Libby Holman Gets Kick Out of Comeback

Request

The happy smile Libby Holman wears has nothing to do with the little matter of the fortune that a recent court decision thrust into her hands in settlement of the estate of her late husband, Smith Reynolds. It simply marks her satisfaction over the success of her comeback effort which has made her again one of the favorite entertainers of Broadway's exclusive night life sector. She's pictured here as she made her debut at a swanky cabaret.

FEDERAL MEN SEIZE STILLS NEAR NIMROD

Seizure of nine stills near Nimrod this week by federal agents from Fort Worth will result in filing of charges alleging violation of prohibition against several laws at Abilene, Sheriff Virge Foster predicted Saturday. Federal court for the district is at Abilene.

The stills were located near Nimrod and were of an average capacity of 200 gallons. Several manufacturers were centered in one vicinity, Sheriff Foster stated. Several barrels and many gallons of liquor were confiscated.

POLITICAL WRITER FINDS MAINE AGAINST NEW DEAL

around here before they'd vote democratic. Dennis is about 80 and an old-time Democratic leader in Arrostook county. He teetered back in his rocker in "The Handy Store—D. Sheehan, Prop." as he discussed the current political situation in Maine. Sheehan sells a strictly cheap and unostentatious stock of all-day suckers, bulk candy and canned goods. He thinks the nation will go for Roosevelt next year, but that Maine will vote for the Republican nominee for president—any Republican nominee. A few drills up and around market square and down toward the railroad yards where the potato warehouses stand row on row indicates that old Dennis is not far wrong on Maine. This north country likes Col. Frank Knox or Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas for President after next November. That, however, is community preference. The farmers farther up country are thinking of Senator Borah although they suspect he is a trifle wild on money questions. There is some resentment against former President Herbert Hoover but he has friends here and they are smart and hopeful. President Roosevelt is condemned for too free spending. They say he has broken most of his campaign promises. George Paul, who taxied me around Arrostook county, said, too, that a lot of republicans had federal and state jobs in Maine. Work relief is functioning fairly well but there is some friction between local and federal authorities. Houlton is carrying its share of the load. Money for annual re-surfacing of the town's tar roads was diverted to poor relief this year and the cars bounce you around a lot. I came up here because this little town and Presque Isle, farther north, are the joint capitals of a potato empire. Maine produces one sixth of the potatoes grown in the United States and Arrostook county produces 80 per cent of the spuds grown in Maine. The county is larger than Massachusetts but not so populous—78,000 persons or thereabouts. The 1935 congress made potatoes a political crop. It passed a sort of potato "Volstead Act" which may land you in jail if you purchase "spottleg potatoes." You will be able to recognize the legal potato by a stamp which Secretary Wallace or some of his men will lick and affix to each lawful container. You won't go to jail right away. Congress neglected to appropriate money to administer the act. Meantime, Wallace plans a January potato farmer referendum—There are three million growers—to determine whether they want "Volstead" potatoes. Wallace hopes the farmers vote "no." Farmers in this part of the country are going to vote "Yes" I was informed, by about three to one. To Maine, potato control merely is its share of the Agricultural Adjustment Act booty. H. W. Gornel, potato merchant, whose office overlooks market square, told me that Connecticut tobacco farmers and southern cotton farmers who were paid not to raise their staple crops, had turned surplus land in to potatoes and were wrecking the market. "Maine thinks if they would just abolish the AAA we might get along okay," Gornel said. "But if there is to be any AAA, Maine wants a lot of it."

Editor's Note: Lyle Wilson, ace political reporter of the United Press, is touring the country recording present times. His first trip was into the Maine potato country, which is vitally interested in the potato control act. In the following dispatch, the first of a series Wilson reports reaction to this pivotal political state.

Tammy Again Slips In the Back Way

When the gent over at the corner table gets too noisy and starts spilling his beer, it is a simple matter to take him by the neck and throw him out. Unfortunately, it often is much more of a job to keep him from sneaking back in again a little later.

All this is brought to mind by a study of the recent city elections in New York. These indicate that Tammany Hall, with its derby tilted down over its left eye in the good old tradition, is on the verge of making a comeback—at the expense, as usual, of the good citizens of the town.

Tammany succeeded in capturing 14 aldermanic seats in this last election. That in itself may not mean so much—Fiorello LaGuardia never did have the solid two-thirds majority that he needed on the board of aldermen—but it seems to indicate that history, with the help of the boys in the back room, is about to repeat itself.

For Tammany, which has been the horrible example for American reformers ever since the days of mustache cups and high-wheeled bicycles, always does come back. The indignant customers have tossed the tiger out of the joint about once every 20 years for generations, and he always has come back for more.

Like the Salvation Army's pet clients, he may be down, but he is never out.

Now all this is a pretty sad commentary on the fate of reform movements in American city politics, but there is nothing in the least mysterious about it. A writer of holy scripture some 20 centuries ago called the turn when he remarked that the sons of this world are frequently wiser than the children of light. That is as true in modern America as it was in ancient Judea.

The secret of the whole thing is that Tammany, or any other political machine, keeps working. Politics is not a sanctified and emotional game, to the machine; it is a job which has to be worked at, day in and day out.

The votes that elect city officials are cast by living, flesh-and-blood human beings, and the outfit that corrals the most human beings gets the most votes (barring undue shenanigans at the polling places). This is the point that Tammany never forgets.

The man who wants to see his city permanently equipped with an honest and efficient government could profitably remember that point. It isn't enough to get up on the stump once in four years and holler about the misdeeds of the ascals down at city hall. It takes a continuing organization and continuing hard work.

As long as the people who are interested in good government apply their interest only by fits and starts, Tammany and the other self-help machines will continue to enjoy the eternal comeback.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON. — When Mr. Harold Ickes goes on the spot, which is where you can find him on frequent occasions, the show is rather more than likely to be diverting.
Even more fascinating are the behind-the-scenes movements as in the recent cause celebre of the German steel offered by subcontractors on a couple of PWA projects.
Suddenly your Uncle Harold found himself sore beset by the "Steel Trust," the American Federation of Labor, the Hearst press, and the large, motley collection of intra-administration enemies he has collected upon himself since March 4, 1933.

OLDEN

Funeral services for M. L. Sharratt of Olden, who died at the West Texas Clinic in Ranger last Sunday night, were held at the Olden Methodist Church Wednesday afternoon. Interment was in Post Oak cemetery, near Breckenridge. Rev. E. R. Stanford of the Eastland Methodist Church conducted the services which were very impressive.
Mr. Sharratt, for years an employe of the Magnolia Petroleum Company and located at Olden, had a host of friends in this and other communities who are deeply grieved at his passing. Known for his quiet, sincere nature and his pleasant, kindly disposition, he had those qualities that make and retain friends. He was a man capable of deep and lasting friendships. His life had been spent in many and different localities. France, many states of the Union and the gold fields of Alaska were known to him.
Always exceptionally well and strong, it was not until the past two years that "Luke," as he was known to his friends, suffered ill health when he became ill of a serious heart ailment. Over a period of two years he suffered recurring attacks but it was not until the past three months he had to be confined to his bed. Throughout the whole two years and through his last long, discouraging illness, he was courageous, brave and kept the great desire to live. He fought a good battle even when it would seem he must have known it was to be a losing battle. He loved nature, the grandeur of the

Chrysanthemums Grown By Local Florist

Eastland can be justly appreciative of the fact that among its useful industries, that one is unusually outstanding, P. L. Parker, operator of the Parker Floral Co., has done many things in the manner of growing plants that take lots of time and nursing in this dry section of the country. For most any kind of plants and flowers there is much more work and expense involved to grow them here particularly those that are foreign to this climate. Chief among his present interesting flowers is his large assortment of beautiful chrysanthemums. Those pictured here were grown in a large canvas covered hothouse 17 by 22. Mr. Parker states that much time and labor must be devoted to them from time of planting until maturity. The plants are set out usually on the 15th of May. After a few weeks wire is stretched over them and strings are fastened in the earth near the root and on the wires. Each day they must be trained and every stray bud pinched from the individual plant. They are of several varieties and begin to show color in the remaining bloom about October 15th. Lots of water is required during cultivation. They continue to bloom until about the 15th of December.

The blooms are now of the full large variety in colors of pink, bronze, white yellow and mixed blends. Three beds were required to complete the ensemble which is now in the hothouse ready for sale. Naturally besides his attention to his chrysanthemums Mr. Parker with his pleasing wife has many other varieties of plants and flowers that are grown and cultivated at his nursery on the corner of Green and White streets. Mr. and Mrs. Parker are always glad to show visitors through the hothouses and general nurseries and explain in detail the different varieties of plants and flowers. Mr. Parker is a member of the national florists association and can wire flowers at any point in the nation as well as fill orders wired to him. Thanksgiving time is chrysanthemum time and the Parker Floral Company are now ready to fill your order for them. If one wants to really know what it is to live with God all there is to do is to see the things of nature that are beautiful at the Parker Floral Company.

Boys Uncover An Old Indian Grave

By United Press

BORGER, Tex.—Human bones, believed to be those of an Indian buried long ago, have been uncovered by boys on a hillside near the Canadian River, according to Constable Cal Baird.

The remains were probably washed from a grave by water or uncovered by erosion, the officer said. The condition of the bones indicated that the skeleton had been buried years before.

Perpetual Puzzles!

These puzzles we have married are disturbingly primitive. They sit across the table from us and smile riddles. They treat us like spoiled children, and yet like kings. They ferret out our secret checker games—and collect! They devastate our reasoned actions by a caprice... and we love it.

How do these wives of ours manage to keep so young, so attractive, so full of life? Well for the thing, they have learned that the advertisements on these pages are their willing servants. Here they had of an appliance that turns mornings of idleness into hours of leisure. There is a cosmetic blended to fit the skin like a glove. Or a new recipe to tempt your appetite.

Right now, your wife is busy with fall buying. And she lets the advertisements shoulder part of the task. They bring her good news about fall fashions and gloves, blankets, perhaps a fire green, new slippers for you, a sweater for your junior.... She reads the advertisements carefully and they save her time, trouble, worry—and money.

LAUREL MASH MAVS FOR 32 TO 7 VICTORY

Abilene High School Eagles came to Eastland and left with a 32 to 7 victory over the Mavericks Friday afternoon.

The Eagles scored once each in the first three quarters and twice in the final period. Eastland made their score in the third period.

Eastland's sparkling plays were intermittent. Yardage of small consequence was not to be gained by ground plays and aerial tries with a few exceptions were of no avail.

Despite reports of an injured leg, Moser, backfield ace of the Eagles, played the entire game.

Eastland threatened in the first quarter when Sikes carried the Abilene kickoff from approximately the Mavericks' 10 yard line to the Abilene 21-yard stripe.

The Eagles defense bottled up the Mavericks and Abilene, after an exchange of punts had the ball on their 35-yard-line. Couch made a series of first downs and went to the Eastland 22. Nearing the goal and in a position to score, Moser, took the ball, and with Harris on the next play, went to the Eastland 15-yard line. Harris went through center for the Abilene's first score and Herman made the extra tally.

The visitors scored again in the final portion of the second as Moser carried the ball over after gains of Couch and Harris. Herman failed to convert.

In the early part of the third quarter, Couch carried the ball from Eastland's 20-yard line. A sneak run from the 15-yard line through right tackle by Couch brought the visitors third touchdown. Herman failed to convert.

One of the Mavericks' many passes paid off in the third quarter after Abilene's third touchdown when El Taylor heaved a long one from his own 45-yard line to T. Taylor on the Abilene 20 and made the locals only touchdown. T. Taylor converted after his tally.

The Mavericks held their own until in the latter part of the final quarter when the Eagles started a successful drive from their own 33 yard line.

Moser carried the ball to the 33-yard stripe and Couch went for the final Abilene touchdown. An attempt to complete a pass behind the goal post was unsuccessful. Couch tallied again on a spurt from outside the Eastland 30, and Moser carried the ball for extra point. Later Abilene intercepted a Maverick pass and Couch on two tries went to Eastland's 22-yard line when the game ended.

Abilene made 17 first downs to Eastland's seven.

YOU can advance Minnesota's claim to top ranking without getting much the worst of most any football argument, but then the fun begins.

Don't attempt to do what I'm doing here unless you have been shaken loose in a badly broken field.

Ofhand, I would say that at this stage of the proceedings, Princeton, North Carolina, California, and Southern Methodist belong next to Minnesota, in the order named.

Then I would suggest Notre Dame, Ohio State, and Pittsburgh as a second cluster.

An even dozen must be included in the third group, with Nebraska, Iowa, Rice, Dartmouth, Holy Cross, Marquette, Alabama, Texas Christian, Louisiana State, Stanford, Syracuse, and Georgia taking their places as listed.

Minnesota, playing terrific schedules, hasn't been beaten in three campaigns. Bernie Bierman lost Siedel and Alphonse this fall, but bobbed right back with Turfy Thompson. Here is one of the finest coaches in the business with unlimited material.

Princeton might improve its position by getting out of its own circle, but there is no getting away from the fact that Fritz Crisler has a well-drilled army of splendid athletes.

Mustangs Fortify Position in Victory Over U. C. L. A.
NORTH CAROLINA is another untested outside of its own territory, but their performances against Tennessee, Maryland, Georgia Tech, and North Carolina State qualify the Tar Heels for the Rose Bowl or any other assignment.

California has solved one perplexing problem after another under its new head coach, Stubby Allison.

Southern Methodist's latest achievement was swamping U. C. L. A., 21-0, on the Pacific coast, with Bobby Wilson, fleetest of the Mustangs, again living up to all the fine things NEA Service said about him in placing him on its 1934 All-America team.

Notre Dame of Ohio State wouldn't exactly be on the short end against any of the leaders, and any club would have had an armful in the Pittsburgh array that swamped Army in the final period.

The fact that it was nosed out by mighty Minnesota and held to a scoreless tie by Kansas State doesn't mean that Nebraska isn't one of the most powerful of all the creations. The Cornhuskers have exceptional backs in LaNoue, Cardwell, and Francis, and they operate behind a large and hard-charging forward wall.

Dartmouth Gets Big Chance Against Princeton, Nov. 23
IN tackling Princeton on Nov. 23, Dartmouth will have a chance to prove that it is placed too far down on this roll. There were no fines on the outfit, that whipped Harvard and trimmed Yale for the first time in history.

Unbeaten Holy Cross and Marquette are others which perhaps deserve higher rankings. Each has the most formidable array in its history, with superb running and passing games.

Ranking the teams means little, but it creates fresh disputes, on which football men live from September to December. With morale and the set-up playing such an important part, any fair team might whip any great one on any given afternoon. As Bob Zupke says, "You never can tell how a football will bounce."

On Tuesday, Nov. 5 the Twenty One Study club met at the clubhouse for the annual Bible day program. As guests for the day the members of the Gorman Excelsior club were present and also Mrs. C. O. Bragg of Desdemona.

The house had been beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and vines with red berries and bowls of cut flowers. Hostesses for the day were Meses, Clarence Ragland, David Parks, Charles Lee and Preston Sparks. The leader of the program was Mrs. W. H. Davis.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Mattie Henry who welcomed the guests in a short and well worded message after which the leader took charge. Roll call responses were Bible verses about trees and flowers. All present joined in singing Beautiful Garden of Prayer, and Mrs. Davis read the 21st chapter of 1 Kings in which the account of Naboth's vineyard or garden of grapes is told. Then followed the main program, an address on "Garden of the Bible" written by Mrs. R. E. Willis, a past president of Arkansas Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Willis now makes her home with her daughter at Fayetteville, Ark., but formerly lived at Asheville, N. C., where her husband, a noted Presbyterian minister, was ill for many months before his death and during that time Mrs. Willis wrote the address and delivered it before Garden clubs in Asheville and nearby towns as a means of helping out their income. Mrs. C. W. Maltby, Desdemona's most gifted reader, gave the address, a 45 minute one, entirely from memory and with splendid expression, which held her audience tense with interest.

In the address the writer of it considered first the Garden of Eden and the picture of it as given in John Milton's wonderful epic, "Paradise Lost." Coming down the ages the writer describes The Garden of Grapes and draws a parallel between Jezebel and Shakespeare's Lady MacBeth. The Hanging Gardens of Babylon, the Garden of Love as described in Solomon's Songs, The Garden of the Prophets, the Garden of Gethsemane and as a climax the Garden of Resurrection were each described in beautiful language and with classical literature woven in such a way as to make the address a masterpiece of literature. At the close of the address Mrs. W. E. Barron and Mrs. Preston Sparks sang, very sweetly, "In the Garden." Miss Edith Creighton was accompanist. At the close of the program the hostesses served delicious refreshments in two courses, the first being turkey salad on lettuce, olive, brown bread, stuffed celery, with second course of pecan pie with whipped cream and coffee. Favors were small turkeys and paper napkins were Thanksgiving design. Those present from Gorman were Meses, O. D.

Sympathy of the community is being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Thad Spicer on account of the death of their one-month-old baby on Monday of last week.

Rev. E. E. Dailey and wife and two daughters of Weatherford arrived Thursday and he entered upon his duties as pastor of the Methodist church. On Sunday next Rev. H. N. Balderce, pastor of the Baptist church, dismissed his services and he and his congregation went over to the Methodist church to welcome the new pastor to town. Those who heard were much pleased with him and predict for him a successful year.

After the death of her parents Dana was invited to come to live with her mother's family. She is received cordially by her great aunt, Mrs. Edith A. HEWLE, but meets a cold welcome from her grandmother, her half-sister, Nancy. Nancy's bitterness and the gloom atmosphere of the old place have sobering effect. Dana thinks happily, "I shouldn't have come NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER III

The sun came flooding in through a deep window. Close by, a boy was singing gaily. Dana, lying in the great crumpled bed, lifted her young arms high in sheer elation. A smile curved her mouth.

In a sudden rush of feeling Dana thought—"It was ridiculous getting emotional last night. They'll be here soon, and I'll like them, at least, I'll try awfully hard."

Water was running in the present in the adjoining bathroom, and Dana was singing blissfully.

Across the hall an unhappy woman listened to Dana's song. After a while she crossed the room and closed the transom. But she could still hear the words: "We're living a little, dance a little, love a little..."

The singer stopped abruptly as Mrs. Cameron sighed in relief. The girl was evidently a romantic creature. Like, like—she wouldn't complete the thought. But feeling ideas that had been lying dormant through the years were crystallizing under a new impetus. Perhaps it was true that you had to direct romance. Perhaps it had been part of her fate that Dana's mother had wrecked her life and brought disgrace to a proud family name.

This girl seemed pliable enough. Much more so than Nancy. There was a stubborn one for you! Apparently in European schools they taught respect for one's elders. If they taught nothing else they had taught her to respect her grandaunt. Kroger G & B.

It was going to be quite satisfactory to see Susan Weatherford's face when Dana was introduced to her and her two ugly daughters.

Old Mrs. Cameron almost choked. She must have a talk with Ellen. Somehow, somehow, they might be able to manage a party to properly introduce Dana to society.

FROM her own room on the south side of the house, Nancy had a different view of the garden its unkemptness had never troubled her, for it had been like that so long that she had almost forgotten it had ever been trimly landscaped with deersfoot flower beds breaking the velvet stretches, a fountain tinkling musically in the center and great trees arching overhead.

There were voices under Nancy's window. Her grandmother's voice and that of young Jake. Sarah's grander, who did odd jobs about the place and built the fire in winter for his "board and keep."

"Clear the weeds first and then cut the grass," Mrs. Cameron was directing. "And then I'll show you about pruning the shrubbery. If you need any help you might see Alex to come in for two days. He's doing some work outside now, and the Merrins are away for the summer."

NANCY picked up her book and tried to concentrate, but it was so much, Nancy. I'm sure been anybody's fault but of living has changed—stances.

"Where's the gold?" Nancy asked pointedly. "Face was cupped in one dark eye, raised feebly grandmother."

"Stuff and nonsense!" Cameron. "Nancy must have had parties. The party's in my day, nothing so well as parties. But Nancy would tennis and golf and read. It's all of her own doing."

"Shame on you, Nancy! We're inviting her course!"

"Ronnie is a very cultured young man." That in Mrs. Cameron's eyes. "And eligible," moaned softly. "Oh, so very eligible. She made straight for Ronnie. Generally a long, swift swoop to quiet the turbulent sea was plunged into who suspected she was being. She wondered now, why she had taken that boy in town, Ronnie was a bad sort. There was when he had snatched after the 'tonic' tonic summer, saying, "K. Nan." He had smiled and she had come along, liking him for a moment.

"Why did you want me?" she queried, taking her seat on a low ottoman.

"It's about Dana," began Aunt Ellen. "Your grandaunt has decided it is important for Dana to meet the right people."

"And you want me to steer her away from the bad wolves to the nice rich lambs," Nancy said shrewdly.

"Naturally, Nancy, we expect you to see that Dana doesn't meet any undesirables," Mrs. Cameron's voice was all iron again. "We thought it would be nice for both you girls if we gave a party."

"Ye gods! A party in this house!" Nancy breathed.

"There have been some very wonderful affairs in this house, Nancy," chided Aunt Ellen gently.

"Not in my mind."

There was an infection in Nancy's voice that caused Mrs. Cameron to bend a suspicious gaze upon her.

Aunt Ellen said, her voice shaking as it always did when the usual calm atmosphere was ruffled. "I'm sure it hasn't been your grandaunt's fault. Times have changed."

EDITORIAL America and Its Citizens All straight-forward thinking Americans have surely for one come to the conclusion that America has changed. Some would brand this change as an abstract change in its physical structure. Some as due to a financial crisis. Others as political changes, etc. We at least know that it has changed and is continually changing, principally in its citizenry. Let us take an introspective view and glance in the mirror for once and we believe we can discover the trouble. No nation can be greater than its citizens, who compose it. Too, "a great nation is made only by worthy citizens." We have notions that a radicalism of 22,000 strong has been developed in youthful minds of our nation. This radicalism is branded as destructive and what to do with this radical element is the problem at hand. Let us not forget that radicals have played their part in world politics through all the ages as a check and a balance on major political groups. Surely if we are to develop right attitudes in our youthful citizenry we must as an older group lead the way in example and deeds, and instead of cursing the machinery of our government teach them loyalty and who compose the government. True, there are a great number of things that the writer does not like concerning the workings and practices of our government, but it pays him as well as all others to think, speak, and act in a silent manner before youthful minds, who are imitators who greatly magnify our examples. Teach them the example of Washington, who said, "The love of my country will be the ruling influence of my conduct," and of Hale, who said, "I regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." Last but not least, the words of Alphonse de Lamartine, "That, in order that a government may be durable, it must contain a principle, that is divine, that is best adapted to the welfare of the many." We know that if the proper atmosphere is provided in homes, schools and elsewhere that our future generations will come forth marching with a banner of love, duty, and divine principles. The one of which our present generations have partly left behind. The Puritans We should speak first of the Puritans as the most body of men which world has ever known. He is a stern fighter strength and force and who had grave faults, were the faults of a weak nature, and were those of a robust nature. They had their smiles but not for the things of the world. Enthusiasm had led them to pursue a course of corruption. It might lead them to pursue a course of mingling with human beings having neither party. Of course man infirmities—insane country tigue, to pleasure, and any of it and He had broadened his nothing else that he drove Roger and persecuted the best of it. He had founded mans, but he founded and God-fearing cosmopolitanism. He had hanged Quakers, warning that the panic put old women by city taxes witches, but he planned to be paid by De in the wilderness and publicity of pen house in every village. It takes more than a narrow view of those in each test of citizenship; but a good job and the town meeting, who make it snare men helped to govern that can be all men were equal before the go in Eastland.
