Germ-Killing Lamps— New Health Boon?

Experiments with the new germ-killing ultra-violet ray lamp continue successful and it seems entirely possible that humanity is calmly entering upon the era of healthful living science has dreamed of for so many years. The problem that faced the inventors—Dr. Harvey C. Rentschler and Dr. Robert F. James—was to produce an ultra-violet light that would not harm the eyes. Many tests indicate that after 10 years' work they have succeeded.

The lamps have been used successfully in hospitals, banks, drug stores, restaurants, bakeries and manufacturing plant—and also in dairies, hog pens, and hen houses. One of the lamps cut the death rate for chest operations in one hospital, for example, from 5.5 per cent to 2.9.

The ultra-violet light kills bacteria in less than a second. It attacks germs in the surrounding air and on the surface of exposed objects. Shining on shelves of clean glasses in a restaurant in one test, it reduced the number of germs on the rims from thousands to five or six.

The lamp itself usually takes the form of a long, horizontal tube of mercury vapor. A curtain of bluish light comes from this tube.

The tremendous potentialities of the invention should be apparent. If it becomes practical for everyday use it will affect the lives of every man, woman and child in the communities where the lamps are installed.

The greatest boon, of course, will be what the invention should do to such highly communicable diseases as the common cold. By use of the lamps in public eating establishments, street cars, meeting halls, and other places where a large number of people are thrown together, the spread of such diseases should be immeasurably reduced.

Another aspect is the economic angle. The lamps can be manufactured at comparatively low cost. If they turn out to be as efficient and practical as the early experiments indicate they will, a new industry will come into being, for every person who can possibly afford one of the lamps will want to own one.

Thus by giving the world an ultra-violet ray that apparently is as harmless to the eyes as it is harmful to germs, two scientists seem about to write an epochal chapter in the long story of the fight for improvement of the general public health—in addition to giving economic recovery something of a shot in the industrial arm.

And blase America makes ready to accept this thing that may mean better health for every citizen with the same nonchalance that she accepts all good things made for her by the sweat of those individuals who work for the benefit of humanity.

The movement for reunion between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. is making rapid strides. The delegates were able to stay in one room together for several hours without coming to blows.

Rambling With The Rambler

BY WAYNE WALLACE

Spring in the air and topics of war so evident everywhere are just two aspects of life that do not seem to go together. When nature is just beginning to give life in its fullest to her growing things, how it is that man can contemplate destruction of his fellow beings is hard to understand. Spring should be the season of giving rather than that of taking; giving life to others that they too may enjoy the beauty and goodness of God as manifested in the work of his hands. War exemplifies just the opposite. It represents wanton cruelty, suffering and death. Having nothing in common it would seem that spring would induce men to forget about war and think only of life at its best.

The lamb, symbol of peace, we are now told is also a symbol of war. When a bumper crop floods the markets it is a sure sign that a long, costly and destructive war is to follow according to Fulton County, Indiana "old timers." They predict war in the near future since the current lamb crop is the largest in the history of this country.

How it is that people who are supposed to be good Americans can look upon European countries and European ideas as superior to ours is something of a mystery. If they would but give the matter some thought it is very doubtful that they would continue to adhere to their present attitude. The United States is the wealthiest and mightiest nation in the world today. No other country possesses such a wealth of natural resources. No other country offers to its citizens the freedom of speech, of religious adherence or the manifold opportunities that is the birthright of every American. Even our traditions are rich in the down-to-earth qualities that gave our forefathers the strength and courage to transform a wilderness into a civilized country. Certainly it cannot be that they are ashamed of such a heritage as this.

That Europeans as a class look down upon us is true. But the fault lies more with our dissatisfied Americans that with any other groups of citizens. Just as long as they are ashamed of their country, just as long as they fawn upon foreign nobility and chase after such, just so long will they be a detriment to their own cause. People are not going to accept us for more than the value we place upon ourselves. If we demonstrate by our actions that we think others are better than we are, then we should not complain if they take us at face value.

While it is true that people who over-rate themselves are just as obnoxious as the ones who under-rate themselves, nevertheless they stand a better chance of making something out of their lives. Without doubt though the best course to follow is that of sincerity. Any time we try to work a bluff, sooner or later it is apt to trip us up. Nor is it necessary to bluff other countries into believing that this country is just as good as theirs in as much as we have sufficient proof that it is. This country has youth and ambition to offset age and experience in our foreign neighbors. As Americans we should be proud of our nationality and should make America proud of us by showing our appreciation.

Carl Ross, secretary of the Young Communist league, and his followers drew a much needed rebuke from Senator John Lee of Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee considering the proposed National Youth act, that is of providing $500,000,000 for educational activities among youths from 16 to 25. The rebuke, occasioned when young Ross was asked in case this country should go to war against Red Russia whether he would fight under the flag of the United States against her, was well deserved. At first the young man tried to evade the question by saying it was "preposterous" but when pressed for an answer replied that the question simply could not be answered. Although he had taken a pledge of allegiance to the United States he said he would not fight "for Tory capitalists." Said Senator Lee—

"You come here asking permission to testify, you get your bread and butter in this country, and, while masking under patriotic names, you go about trying to overthrow this government." Turning to the young people in the committee room he continued: "You who get your ideas from this group see your answer here, those of you who are sincere Americans should purge your ranks of these Communists who mask their attivities behind such a program as yours." All of which shows how inconsistent Communism is in its attitude. It would have money allotted to it by a government with which to help destroy that self same government. Some nerve I would say.

Another example of life as lived in Russia at the present time is given by Fred E. Beal, recently apprehended in North Carolina. In 1929 he was arrested with 6 others for the murder of the chief of police in the strike in Gastonia but jumped bail, encouraged by fellow Communist, and fled to Russia. There he worked a guide in a tractor plant at Ukraine until he could stand it no longer. He wrote: "I was crushed by a dogma more soulless than the walls of any penitentiary." Thus he returned to America to serve out a 20 year sentence imposed on him at the time the crime was committed rather than stay in Russia.

He writes that in Russia if one is fired, such a one will starve to death since the government will give no aid. In a house where he found a man, woman and child dead he saw this note on the door, "God bless those who enter here. May they never suffer as we have."

Odds and ends: The world of today is like a game of chess, the big difference being that as many as want to can sit in the game. America's present slogan should be: "Millions for defense but not a cent for aggression" . . . Measles breaks a ten-year record; 41,000 cases being reported in the nation in one week of March . . . Wonder if those who live by a reign of terror do not also live in terror of death by assassination . . . Girls who never blush never get any blood in their faces, their skin fades and they become ugly as Miss

ECONOMY is a FORD word

IF THERE is one word in the dictionary which the Ford Motor Company might rightfully reserve to its own use, that word is ECONOMY.

Thirty years ago, when the automobile was commonly called "a rich man's toy," Henry Ford set out alone to put the world on wheels.

THE FIRST FORD POLICY

It was then he said: "I will build a motor car for the multitude. It will be constructed of the best materials, by the best men to be hired, after the simplest designs that modern engineering can devise. But it will be so low in price that any man making ordinarily good wages can own one." That fundamental Ford policy has never changed.

In the early years, when it was necessary to build small 4-cylinder cars in order to assure economy, Henry Ford built and sold small 4-cylinder cars—in large quantities.

But when the fast-growing facilities of the Ford Motor Company reached a point where it was possible to build larger, finer V-type 8-cylinder cars and keep small-car economy—Henry Ford did that—again alone. It is one reason why more 1937 Ford V-8 cars were bought than any other make.

TWO NEW FORD CARS

For 1938, two Ford cars are offered you. One is the De Luxe Ford with the 85-horsepower V-8 engine—still an economical car to own and operate.

It has richer appointments, advantages born of 30 years' engineering automobiles. Closed longer bodies, with more power.

The other is the Standard Ford with a choice of 85-horsepower or 60-horsepower V-8 engine. It is built on the same wheelbase chassis, to the standard of mechanical excellence. But it is lower priced, and "60" engine, it provides operating cost in all Ford cars.

You are invited to see the De Luxe and Standard Ford now on display at your dealership—to prove that ECONOMY is a Ford word.

Over Children Killed Upon Texas Highways

TIN.—There are fewer killed on Texas highways principally because the themselves are being to protect themselves from hazards, according to W. Cox, state health officer who cites the work of the State Department of Public Safety school children as being the chief factors in the of life.

Every effort of the Highway Department to highways as safe as it is to make them, the permanent remains. The Texas Department of Public Safety, the safety division, is to make the personal selector for safety, he said. The State May Day has been the completion by the safety division activities directed toward protection for children. The effectiveness of training before pass-examination after they. Study of a Man About to Relax

How it feels to be a President leaving his office on vacation is Mr. Roosevelt entrained for a 10-day stay at Warm Springs. The presidential expression makes it hard to believe that he was worried about the internal TVA row or depressed by European political conditions, a report on which he received from Ambassador-at-Large Norman Davis just before he entrained.

Ignorance of the following laws lead to the loss of life and serious lack of responsible driving on Texas highways:

1. The negligent driver in any accident is responsible for all damages.

2. Failure to stop and render aid to an individual struck by his car makes the driver guilty of a felony.

3. Driving under the influence of liquor is a violation of the law.

In the interest of the children of Texas, the May Day committee is glad to endorse these activities directed toward safety. Make the man behind the wheel the child's friend.

More than 150 Texas cities have adopted student patrols to protect the school child going and coming from his home. It is said that not a single child has been hurt at intersections where the patrol is directing traffic, and in schools where safety courses have been given, great improvement has been noted. Highway patrolmen and other personnel of the State Department of Safety are working constantly with school children to make them safety conscious. It is showing definitely encouraging results.

The department is planning to expand the patrol system to the rural buses where certain students will be named to assist the drivers in safety work, keeping the passengers from sticking their arms and heads from windows, keeping the aisles free of obstacles over which the children might trip, and assisting the pupils to leave the bus in a safe manner.

Texas is among the leading states in safety work among the school children and highway pedestrians, and while much progress has been made toward elimination of accidental death and injury, much work still remains to be done, and it remains for the entire citizenship to aid in doing it.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout a 11 generations" (Psalms 145:13).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Scriptures imply that God is All-in-All. From this it follows that nothing possesses reality nor existence except the divine Mind and His ideas" (page 331).

Treating Self Is Often Dangerous Health Head Says

AUSTIN, Tex.—One of the traditional American economic-personal virtues has long been that of self sufficiency. But one situation in which the trait of self sufficiency can be overdone is during illness, states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"He who treats himself as a fool for a doctor" is a phrase which should strike home at a good many Texans. Too many of our citizens, when indisposed, jump at conclusions as to what is wrong with them, and to go the corner drug store for a bottle of advertised medicine.

This ignoring of the existence of physicians and relying upon self-diagnosis is a bad gamble with ill health. For these persons, for all practical purposes, have isolated themselves as far as medical service is concerned.

In fact, they persist in this ignorant or careless complacency until they become acutely ill, when at last they call for professional medical service—which frequently is too late.

"It is indeed too bad that so many persons deliberately raise a barrier between themselves and the family physician. Considering him only as supplementary aid when the situation gets personally out of hand, there are literally thousands who through delay have made it impossible for medical science to render its best service and thus were penalized by a protracted illness, a chronic disease, or the premature termination of life.

"It follows that many people with great profit could surrender this 'isolationist' idea and appreciate the physician for what he really is. When his abilities are more generally given an opportunity to be applied early, when his advice on living habits is sought, and when he is considered as the only person to be relied upon to conserve health and treat illness, then and then only, will the present remarkable service that medical

NAMES in the News

Names make headlines. Newspapers, today as always, are made up of what people say, think, propose, dissent from. Governments, institutions, businesses—and all their activities—are only the lengthened shadows of men!

What is true on the front pages is true, also, on advertising pages. Advertisements are simply signed statements of men, banded together to form a business who seek your patronage. They back their good name against the products they ask you to buy. They say, in cold black type, that theirs is a name you can trust.

People who get the most for their money in the market-places are people who know the value of familiar, trade-marked products. They buy with confidence. They buy by name—and save time, tiresome searching, and money! Are you doing likewise?

FLYING BLIND

In thick weather, it is often necessary for airplanes to "fly blind" . . . to depend on instruments rather than vision and charted landmarks. Almost uncanny in their accuracy, such instruments are nevertheless second choice in the navigation of the air.

Shoppers who trot off down-town to the stores without first consulting the advertisements of those same stores are likewise flying blind. And needlessly so. The advertisements in this paper are put here for your guidance, for your safe landing in the Ports of Value.

Study them in comfort of your home . . . map your course before you put on your hat and drop the latch-key into your handbag. Compare the products offered, their prices, their general advantages. Then set out on your shopping-trip prepared for what you will see, what you will wish to have sent home.

Let the advertisements serve as guiding beacons of buying. It's the smart thing to do.

LOVE LAUGHS AT THE DOCTOR

CASE OF CHARACTERS
CONSTANCE MAIDWELL—heroine; the stand-in—Derek Manthon—an artist who loved money first; HILDEGARDE THORVALD—Derek's patient; DR. ROGERS—he met his most difficult case.

Yesterday, Constance starts on her strange stand-in assignment and meets Derek through the nurse who introduces them. Ironically, the nurse forgets Constance's name!

CHAPTER XV

AFTER a pause that seemed like a timeless void in which all sound and motion were suspended, Constance said, smiling with bright, unblinking eyes into Derek's white, blank face. "Greeting! How are you, Derek?" and Derek wet his lips and stammered with feverish cordiality. "Why, I'm—well, this is a surprise! Where did you drop from?"

Miss Wilcox's black eyes darted swiftly from one to the other of them; and Dr. Rogers' voice sounded unnaturally loud when he said, "Well—we'd better get down to business, hadn't we? I understand you're going to re-decorate our leading lady, Mr. Manthon." Constance knew that Derek's hands were shaking as he worked, frowning, glancing from her to the pictured image of Camilla Wynne and back again—Dr. Rogers suggesting from time to time, "A little more of that black stuff on her lashes, don't you think, Manthon?" "I wonder if the mouth's full enough?" And Miss Wilcox, "Of course, her eyebrows should be plucked, but we haven't got all day."

So that was the way Derek had looked when he saw her . . . That was what she had said to Derek . . . And that was what Derek had said to her.

Finally Dr. Rogers exclaimed, "Well, I guess that just about rings the bell. . . . Go grab yourself some sleep, Miss Wilcox. You may have a difficult day ahead of you. . . . Now, Miss Maidwell, if you're ready—"

With a swift, veiled glance at Derek's fair head, bent over the cosmetics he was replacing in the box, Constance followed the doctor into the corridor.

Just outside the sick room door he paused to say with a very little smile, "By the way, you'd better call him 'Jo-jo' if you can bring yourself to it. It was Miss Wynne's playful little name for him, I understand. . . . Aside from that, you'll have to be guided by whatever it is people mean when they talk about intuition."

Then they went into a large, cool, shadowy room.

THE second nurse was hovering over a bed on which lay a slight figure. George Thorvald, Constance saw, was hardly taller than his sister, and not at all like her. Where Hildegard was generously, if exquisitely, made—all golden tints, with blood coursing warmly, close under the skin—her brother was dark and slight, with crisp black hair, a pale olive skin, and sensitive, delicately chiseled features. . . . Ernest Thorvald's wife, Derek had written, had been a Spanish lady.

As the boy stirred restlessly, Mark Rogers said in a swift undertone, "Sit here, please," and Constance dropped into a chair by the side of the bed.

The boy moaned, cried out sharply, "Camilla—Cam, dear? . . . Can't you move? . . . Oh, no—no, no!" and seemed about to open his eyes.

Dr. Rogers murmured, "Closer. He's had an opiate, and can't see very clearly."

Constance leaned forward, clasped her hands together on the edge of the bed, and breathed, "Yes, I'm here, Jo-jo."

"But I killed you," he protested in a bewildered whisper. "You were—dead. . . . I saw you—lying there—in the light of the car. . . . I called you, but you didn't move or speak. . . . Then someone—came—and took you away."

"But, you silly boy," Constance said, making her voice sing, caressing each syllable with her lips as she had often watched Camilla Wynne read her lines in a close-up, "I'm here now, aren't I?"

He seemed to think that over, frowning with the effort of concentration. His hand fumbled for her fingers.

"Yes," he said slowly. "I guess it's you all right—this time. Your hand is warm—and you smell sweet. . . . You never touched me any of those other times you came."

"That's because I never did come before—not really." Constance told him softly. "You dreamed all that, you know. But this time you're not going to dream—not about me, nor anything else—just sleep."

He sighed, a quivering little sigh, like a child who has cried himself out.

"You were nice to come," he said drowsily, "after—the other night. But you were—always a lot—sweeter to me than I—deserved. . . . That's what I was—trying to tell you when we—met the truck—that I didn't deserve it, I mean—because I—don't seem to love you any more—not that way I used to. . . . I—frowned faintly—I didn't put it very well, I guess. . . . Men shouldn't have to—say things like that to—women. . . . Women ought to—see it coming, and—make it easy."

"But I did understand," Constance said swiftly. "And you mustn't worry about that any more." . . . What, in heaven's name was she saying, she thought, in the voice of that woman the boy thought her to be?

She went on, "I'd have told you that night if we hadn't gone over the bank. . . . I don't blame you. No one can help—not loving someone any longer. . . . It's—she broke off, startled by the ironic truth of her own childish phrase.

Suppose it had been she, in her own person, who had had to speak those words—to Derek?

The boy made a drowsy motion as if to pat the hand that rested so close to his own.

"That's swell," he said. "Because I really—can't help it. . . . But it was—nasty—thinking I'd—killed you. . . . Now I know, if you don't mind, I won't—talk any more—just now."

MARK ROGERS opened the door, and as the nurse came quietly forward, Constance slipped outside the room. In the corridor he overtook her.

"That's more like it," he said with a relief that lifted the words from the prosaic. "He may really sleep now."

Then when he saw that her lashes were wet, his eyes danced wickedly for a moment.

"You're not spilling perfectly good tears over being jilted by proxy, are you? Don't you take your play-acting too seriously!"

Constance wondered what he would say if she told him that for a moment she had almost forgotten that it was play-acting.

Look at her probably, in that twinkling, quizzical way of hers, as if she were something new and interesting, wriggling on a slide, as if he were wondering just why the specimen wriggled the way it did; and just what combination of circumstances might make it wriggle differently. . . . He was doing it now.

She was casting around for something scathing to say to him when he anticipated her.

Banker Accused of Slaying Wife

Well-dressed, mild-appearing James Warren Crabb II, wealthy 21-year-old Delavan, Ill., banker, is pictured above as he awaited trial on manslaughter and perjury charges growing out of the slaying of his 19-year-old bride, Betty. Crabb assertedly has stated that he shot the girl by accident during a struggle for possession of a gun. The couple had been married only five weeks. Trial was scheduled to begin at Pekin, Ill., March 26.

A. It required all votes to be cast at the county seats and provided that the elections last four days.

Q. When did Edmund J. Davis become governor of Texas?
A. Davis took the oath of office, Jan. 17, 1870, for the four year term, as provided in the new constitution, but could only serve as provisional governor until that constitution was approved by Congress and the state formally readmitted, during which time General Reynolds continued as military governor.

In this column answers will be given in response to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mann, 7-1016 Texas.

Q. What was the wording of the objectionable election provision in the 1869 constitution?
A. It provided that "All elections for state, district and county officers shall be held at the county seat of the several counties, until otherwise provided by law; and the polls shall be open for four days, from eight o'clock a. m., until four o'clock p. m., of each day."

Q. Who composed the Supreme Court that decided the election of December, 1873, to be illegal?
A. The three judges of what came to be known as the "Semi-Colon Court" were J. D. McAdoo, Moses D. Walker and Wesley Ogden, appointees of Governor Davis.

Q. Who was elected governor and lieutenant governor of Texas in December, 1873?

Q. What had been the general construction placed on the election provision of the 1869 constitution and what did the Supreme Court hold in regard to it?
A. The generally accepted opinion was that the entire provision was intended to govern only until another method was provided by law. The Supreme Court ruled, on Jan. 5, 1874, that the semi-colon divided it into two parts and that only that part preceding the semi-colon could be changed by legislation. Because of that decision, Gov. Davis held that the election of state officers and members of the legislature had been illegal and was therefore void.

Q. Why was Governor Davis in a trying position in regard to the election of the Fourteenth Legislature?
A. He had approved the act of the Thirteenth Legislature that did away with the four day election and authorized voting in precincts rather than at the county seats, doubtless having given no consideration at the time to the trouble-making semi-colon; the members of the Supreme Court that held the election illegal were his own appointees, whose decision he could not well disregard, and yet he realized that the voters had expressed their desire in the election of Richard Coke as governor and the members of the Fourteenth Legislature.

Q. What objectionable and troublesome provision did the 1869 constitution contain as to elections?

A. Richard Coke was elected governor and Richard B. Hubbard lieutenant governor by a majority of approximately 50,000 and with them a Democratic legislature was elected.

BRADENTON, Fla.—Close observers at the Brooklyn club's Clearwater camp suspect that the death of Stephen W. McKeever will hasten the sale of the Dodgers to the group headed by James J. Walker, former mayor of New York. . . . The Charles Ebbets club never made money, and in the past, James Mulvey, son-in-law of McKeever who now assumes active charge, hasn't had the time. . . . Mulvey is in the motion picture business.

The club is heavily in hock to a Brooklyn bank, which swooped down on the opening day receipts a year ago. . . . The Brooklyn franchise long was one of the best in baseball, but it hasn't paid dividends in three campaigns. . . . When Knickerbocker returned his unsigned contract to the Browns, Bill DeWitt gave him permission to make a deal for himself and asked what minor league club he preferred. . . .

Knickerbocker telegraphed McCarthy, who promptly phoned him in Los Angeles. The Yankee director told that he intended to strand with young Joe Gordon at the base and Frank Crosetti at the stop, but that he would have him as a backup for pair as well as Red Barber.

Knick replied he would carry bats for the Yankees. So McCarthy got him for $100,000 and Don Heffner. . . . He made it one of the smartest deals ever made. . . .

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox

The only trouble with some good plain dinners is that they are more plain than good. Simplicity is not to be confused with dullness. A few touches of unexpected seasoning, the addition to a plain recipe of one unusual ingredient, will turn just simple food into awfully good though simple eating.

Try this combination of smoked ham tenderloin, spaghetti and cheese, spinach and pineapple snow.

Spiced Ham Tenderloin
One ham tenderloin, 1-2 teaspoon ground ginger, 1-2 teaspoon curry powder, 4 whole cloves, 1 tablespoon honey, 2 raw tart apples.

Place all ingredients in large kettle. Cover with boiling water. Cover kettle and simmer for about 3 hours. Do not bring to boil. It must cook slowly to become flavorful. Serve garnished with the apples.

Mellow Spaghetti and Cheese
(Serves 8)
One 9-ounce package spaghetti, 1-3 pound American cheese, 1 tablespoon bacon drippings, milk, salt, pepper and paprika, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire.

Break spaghetti in half. Plunge into boiling salted water. When almost done, drain at once and rinse thoroughly in cold water. Grate cheese or chop fine. Rub clove of garlic around bottom of large baking dish. Then grease with bacon dripping.

Place spaghetti into the greased dish. Sprinkle with 1/3 of the cheese, salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until spaghetti and cheese are done. Mix Worcestershire with warm milk, add enough milk to come to top of spaghetti. Dust with paprika. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for one hour. Keep covered last 15 minutes. This spaghetti tastes better the second day. It is complete luncheon, plus coffee or fruit for companions.

Pineapple Snow
One cup shredded pineapple, apple, 1-2 cup condensed milk, 1/2 cup marshmallows, 1-3 cup sugar. Combine all ingredients in refrigerator overnight.

Calendar Sunday
 Baptist Training Union Sunday evening at 6:15. All members are urged to attend.

Monday
 The Methodist Womens Missionary Society will continue its mission study, "Rebuilding Rural America" at the meeting at 3 p. m. Chapters 6 and 7 will be presented by Mrs. Frank Crowell with Mrs. W. F. Davenport as leader.

The W. M. U. of the Baptist church will meet at 2:30 p. m. at the Church.

The Junior Cadets of the Baptist Union will hold a business meeting at 5:30 p. m. for the nominating of new officers.

Hobo Party Is Held:
 The Junior Cadets of the Baptist church training union held a hobo party Friday afternoon. Each member, dressed in the costumes of the hobo, met at the home of Miss Irene Williams and were received at the back door where they registered on a piece of paper. Following the registration the guest were served peanuts.

Going from the Williams home the group met at the back door of the home of Mrs. W. M. Alford where food that had been left for them was handed out in the hobo receiving manner. The group went from there to the home of Mrs. Lee Bishop where a huge fire was made and the food gathered at these various places were eaten.

Those present at the affair were: Ouida Laney, Jack Coffman, Lois Lerner, Roy Lerner, Beulah Fae White, Ruth Reed, Billy Jean Crawley, Emalee Hart, Elmarie Gustafson, Nama Lee Simmons, Ellamarie Wiley, Nita Fay Richardson, Frances Laverne Richardson, Johnny Lou Hart, Lila Anne Love, Myrtle Bishop, Gladys Ned Allison, Dale Bishop, Edith Allison, Peggy McFarland, Jerry McFarland, Jane McFarland, Robert Wynne, Betty Glenn Cox, Helen Jean Simmons, Virginia Bourland, Charlotte Bourland, Gloria Reed, Totsy Threatt, Katrina Lovelace, Irene Williams.

School Marked Success:
 The Cooking school conducted by Mrs. Arreva French, a southern home economist and food authority, and sponsored by Daily Telegram and Eastland business men closed Saturday after a very successful three day run.

A very appreciative and attentive audience attended the lectures given by Mrs. French the three days she was in Eastland. Many of them stated that they derived much from her culinary skill and household hints.

And here a word of praise should go to the merchants of Eastland for their wholehearted cooperation in the school each spring to make it a greater success than the one before. They had a splendid display to make it a greater success than the one before. They had a splendid display in connection with the school that added to the effective setting on the roof of the Connellee hotel.

The last, Saturday afternoon, proved very interesting with the contest for the best cakes made with Mrs. Tuckers shortening and the awards presented the winners.

Martha Dorcas Elects
 The members of the Martha Dorcas class of the Methodist church met in the home of Mrs. Jack Dwyer with Mrs. L. C. Brown, Mrs. Frank Davis as joint hostesses.

Mrs. I. J. Killough in the absence of the president, Mrs. Coleman, presided over the business session at which time the nominating committee, Mrs. Frank Roberson, Mrs. I. J. Killough and Mrs. Roy Stokes, announced the names selected for the coming term.

Those elected were: for president, Mrs. Frank Castleberry; first vice-president, Mrs. Mae O'Neil; second vice-president, Mrs. A. J. Treadwell; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. H. C. Williams; Assistant secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Jack Dwyer; pianist, Mrs. A. O.

LOOKING BACKWARD . . .

. . . over a period of ten or fifteen years, we can see any number of people about town who could have had a home paid out long ago for the rents they have paid had they taken the step at the right time. To many of these it is now too late for the time eventually comes to us all when the doors of opportunity are closed.

So those who are looking forward today may profit by the experiences of those who are now looking backward by buying a home while opportunity is knocking at the door.

We offer these homes for your consideration this week: 115 Garvin; 401 South Walnut; 406 Pershing; 811 W. Commerce; 1306 S. Seaman.

When Famed 'Wits' Get Together

Gentler in appearance, but no less explosive in their utterances, 82-year-old George Bernard Shaw and 74-year-old Margot Asquith are shown above in earnest conversation in London. The capacity for sharp wit shows itself in the face of the once fiery-haired woman writer, and the same qualities lie barely hidden behind the beard of the Irish playwright. Shaw attracted first notice as a playwright 44 years ago, the same year the woman writer married Herbert Asquith, one-time prime minister, thus becoming Lady Oxford and Asquith. They are pictured at a luncheon marking the start of work on the filming of Shaw's "Pygmalion." Notice the playwright's "auxiliary" glasses.

Munitions Stores Worth $37,000,000

By United Press
 DOVER, N. J.—War munitions valued at $37,500,000 are stored in Picatinny Arsenal here, where 3,511 persons, a peacetime record, are now employed.

Army officials revealed that no ammunition for small guns or machine guns is made at Picatinny, which includes 531 buildings on 2,297 acres. The arsenal has been rebuilt in the past few years with WPA funds following a 1926 explosion which destroyed many buildings.

Picatinny is the army's principal ammunition manufacturing center.
