she made, he turned, flung aside his whip, cried softly, "Connie, darling!" and springing toward her, caught her into his arms. The whole movement was as beautiful as a well-rehearsed dance.

Now he was holding her from behind, laughing down at her like a delighted boy. "Darling," he cried, "I can't believe yet that you're actually here, after those terrible empty weeks."

"Were they empty, Derek?" She couldn't hear him say it often enough. "Weren't they for you?" he asked reproachfully into her hair.

"Oh, so, I jealously empty, Derek." And in the end it was she who had to reassure him, to tell him over and over again how desperately lonely she had been.

"When I walked in these three evenings and saw you, Connie, it almost floored me. All the time I was making those silly marks on your face, I had the strangest sense of unreality—not actually being there and seeing it all happen, if you understand what I mean. I hardly dared speak for fear you'd vanish."

"Of course! That was why he had seemed so strangely silent. "I know," Constance murmured. "I've been feeling that, too."

They sat down on the low stone wall, his arms around her. "You see, all they had told me was that the doctor was bringing on some one to double for the Wynne person. Even when the nurse came to get me, she didn't remember your name. Of course, if I had known Rogers knew you, I might have guessed. You are like the Wynne. . . . How did he come to find you?"

WHEN Constance had told him about her three meetings with Mark Rogers, Derek frowned and said somewhat sulkily, "There's something about all this I don't exactly like—the way this fellow seems to have been following you around, for one thing, ever since I came away. That day he came to the studio wanting to buy your portrait, I—"

Constance sat up very straight. "The day he—what?" "Oh, didn't I tell you that? Well, everything was in such a muddle then. . . . Just a few minutes before you came in the day I left with the Thorvalds, he came barging into the studio, wanting to buy the Lady in Blue. Said his mother liked it."

So it was Derek's mother Mark Rogers had been coming from that day when he had nearly knocked her down on the steps. "Of course I told him pretty flatly that the portrait wasn't for sale," Derek was going on. "But I thought then—do you know, I don't altogether like your flying out with him alone, Connie—a man you hardly know."

"He gave the best of references; and his circle of acquaintances seemed to be absolutely gilt-edged—Dr. Ardmore, for instance—not to speak of the Thorvalds, whose opinion," Constance added demurely, "you don't seem to think too badly of, yourself."

"Yes, I know. But you can't always judge from that." Connie smiled a little secret smile. . . . This from Derek, who had never considered any unconventional prank in his own company too indiscreet—even from the first.

"You needn't worry," she said. "Even if I were interested, I don't seem to be having a startling success with the gentleman. In fact, this evening he very emphatically washed his hands of me."

"Washed his hands of you?" Derek echoed blankly. "You mean he—but, I say, he can't do that, you know?" "Oh, can't he? You don't know the man?"

"But I definitely heard him tell Mr. Thorvald this evening after you were in George's room that the experiment was surprisingly successful, and that he hoped you could be persuaded to stay until the Wynne menace is up and able to stage her own act. . . . Camilla Wynne, by the way, is the family thorn in the flesh I wrote you about."

"Yes," Constance breathed when she seemed to find difficulty in going on. "In the meantime—"

"(CONSTANCE couldn't help wondering if it had never occurred to Derek that, after all his own eager promises, it had taken Mark Rogers to get her here.

"It's going to be perfect, darling," he was going on. "The nights are marvelous now. We can spend hours together—like this—and—"

"Derek," she said suddenly, "I can't help wondering what that you mean by like this."

"Mean? Why, just what I said." Derek seemed puzzled and a little irritated. "Alone together, where no one can bother us, and—where we won't disturb the family, of course."

"Derek," Constance began again, "if I were your wife—as I should have been now, I suppose—if one of this had ever happened—if you had never seen the Thorvalds—would it have occurred to you to wonder whether, at any time or in any place we chose—our being together could possibly be any one else's business?"

"Now, Connie—" Derek's voice took on a hurt, startled note. He had picked up his riding crop again, and was flicking restlessly at a bush beside him. "Don't you think you're being a little—well, difficult about this? I mean—well, after all, I am a guest here; and so are you, of course," he added hastily.

"But you don't mean to suggest, I suppose," Constance asked, "that the Thorvalds could have any objection to their guests meeting and talking quite openly, especially when they had known each other—rather well—for some time?"

"Of course not." Derek moved impatiently. "But just now the family are in the deepest of trouble. If you had been here, as I was, when—"

"Do I understand," Constance interrupted, trying to keep her voice very even, "that you have been worried for fear that I might seize this opportunity—to force our relationship on Mr. and Miss Thorvald?"

"Connie, darling!" Derek took her swiftly into his arms again; but a real annoyance tinged his voice. "You can't imagine I meant any such thing. You didn't used to be so—so unfair. What I had in mind was—well, here we are, after these dismal weeks, with the key to happiness literally thrown into our laps. Sooner or later things are bound to work out the way we both want them to, but in the meantime—"

"Yes!" Constance breathed when she seemed to find difficulty in going on. "In the meantime—"

Crew Finds Gold And Diggings Spurts

BLOOMSBURG, S. D.—The job of deepening a cellar in Bloomsburg is completed, but the job was done too well, the contractor concluded. John Johnson, a workman, turned up a $20 gold piece with his pick and fellow workers dug in with all their might. Several hours' effort yielded $1,240 (57 coins) of an apparently long-barred treasure. So hard did the diggers work that they dug the cellar two feet deeper than the owner desired.

WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON.—The TVA tempest is the latest phase of the old war between the private utilities and the advocates of public power development. Personalities and politics add both color and heat.

Once again the conservative and progressive lines are forming while a barrage of charges and counter-charges emits much more smoke than fire.

Congress and the people have a right to know all about what goes on in TVA. So TVA's friends are forced to consent to an investigation promoted by TVA's enemies lest they be charged with trying to cover up. What they fear is that an investigation will be dominated by would-be wreckers of that great project.

Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of TVA stands in lonely majesty as the man whose vague and thus far unsubstantiated charges of dishonesty and misconduct against his fellow directors, Vice Chairman Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lillenthal, have brought on the tempest.

He is now at the climax of a TVA career in which he has been conspicuously more friendly to private power companies than the various other high administration officials who have to do with electric power.

Chairman Morgan is the only one of those officials who ever has been publicly praised by president Wendell Wilkie of the Commonwealth and Southern Company. The others are now supporting Harcourt Morgan and Lillenthal.

In the summer of 1936 Chairman Morgan advised Roosevelt that he would resign if Lillenthal, leading exponent of New Deal

SPORT GLANCES By Grayson

By JERRY BRONDFIELD, NEA Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK.—Brother combinations in hockey—at one time more plentiful than in any other major sport—are starting to crack apart. Not that members of the same families participating in hockey are fewer, for there are more than ever before, but one or all the brothers are beginning to slip out of the top line of puck chasing.

The 1937-38 season marked the fadeout of the Conacher brothers Lionel and Charlie. Lionel could have continued with the Montreal Maroons but went on the shelf of his own volition because of his seat in the Ontario Legislature, and his vice-chairmanship of the Ontario Athletic Commission. Charlie was forced out by a failure of his single kidney to function properly.

Two Jacks—Busher and Art—are retaining their places under the big tent, although Art was down-river with Syracuse in 1936-37. Busher continues with the Toronto Maple Leafs, while Art now is back with the Boston Bruins.

Of the three Boucher brothers, who once were active simultaneously in major league hockey, the lone survivor is Frank, and he serves only as general utility forward as well as assistant coach with the Rangers. George is manager of the Springfield Indians and Bill is managing an amateur team in an English league.

The Jerwas—Joe and Frank—once were on the Boston roster together. Joe now is with the New York Americans, while Frank has slipped back to the minors. Jack and Frank Doran are still following the rubber dish, but they're doing their chores in the minors, Jack with Pittsburgh and Frank with Syracuse.

Sprague and Odie Cleghorn also are back-tracking. Sprague has been manager of several minor league outfits, and Odie having accepted a referee's post in the National League. Jerry Shannon has continued to stick with the Montreal Maroons but brother Charlie now does his bit with the Syracuse Stars. Both are forwards.

The Mantha brothers did a 50 percent disappearance when Sylvio, veteran defenseman, was let out by the Boston Bruins, with whom he had tried a comeback after being idle for a full season. George, however, continues as one of the mainstays of the Maroons.

Winners In Cake Contest at Year's School Are Named

Final decision for awards in the cake contest of the Cooking School sponsored by the Eastland Telegram and Merchants of Eastland, was made Saturday afternoon with the first place going to Mrs. A. D. Dabney, a prize of fifteen silver quarters; the second, ten quarters, was presented to Mrs. T. E. Payne; and the third of honorable mention went to Mrs. Roy Stokes.

The contest was sponsored by the Mrs. Tucker's Shortening company in commemoration of their 25th anniversary with the prizes presented by them to the winners.

The cakes entered in the contest were made with Mrs. Tucker's Shortening.

Many Americans Can't Prove Date Of Their Births

AUSTIN. — If unexpectedly faced with the necessity of legally establishing the date of their birth, their age, their American citizenship, thousands of Texans would not know whether or not their births were registered with the proper authorities. Great embarrassment, inconvenience, or even serious loss of property could conceivably result from either an absence of registration or an error made in filing it with the state.

Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer, cited an unnamed but prominent Texas citizen who upon investigation found that his son had been registered for more than 20 years as illegitimate. Another instance the health official related concerned a veteran of the World War, who, after rearing a family of three children, found that he had been registered at birth as a girl child. The experiences of workers with vital statistics are rich with stories of persons vainly seeking to establish their rights to property because of neglect of their parents or attending physicians to register them properly at time of birth.

To Teach Sots Sobriety

Citizens of Woburn, Mass., who stand in front of too many mahogany bars will find themselves behind plenty of steel ones when they are plunked into this wheeled cage and paraded before their fellow townsmen. The coop is the idea of Mayor William E. Kane, who is seen standing by while Ella M. Knowton, president of the Woburn Unitarian Church General Welfare Club, prepares to swing a baptismal bottle at the steel bars. What? Of COURSE it's water in the bottle!

These law requires the births of all Texas babies to be registered with the local registrar, who is the justice of the peace in rural areas, and city secretary in incorporated towns, within five days after the blessed event takes place, and forms are furnished physicians and midwives for this purpose.

A copy of the registration is returned for permanent filing. These records are "vital" not only to the individual from a legal standpoint, Dr. Cox said, but to the state as well.

"We must know how many babies are born, how many die and from what causes mortality occurs if we are to accomplish the best results from a public health standpoint. Such a program obviously needs the interested support of every Texan. Our bureau of vital statistics is only too glad to cooperate in 'getting the record straight'."

Absentee Voting In Election Will Close at 5 P. M.

Does hom need a "face lifting"?

Sometimes homes, like people, are taken for granted and signs of weariness go unnoticed. Homes, too, need beauty treatments. They come out of them renewed, refreshed, stimulating once more to all who meet them.

Early Spring is the time to plan the "face lifting" of the rooms in which you live. Carefully planned, a little money now can go far. Fortunately, authentic news of the latest, the best designed, the most economical in home furnishings and accessories is printed for you day after day on these pages. National manufacturer and local merchant advertise to help you.

Perhaps slip covers on davenport and wing chair will make faithful but a little weary pieces look like new. Perhaps summer draperies will make your living-room so fresh and gay that you yourself will hardly know it. A new rug may be the prescription that your home needs. A new lamp can light more than a corner—it can shine into the hearts of all who see it. Glassware, a new table, porch furniture, all can enter into your home's fact lifting.

Look about your home as if you had never seen it—and follow the advertising on these pages!

NAMES in the News

Names make headlines. Newspapers, today as always, are made up of what people say, think, propose, dissent from. Governments, institutions, businesses—and all their activities—are only the lengthened shadows of men!

What is true on the front pages is true, also, on advertising pages. Advertisements are simply signed statements of men, banded together to form a business who seek your patronage. They back their good name against the products they ask you to buy. They say, in cold black type, that theirs is a name you can trust.

People who get the most for their money in the market-places are people who know the value of familiar, trade-marked products. They buy with confidence. They buy by name—and save time, tiresome searching, and money! Are you doing likewise?
