

MCCRAW TELLS PROBERS HE IS TO ANNOUNCE

By United Press AUSTIN, Mar. 2.—Attorney General William McCraw announced before a state senate investigating committee today he expects to be a candidate for governor this summer.

"I'm willing to stand on my record," said McCraw. "I'll tell the press I expect to be a candidate for governor. You can depend upon the people of Texas to be about right."

McCraw, accompanied by his wife, tendered to the committee their bank accounts, which had been subpoenaed. Then he answered series of questions asked by Sen. Tom Holbrook of Galveston, committee chairman.

Holbrook earlier had defended the subpoenas issued for the McCraw's bank accounts, although he said he did not personally issue them.

The information, he said, was necessary to corroborate testimony given by Tom Clark, Assistant U. S. Attorney General, who formerly was McCraw's law partner.

Sen. Rudolph Weinert of Sequim, moved to discontinue the hearing after today until political campaigns are over.

"It doesn't make any difference what we discuss until after the primaries," Weinert said. "People will say it is political."

Ontario Maps Plans For Highway Safety

By United Press ST. JOHN, N. B.—Ontario hopes to cut highway accidents approximately 60 per cent by a $4,000,000 reconstruction program, according to R. M. Smith, Ontario deputy minister of highways.

All provincial highways will be transformed into two-lane boulevards, separated by turf 10 to 30 feet wide. Shrubbery set in the turf would reduce the glare from auto headlights.

CHILD OUTDOES FIREMEN

ANACONDA, Mont.—The Biblical statement that "a little child shall lead them" was outdoors here by a 5-year-old boy. When efforts of the police and fire departments to rescue a kitten perched on a 20-foot high-tension electric wire pole had failed, the child merely said, "Kitty, kitty, kitty," and the kitten came down.

Proving That a Streamliner Can 'Take It'

Gliding along at 75 to 80 miles an hour the new streamlined trains get you there in a hurry. But can they "take it"? Judging from the two pictures above, the answer is "Yes." The top photo shows a streamliner, derailed but still upright, after smashing and splintering a heavy truck loaded with logs, lower photo. The 85 passengers stepped from the train uninjured, said all they felt was a "jolt." After hitting the truck the streamliner, traveling between Houston, Tex., and Dallas, ripped up the track for more than 600 feet. Two Negroes riding on the truck jumped before the crash.

Brown Twins Will Run In Olympics At Laredo Mar. 4

DENTON, Texas, March 2.—When Coach Choc Sportsman's championship North Texas Eagle track squad defends its title at the Border Olympics in Laredo March 4 it will probably include six members from last spring's team.

Meet veterans who will return to Laredo in early March are Delmer Brown, Elmer Brown, Co-Captain Alvin Chrisman, Royal Kinder, Co-Captain Henry Morgan, and Marion Phillips. Morgan is the defending meet record holder in the mile run, having set a new record in the event last year with a time of 4:29.1 to make it five consecutive years that a North Texas ace has won that particular event.

The Brown twins and Chrisman are members of the record breaking Eagle mile relay quartet that last year established a new time of 3:24. This same trio also were members of the Eagle's victorious $80 relay foursome. Delmer Brown last year capped the Laredo 100 yard dash in 10 seconds flat while Elmer finished several strides back of his brother.

REVENUE BILL AS A BUSINESS AID SUBMITTED

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—The democratic majority of the house ways and means committee submitted a 70-page report of the 1938 revenue bill to the house today and recommended passage to bring "very substantial stimulation to business."

The report explained proposed changes, rather than answering republican charges that the measure retains levies that caused the recession. Republican committee-men filed a minority report.

While the house started work on this major proposal and the senate debated the administration's reorganization bill, President Roosevelt signed the $250,000,000 Works Progress deficiency appropriation bill.

Debate on the reorganization bill brought a proposal to abolish the post of comptroller general and substitute a single administrator for the civil service commission.

George Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, told the senate unemployment committee that the government policies are paralyzing public enterprises.

The public land committee reported favorably to the senate the nomination of Ebert Burlew as first assistant secretary of interior.

Investigators read to the senate civil liberties committee a statement that "it would appear that 207 companies, five per cent of the membership were in a position to formulate policies of the National Manufacturers Association." ## The Americas Ask: After Europe, What Next?

For many years South and Central American people have proclaimed resentfully against anything that looked even faintly like protection on the part of the United States. Today they are still proclaiming publicly, but not as resentfully, and reports from certain South American Foreign Offices indicate that privately the resentment has just about disappeared.

For South and Central America, along with the rest of the world, are watching the European situation and speculating on the future. Our southern brothers have seen members of the League of Nations and signatories of the Briand-Kellogg anti-war pact invading the territories of other league members and pact signatories, and they are considerably disillusioned about the values of treaties and pacts.

They have looked around at their own continent, rich in raw materials but relatively poor in military strength, and some of the pictures they can conjure up aren't too pleasant.

So these South and Central American leaders have begun to look toward the United States for protection, and to consider that perhaps Uncle Sam's navy is the strongest barrier between them and political invasion.

And, according to correspondents South American governments have been exchanging views on a project for an inter-American military and naval alliance. Through this, all South and Central American armies and navies would co-operate with the United States in repelling an attempted invasion of any American country.

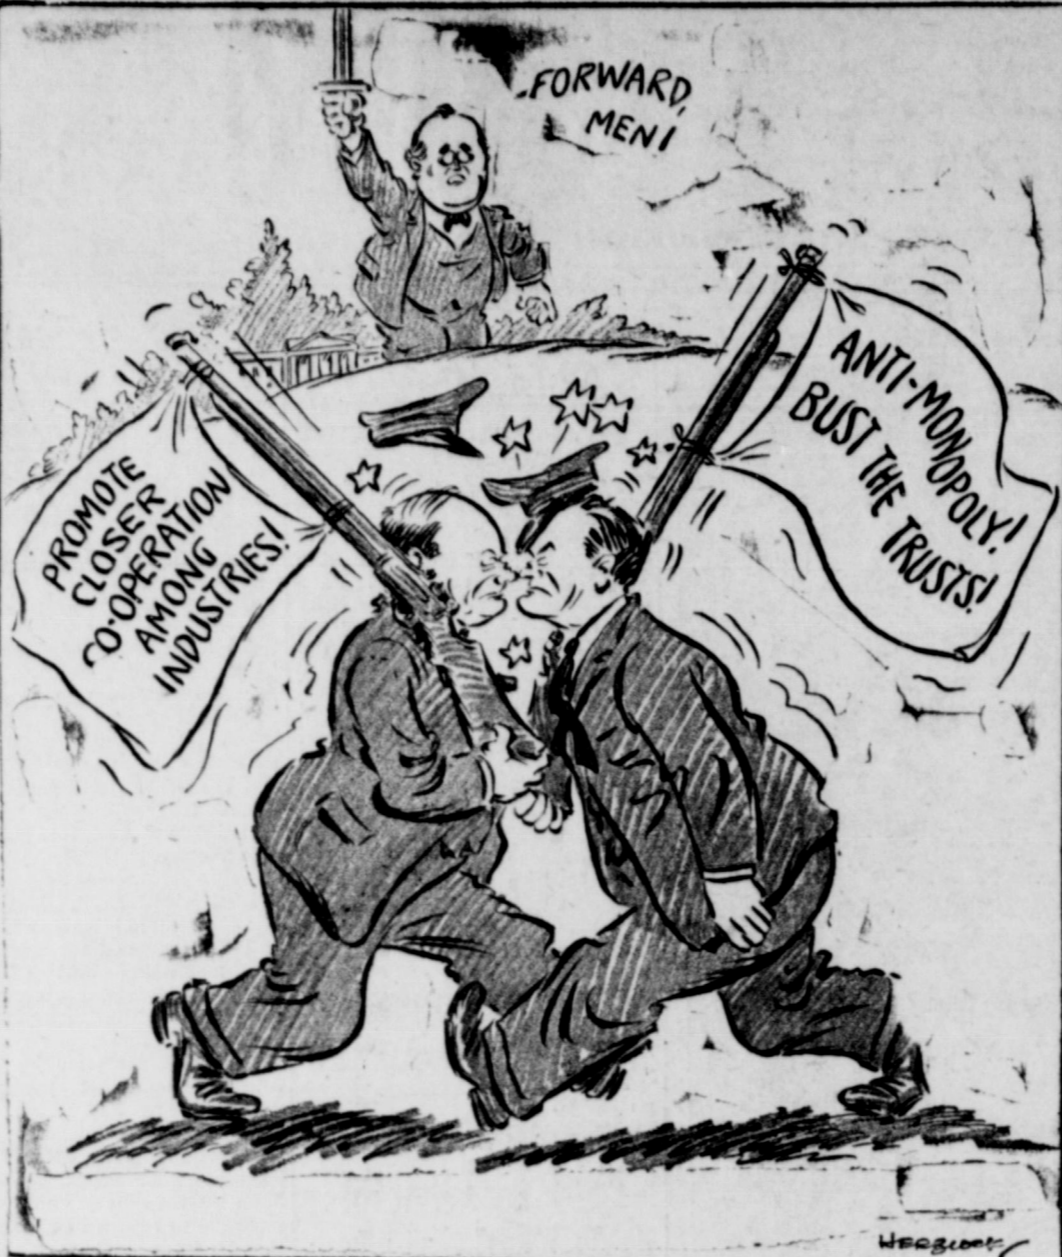

On paper this plan sounds fine. There isn't much doubt that a combination of all-American military and naval forces could repel any invasion—if it came as an armed attempt to conquer a country or a continent.

The trouble is that a foreign invasion probably won't come that way. The newer method is to bore from within and to annex a government by propaganda and conversion, infiltration, trade concessions and influence.

The military alliance idea is great, but it is just as much to the point to watch present methods being employed in Central Europe and to find a way to fight fire with fire, if we really want to keep the Americas free of foreign dominance.

Their dignity hurt, prisoners riot at being transferred from one institution to another. A matter of honor among thieves?

Rambling With The Rambler

BY WAYNE WALLACE

Many people seem to be under the impression that monopoly is something that exists only where there is a democratic form of government. In Webster dictionary the word is defined "exclusive possession or control" which definition would lead one to believe that this country by no means has a monopoly on the word "monopoly." Certainly dictators attempt to gain complete control over their respective countries. In fact, most all rulers enjoy this privilege, frequently sharing it with their favorites. The big difference that exist between monopoly in this country and foreign ones is that in America, such an opportunity is open to the entire citizenry; while in alien lands, unless taken by force, monopoly of lands, money, business and possessions is usually handed down from father to son. Foreign people, as a rule, or more conservative than Americans and do not speculate as much as our people do, especially when the risk of losing is equal too or greater than the chance of winning. This is due in part to the fact that such countries are older than ours and therefore more settled. Also because there is more money in this country.

clusive control because it would more than likely lift us to the ranks of the big shots, as the men with money are frequently called. Daily we strive to increase our wealth in order to gain power and improve our condition. Frequently people endeavor to advance themselves by taking unfair advantage of their fellow men. Few of us ever become satisfied with what we have, no matter how rich we may become. In our hearts we know this is true so that when we complain too much about the men who have succeeded in becoming rich, we should remember that we would not object at being in their place if only the breaks would come our way. It might be that they are acting better than we would. Not that such a reason should excuse them if they are hoarding money that is of no benefit to themselves.

Despite the fact that monopoly is a social evil, still, due to our free way of thinking, it is one that is hard to check. The men at the head of these monopolies have the money and money means power. To impose regulations that are too strict, according to their way of thinking, against them, as recently done by President Roosevelt in his high tax on undistributed profits, seems to be more harmful to the ordinary individual than the big shots. Many of them cut their business operations down or close them altogether. This throws many men out of work who must seek help from the government, adding to those already on relief. The results of this makes it necessary for Congress to appropriate more money, increasing National debt. To help offset this condition, taxes must be raised which further burdens the people who are striving to take care of themselves. Yet so far such taxes have not helped balance the budget for a single year since the present administration or even give promise of it in the near future.

The question is, just how much can we blame the big shots for their present attitude? They claim that the high tax on undistributed profits reduces their surplus money to such an extent that should some unforeseen trouble develop they would be in danger of losing their business. How many of us would take such a risk if it were not absolutely necessary?

The best way to cope with this situation, is would seem, would be for the government to cooperate with these men instead of antagonizing them. We can never expect to gain much from those we violently oppose. Even if we are in the right it is hard to influence people to our way of thinking if we endeavor to do it by force. Far greater success can be expected if we take a conciliatory attitude. None of us but would rather cooperate with someone who shows they appreciate what we are trying to do for them than those who abuse us. It is only human nature for us to do so.

Thus, if President Roosevelt would get on their good side and endeavor to show them the danger that lies ahead by keeping too much money out of circulation, it would seem that they would be more willing to help him than they are now, due to his present hostile attitude.

Hitler, since his recent attempt to interfere with Austria's affairs, must feel much like the man who ran a fox into a hole but when he reached in to get him was bit by a ground hog. Hitler thought he had ran Austria into a hole but it looks as though he only

For Love of Polly

By RACHEL MACK

CAST OF CHARACTERS
POLLY CHELSEY, heroine
JERRY WHITEFIELD, hero
CABELL, who was
CABELL BANKS, privateer

Yesterday morning, the Gray Gull is chased by British men-of-war, but escapes.

CHAPTER XXV
MORNING found them off the American coast opposite what was to be Delaware or Maryland. A shout went up from the sailors. Polly went openly for joy, and Jerry's commands to the sailors were husky with feeling.

On board there were several reliable sailors who had gone out from Baltimore on the Gray Gull more than once and had stayed hopefully with her while she lay locked at Carteret. These men proved of infinite value. They were able to help their New England officers round the treacherous Cape Charles and enter Chesapeake Bay.

The long blue Bay stretched away before them, free of hostile sails. As they passed the mouth of the York and later of the Rappahannock River, Cabell landed at the Virginia shore. On these rivers and on the James and Potomac, he knew, there lived the Virginia landed gentry who were said to feel themselves superior even to rich Boston bankers and merchants. Englishmen under Sir Walter Raleigh had landed on these shores before the Mayflower and sailed to Plymouth Rock. It was very annoying to a young politician to have to think of it. He was forced to call his new-found patriotism into play to dispel his malice. Virginia was one of the United States, he reminded himself, and no doubt was a very agreeable place if you could mind the heat and if you could excuse the curls for being better educated than the heads that they were. She could talk about other things than the latest dance figure.

Jerry and Cabell supposed the most direct way to reach Washington would be to sail up the Potomac. The Baltimore sailors, however, with seamen's old distrust of rivers, advised avoiding the curving Potomac and sailing west to Baltimore. From there, they suggested, Captain Banks could easily go to Washington by coach or horseback and procure the papers.

This they agreed to do, Jerry the more readily because of Polly. Baltimore had good coach service to Philadelphia, and from the latter city she would have no trouble reaching home. When they had entered Baltimore harbor Jerry went to Polly who stood at the bulwark watching the men drop anchor. "Go below and get ready now, Polly. A sailor's wife must be brisk." "Get ready for what, Jerry?" "To go ashore, my sweet, with your dog and trunk." "But, Jerry! You'd not put me ashore in Maryland when I belong in Connecticut?" Her face showed honest amazement. "Didn't you know, Polly, that I'd put you ashore at the first port? Did you suppose I'd keep you an hour longer at sea than I had?"

"Oh, Jerry! I'd not figured it out, but I supposed you'd take me home to Lyme after you got your papers. I might as well be honest and say I hoped you'd decide to keep me on board, Jerry. The way some of the skippers out of New England used to keep their wives aboard. I know an old woman at home who's been around the Horn on her husband's ship seven times."

"This is war time, Polly." He spoke with finality and with such regret that she could not make it harder for him. "All right, Jerry. But it's going to take Cabell a couple of days to go to Washington and back. Can I stay here till then?" "I'd thought to put you on a stage coach, Polly, and see you started on your way. I'd feel easier about you."

But he could not resist her pleading as that stole around his neck, nor the prospect of an extra day and night with her on a deserted ship in a friendly port. He said, "I reckon I've earned another sunset and sunrise with you, Polly. Stay if you will." "That night when the sailors went ashore and Cabell was in Washington, the Gray Gull was their own. They stood at its bulwarks and watched the lights of Baltimore. Polly made one more effort to snatch at happiness. "You've brought the Gull home, Jerry, and it wasn't easy. Cabell couldn't have done it without you. Every man aboard owes you his life or his liberty." "It may be true, Polly. But what of it?" "This. You've done your part. If Cabell's so set on going to sea again, let him find another mate for his clippings. You come home to New England."

"Polly, what're you saying?" He held her shirt tatters and looked down into her face. "I'm saying you don't belong to the navy by rights," she answered.

ferely. "Why must you go out there and let an English long gut tear you to pieces?"

"This is every American's fight as I look at it, Polly. It's our way of backing up those flat died in the Revolution. Our men walked shoeless in the snow and ice till their feet bled, that war. That's how much they wanted freedom. Well, that freedom's being questioned. This time on the sea." "Oh, I know," said Polly brokenly. "I must have been crazy for a minute, Jerry. . . . Remind me to mend your coat before I leave tomorrow. You've torn the sleeve."

BEFORE noon the following day Cabell returned from Washington, having traveled most of the night. He was jubilant. Mr. Madison had consented to see him in person and had readily given him all the papers necessary to turn the Gray Gull into a privateer to harass British craft.

"He says he's thankful to see so many New Englanders turning out to fight. He thinks our hope lies almost entirely in privateers. . . . Hello, Polly! Where are you going with your bonnet on?" "Home," said Polly, holding out her hand. "Jerry wants to get me started."

"Won't tomorrow do? I thought a little dinner in Baltimore to-night. . . . It's quite a place, I hear." "Jerry said, 'All our crew came aboard this morning, Cabell, and about 20 extras they were able to recruit. The rumor's out that the Chesapeake's going to be bottled. You'll want to go out with the tide tonight. I'm taking Polly ashore now.'"

Two hours later Polly was jolting out of Baltimore on the road to Philadelphia. She rode atop the coach. Nuisance shared her seat and her dejection. The driver, a genial soul, said, "You appear sad to part from your young man, Miss. Is he a sailor?" "Yes. A mate on a privateer. He's going to sea tonight. . . . I wonder what name this war will have?"

"Why, Miss, maybe they'll just call it the war of 1812. I figger we'll have the British licked before Christmas and maybe annex Canada." Polly snorted derisively. "Have you ever seen a British man-of-war coming down on you with all sails spread?" "Well, no, Miss. I'm an inland man, rightly. Horses is my line. . . . Then don't try to be a prophet!" snapped Polly vehemently and began to weep into her handkerchief. . . . Never to see Jerry again. Could she endure it?

Students Are Still Against Going to War As In 1917

By HARRY GRAYSON

Sports Editor, NEA Service

AUSTIN.—Last December the men students of the University of Texas were not in any mood to volunteer for an aggressive war as in 1917, according to the findings of the Bureau of Student Opinion, scientific sampling department of the Daily Texan. They have again this month, in a second campus-wide poll, expressed the same opinion. Their answer is that they want it understood they are not ready to fight outside of the United States—but if their country were in danger of invasion by a foreign enemy, less than 1 per cent of the men say they would refrain from fighting.

Almost to a man, they answered "no" to the question, "Would you refuse to fight if the United States were in danger of invasion?" In the carefully-selected cross-section that checked accurate within 4 per cent in comparison to actual campus election, the men answered to the aforementioned question—"yes," 0.6 per cent; "no," 98.4 per cent, and 1.0 per cent had not made up their minds.

The Bureau queried the men students on the same thing they did three months ago. "If the United States were to enter a war under the same conditions as in 1917, would you volunteer?" Only 31.9 per cent said "yes." In the first poll 31.8 per cent answered affirmatively—a difference of only one-tenth of one per cent in the two polls.

Buried Petrol Tanks Planned for London

By United Press

LONDON — Proposals for the construction of vast underground petrol reservoirs on the Thames bank at Purfleet, Essex, at an estimated cost of $25,000,000, are being considered by the British government and Thames-side authorities, it is revealed.

The object of this scheme is twofold—it would bring London's petrol supply nearer, and at the same time, insure adequate stocks in the event of war.

At present all oil tankers discharge their cargoes at Thames Haven, near Canvey Island. If the new scheme is finally approved, large oil tankers would be allowed to come 10 miles further up the river.

ORLANDO, Fla.—Cockfighting is not nearly as obsolete as most people suspect. The championship just concluded here drew entries from Canada, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Georgia, Texas, Alabama, Louisiana, and Florida. Old-timers called the main the greatest in history, and the array of chickens the biggest and best in the world. The international tournament drew the largest representation and attendance in history.

The birds of R. H. Hoff of Atlanta won 11 and lost four matches to account for the most coin. The Checker Game Club of Jacksonville and the Wortham Club of Dallas tied for second with 10 victories and five defeats, and cut up $10,000. The purse was close to $20,000.

It was Orlando's 19th annual tournament, and more money was wagered than ever before. The loyal and enthusiastic cockfighter will bet the limit on birds of his own breeding.

Cockfighting has been outlawed as a cruel and brutalizing sport in every state in the Union except Florida. When Joe Conrad, one of those who fathered the primitive sport in the grapefruit belt, was indicted by a grand jury as an operator of a pit, he set up as his defense that no Florida law prohibited fighting cocks, and won his case.

BUT regardless of the law, birds are still being bred and fought from Halifax to Hollywood, and it isn't always necessary for the boys to find a haymow or cellar, where they are fit of the cops. Cockfighting has been the sport of southern plantation gentlemen for generations, and one authority estimates that 100,000 fighting roosters are owned in New England alone. And game chickens are sprinkled around just as thick, or thicker, in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and in the middle west.

This despite the fact that the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the forces of the law have been trying to suppress the sport for a century or more. In Massachusetts, for example, it is unlawful even to own a game cock that has been "cut back," that is, one the plumage of which has been clipped to battle condition.

BUT law or no law, lovers of the sport are fighting roosters to a fare-the-well. It probably is safe to say that there's a main, or maybe a dozen, in this country every night in the week, with a really big affair, one that rates with a more important championship in the pugilistic dodge, about once a week.

A great many rich men have become interested in cockfighting in the last decade. By scientific methods, they are breeding speedier and harder cocks.

They are insisting upon better and cleaner locations for bouts. Most mains are pulled off in cities or towns, where they are assured of protection. These rich men fight a main for nothing save the sport of it or for $1000 or $10,000.

Making cockfighting illegal hasn't stopped it any more than prohibition cut off the entire supply of whisky.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Roosevelt's order that the Federal Trade Commission investigate monopolistic practices "and other unwholesome methods of competition" will bear fruit—but not very much—about March 1.

The effectiveness of the FTC report will depend largely on the amount of publicity and ballyhoo the White House decides it ought to have. It can easily be soft-pedaled, for it will be largely a rehash of information which already was available when F. D. R. instructed the commission last November.

There was no chance for new investigation or the obtaining of new evidence because no new money was made available for the inquiry. The job finally was piled on the commission's lawyers, who have had to confine themselves mostly to digging into the commission's own files.

WASHINGTON might be more impressed by the charges against Harry Bridges, C. I. O. leader on the Pacific Coast, if it were not for the peculiar tactics used by certain members of Senator Copeland's commerce committee to smear him. Bridges has been accused of being an alien Communist and faces a Department of Labor hearing. Ship owners, A. E. of L. leaders, Senator Copeland and other conservative senators want him deported.

Copeland and his group have been complimenting and encouraging discredited ex-labor leaders whose former followers deserted to the C. I. O. as they liberally attacked C. I. O. leaders of maritime labor.

Bridges has been a pet target for Copeland's contempt; but when Bridges asked to be allowed to appear before the committee to defend himself and members of his union, Copeland flatly refused him the privilege.

The committee carried its election hunt right into the Department of Labor files, despite protests that the information was incomplete.

Most remarkable of all was the course of two senators who were leaked to newspapers the story that Labor Department Solicitor Gerard D. Reilly had testified in executive session that Bridges was a deportable Communist.

What Reilly actually did say in his secret testimony was that the department had a prima facie case which indicated that Bridges was deportable, but that the C. I. O. leader probably could bring evidence to clear himself.

In other words, despite seemingly desperate efforts of the senators to prejudice the Bridges case, Reilly actually didn't think the department could make the deportation charges stick.

SENATORS become long-winded only through practice. Members of the House of Representatives, accustomed to speaking under the famous five-minute rule, are usually good only for short spurts. That's why the Hon. Lister Hill of Alabama, recently elected from the House to the Senate, peered out early as an anti-lynching bill filibuster. He lasted only 45 minutes.

"YES," it looks terrible, admitted John L. Lewis to a friend who helped him on with his overcoat and noticed that the lining was frayed. "But it's only because I never can find time to buy a new one." (Copyright, 1933, NEA Service, Inc.)

EVERY little steak dreams of an outdoor fireplace. Can you blame it, with its prospect of becoming rich, tender cabob, flanked by savory bacon and tasty tomatoes?

Beef Cabobs
Tender squares of steak, squares of bacon, tomato quarters, skewers.
Alternate the steak, bacon and tomato on steel skewers. Then broil in an outdoor fireplace. Season with salt and pepper. If you prefer, alternate the squares of steak with onion slices, and Worcester-shire for extra pep.

That woody note comes from "The Country Cookbook," the latest product of those cookbook writing Browns—Cora, Rose and Bob. They've caught the feel of spacious and simple fare and written such a book as a man as well as a woman can read of an evening and sigh for the good old times. Don't sigh; cook some of these recommendations of the Browns' in your own home, using the oven grill in place of the open fireplace.

Fish Cabobs
Slices of small fish seasoned and marinated in wine for half an hour, bay leaves, butter, skewers.
Marinate the seasoned fish. Wipe dry and thread on skewers with halves of bay leaves between. Brush with butter, and grill under clear hot flame.

Lamb Cabobs
Chunks of tender lamb, quarters of firm tomatoes, bits of onion, skewers.
String all on skewers, alternating. Season and broil. . . . If the people who live in the country really do eat the following—and the Country Cookbook says they do—then city slickers have a lot to learn about good food.

Tomorrows Menu
BREAKFAST: Strawberries and cream, brown sugar sausage cakes, nut muffins, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Popovers with creamed dried beef, vegetable salad, almond cup cakes, tea, milk.
DINNER: Black bean soup, beef cabobs, buttered cauliflower, country fried potatoes, cherry pie, coffee, coffee, milk.

Loyster en Brochette
Two-inch cubes cooked fresh or quick-frozen lobster, large pieces fresh mushrooms, salt, pepper, nutmeg, 2 tablespoons sherry, broiled bacon.
Alternate the cubes of lobster and the mushrooms on skewers. First the lobster must be laid in a bowl with the salt, pepper, nutmeg and sherry. Grill for from 8 to 10 minutes, turning frequently in order to cook the mushrooms evenly. Unskewer and serve with melted butter poured over the lobster and mushrooms. Crisp broiled bacon belongs in this woody picture also.

Texan for 95 Years Is Not a Citizen

DALLAS.—A resident of Texas for 95 years, a man who saw the Republic of Texas become part of the United States, will appear before Federal Judge W. H. Atwell March 15 seeking to become a citizen.

He is Frank Perales, 97, of Waxahachie, a native of Argentina who came to Texas with his parents in 1843.
Having lived in Texas under three of the six flags that have flown over this territory, Perales considered himself a citizen of the United States until recently.

Attorneys agreed that he was given full citizenship when Texas was admitted to the Union in 1846. However, when his citizenship was questioned, Perales decided on the legal procedure to remove all doubt.
Perales has lived in Texas under the flag of the Republic, the Stars and Stripes, the Stars and Bars of the Confederacy and again under the United States flag.

selected as president, Miss Irene Williams as vice-president; and Alice Mae Sue as secretary. Mar-zell Wright was elected at a previous meeting to serve as treasurer.
Miss Rama Barber, the program chairman, opened the program on Missions, followed by Fay Taylor discussion on the life of Dr. Young, an Indian missionary; Alice Mae Sue gave the life of Dr. Cooper with Mary Laura Herman closing the program discussing the life of Chief John Jumper, an Indian preacher.

The hostess served a dainty refreshment plate of pimento cheese sandwiches, macaroon, candy mints and hot chocolate with plate favors of Easter theme.
Present: Miss Melba Riek, Mary Laura Herman, Jessie Lou Trott, Bonnie Prestidge, Florence Barber, Alice Mae Sue, Katrina Lovelace, Alean Williams, Bess Taylor, Irene Williams, Fay Taylor, Mae Bishop, Mrs. Neal, Mrs. J. F. Williams, Mrs. Susie Naylor and sponsor, Mrs. M. E. Altom.

The members of the Young Women's Auxiliary of the Baptist church met with Katrina Lovelace as hostess Monday evening at 7:30.
Melba Riek, the president, presided at the business session at which time new officers were elected. Miss Fay Taylor was

China Changes Up Her War Strategy; Army Is Massed

SHANGHAI—Removal of all restrictions on mass movements and the arming of the Chinese masses throughout the country marked a definite turning point in China's war strategy, political and military observers agree.

Millions of weapons were being distributed to the populace, in the country and in the cities, and whole towns were receiving military training, with emphasis on guerilla tactics instead of positional warfare. Chinese women were being given military and nursing training, and young boys and girls were being taught first aid and other war relief work.

Gov. Wu Teh-cheng of Kwangtung Province announced that 800,000 rifles and huge quantities of ammunition were being distributed among the people of Kwangtung. Every village was being mobilized on a wartime basis, he said.

The decision to place arms and ammunition in the hands of the masses was opposed by certain Kuomintang elements, who believed in keeping the armed strength in the army, where it could be controlled more readily. Arming of the masses, they argued, might lead to riot and insurrection now or later.

The Communists made mass organization a cardinal point in their plan for resistance and this view also was supported by the majority of China's ablest generals, such as Feng Yuh-shiang, Pai Chung-hsi and Li Tsung-jen, who argued that the resistance conducted by the army must be expanded to resistance by the whole of the Chinese people if China hoped to survive the present crisis.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek threw the weight of his opinion with the latter and the result was creation of a Mass Organization Department to supervise the mobilization of an arming of the people.

The Chinese learned a bitter and costly lesson in Tientsin, Pei-

ping, Nantao and Nanking, where the Japanese found and seized hundreds of thousands of weapons stored in munition dumps, arsenals and dugouts which were abandoned when the Chinese retreated.

Those weapons later were used against the Chinese armies whereas, had they been distributed to the populace, they would still be used to harass the Japanese, it was argued. During the hostilities around Shanghai, thousands of Chinese who volunteered for the army or for duty with guerilla groups were not enlisted, due to reluctance to distribute these weapons from military store-houses.

They will not happen again, according to the new plan of strategy. Farmers, workers and all who volunteer or are drafted for duty, henceforth will be issued rifles, small arms, hand grenades or other weapons, and the resistance will enter a new phase, it is hoped.

Further proof that the Chinese and Japanese are having a war affair. The League of Nations has sent its regrets.

FLYING BLIND

In thick weather, it is often necessary for airplanes to "fly blind" . . . to depend on instruments rather than vision and charted landmarks. Almost uncanny in their accuracy, such instruments are nevertheless second choice in the navigation of the air.

Shoppers who trot off down-town to the stores without first consulting the advertisements of those same stores are likewise flying blind. And needlessly so. The advertisements in this paper are put here for your guidance, for your safe landing in the Ports of Value.

Study them in comfort of your home . . . map your course before you put on your hat and drop the latch-key into your handbag. Compare the products offered, their prices, their general advantages. Then set out on your shopping-trip prepared for what you will see, what you will wish to have sent home.

Let the advertisements serve as guiding beacons of buying. It's the smart thing to do.

STOP LOOK AND LOOSEN

Sandy McHoots knows a bargain when he sees it. He's Scotch through and through—and "doesna like to spend a muckle." Yet he lives in elegance and comfort. How can this be?

The truth is, Sandy reads the advertisements. Where he has to buy, he buys wisely!

Scotch or not, make a point of looking up advertisements in this newspaper. Things you need are spread before you (perhaps reduced!) . . . luxuries you've always wanted are here at prices within your reach. You'll get the values you're after if you'll stop and look before you loosen!
