Ordinary Rules Don't Hold for the General

The same doctors who said a short time back that Gen. John J. Pershing's death was to be expected momentarily have now announced that the general may live for years if he will live carefully and quietly. They have classed his recovery as almost—but not quite—miraculous.

The funeral train assembled to transport the World War hero's body across the nation has long since been disassembled.

You will remember reading these excerpts from news stories of not so long ago regarding the general's apparently futile battle for life:

"The life of the 77-year-old wartime commander of the American Expeditionary Forces was believed drawing to a close."

"As the spark of life in the stout heart ebbed away . . ."

"Gen. John J. Pershing sank steadily toward death tonight . . ."

"Members of the family who came tearfully from the bedside indicated that the end was near."

"Dr. Roland Davison said, 'With the very rapid progress of the ailment against him, I doubt if he can last very long.'"

All of which proves once more that ordinary rules of life don't hold for extraordinary men. During long periods of his illness the general was in a coma. He could not speak. He could not eat. He could not take drink. Some of his organs had ceased to function.

But one organ kept on the job just as it had in many tough spots during the general's 77 years. That was his grand old fighting heart. That heart is beating with new strength these days and people everywhere rejoice in its victory.

Perhaps the general will never again lead an active life. Perhaps he will. The doctors have said that he must live quietly. But who would be surprised to see the old battler fool the doctors again, and return to the activity that characterized his career always?

The general is very much among the living and reports of his death were not only "greatly exaggerated" but also extremely premature.

The whole world joins in shouting: "A good fight, Gen. John J. Pershing!"

British censor board forbids children under 16 to see "Snow White" on the theory they might be frightened. Are these the same children who are taught the use of gas masks?

1938 Frigidaire to Be Shown at School

Having reached an all-time peak in 1937 for developments in automatic refrigeration for homes, Frigidaire found itself this fall the object of watchful eyes through out the entire refrigeration industry. There was an especial interest on the part of those who build household refrigerators, as well as the public at large, in learning just what this industry leader could possibly do in the matter of improvements for the coming year, particularly in view of the outstanding character of the achievements on its 1937 line of products. Even those who are close to constant developments in industry assumed questioning attitudes when this subject was discussed.

That Frigidaire has again fully lived up to its twenty-one year reputation as leader of the refrigeration industry is evidenced by the character and features of its new line of products for 1938, now available to the public through its nation-wide dealer organization, according to Mr. Hail, local representative. "The underlying theme of Frigidaire's offerings for the 1938 line," said Mr. Hail "is definite improvement in every worthwhile feature that has been a part of our advantages during the season just closed. Every development that has stood the test of practical use in the home, is now being carried forward to even greater improvement.

"Ours has never been a mad race to add a variety of gadgets to a refrigerator which in themselves may have little or no value in the fundamental purposes for which a refrigerator is created, and that is to preserve food better and longer with a maximum of convenience to the user. To differentiate between a meaningless gadget and a useful service or device has always been the Frigidaire aim.

"In the 1938 products new heights of perfection are reached in a number of previously valuable features. Those things which the public has accepted as excellent are now better than ever due to intensive research that has been conducted in connection with each of them to make them so. Particularly are these truths exemplified in such items as the new silent meter-miser unit, and the new low cost of operation. Always a quiet operating refrigerator, the new Frigidaire reaches a completely new standard in this respect. Consistently adhering to the electrically driven power unit because of its greater reserve of refrigeration power and wider range of operation in relation to non-electric types available today, Frigidaire this year accomplishes unbelievable things in the matter of quiet operation. Advanced cabinet construction, using an improved type of insulation and in greater amounts than ever before, contributes to the saving in operating costs, which amount to as much as 25 per cent in some models.

"Last year's sensational quickcube ice tray with the instant cube release available only of Frigidaire, this year is made 'double easy' with further improvements in design and simplicity in assembly. Ice cubes are easily released as desired, in quantities of from two to an entire trayful.

"New models are on display at the Cooking School and at our headquarters showrooms, West Main Street, Eastland.

LOVE LAUGHS AT THE DOCTOR

ELINORE COWAN STONE

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CONSTANCE MAIDWELL—heroine; the stand-in.
DEREK MANTION—an artist who loved money first.
HILDEGARDE THORVALD—Derek's palated her portrait.
DR. ROGERS—the met his most difficult case.

Yesterday the Rogers date brings a reprint for Constance and the same day she reads that a romance is rumored between Derek and Hilda. Constance did not read any further.

CHAPTER XII
CONSTANCE did not read beyond that first sentence. It seemed to her hours before she was able to look up and say in a voice that sounded reasonably like her own, "I didn't know there was any one naive enough to buy this family story. The last I heard they were drumming up publicity by paying people to sue them for libel."

But she knew they had seen her face in that first moment. When she slipped out of the store that night, a man stepped from a parked car, hastily threw away a cigarette, and stood in her path. Under the entrance light, his uncovered head shone with copper lights.

"Are you weeping on any one's shoulder tonight?" he asked. "Go away," said Constance. "The last time I talked to you I got my hands slapped. We do not associate with the male relatives of our customers."

"There aren't any customers in my family any more," Dr. Mark Rogers said with a brief smile. "We spent all our money the other day—thanks to you."

He held the car door open. "Please get in," he suggested. "I'd like to talk to you."

WELL, well; Constance thought. Just like that! . . . But, after all, why not? (She thought of Derek.) He probably only wants to take my temperature or make sure I'm getting plenty of sleep.

As she hesitated, she was vastly amused to see him take out his watch and glance at it hastily. "Don't let me keep you," she said with malice, "if someone is choking to death or something. But I thought you were on a vacation now."

"It's no vacation now." He was definitely not the phlegmatic type of male. He looked worried and a little embarrassed. "I—but we'll talk about that later. I'm counting on a good meal to put you into a receptive frame of mind—at Daimler's, shall we say?" With a flicker of a smile he finished dryly, "I want to park you somewhere where you'll feel that you have the protection of sane human beings when you decide that I've gone crazy."

After a brief hesitation Constance laughed in spite of herself. He looked so desperately in earnest, and at the same time so uncomfortably aware that he must look ridiculous.

"All right," she said. "I shouldn't be human if I weren't curious."

When they were settled at a table, and Dr. Rogers had ordered—steaks, blue points, planked steak with mushrooms and fresh asparagus, a salad, an ice, and coffee—he said, with a crooked little smile, "Thank God the orchestra's at the other end of the room. I don't do this to music without—"

Constance admitted that she was not a musical person. "Did anyone ever tell you," he demanded abruptly, "that you look like Camilla Wynne?"

"Why, yes," Constance admitted after a bewildered pause. "But I never felt inordinately set up about it."

"Ever seen her—on the screen, I mean?"

"On a mischievous impulse Constance leaned an elbow languorously on the table, rested her chin on her palm, and looking up at him under fluttering lids, said in a throaty, breathless voice, "I understand, Doctor. You want me to tell him a bedtime story. . . . But it is really kind? Sometime, you know, he's bound to wake up—and that hurts. . . . I know. That's—"

WORDS, gesture, and intonation were lifted bodily from one of Camilla Wynne's most popular impersonations—the role of the nurse in "A Doctor's Best Friend."

The man across the table gave such a whole-hearted shout of delight that Constance could not help warming toward him. "I say," he demanded, "how long could you keep that up?"

"Until you screamed for help," Constance said. "Since my friends discovered the fatal resemblance, it's been my one and only parlor trick. . . . Why?"

"Because Camilla Wynne got herself knocked out in an automobile crash this morning. That's what this is all about."

He had sobered so abruptly that Constance said after a moment of incredulous silence, "You're not by any chance suggesting that I double for the femme fatale, are you? I thought you were a physician, not a . . ."

"If you want to check up on me, go to the telephone and call the Fort Wayne Hospital," he told her with deadly earnestness. "I don't belong in this part of the country, but they know me there. . . . Or, second thought, perhaps I'd better drive you around to the hospital. We'll just about have time."

CONSTANCE said weakly, "You're the most incredible man I ever met. But I admit, I'm still curious."

"I'm a little hazy about some of the details, myself. I got them over long distaste from California. You see, the driver of the car in which Camilla Wynne was riding was the son of a patient of mine. Miss Wynne is not badly hurt, I understand. But the boy—well, aside from other desperate injuries, he is on the verge of a complete nervous collapse. You see, he's in love with Miss Wynne, and he's convinced that he killed her. Only the sight of her—or someone he can be persuaded to take for her—will pull him through the immediate nervous crisis, and give him a chance for his life. . . ."

While she was still searching for words, a party of four men passed their table. One of them checked his steps, turned, and called pleasantly, "Good evening, Dr. Rogers. Run in and see me again before you leave town, won't you? I have a patient I'd like to—why, good evening, Miss Maidwell—or I should say—"

"I know him?" Mark Rogers asked.

"I ought to. He's Dr. Ardmore, my physician," Constance said. . . . She thought, "He started to call me Mrs. Manthon. . . ."

"May we consider that I am properly identified, or shall I call him back?" the man opposite her asked. "The time, I'll have to remind you, is getting short."

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayer, Austin, Texas.

Q. Why were the members of the Thirteenth Texas legislature called the "Liberators of Texas?"
A. The appellation, given the legislators elected in November, 1872, which appears under the group picture in the capital at Austin, was bestowed because that legislature was the first after the Civil War with a Democratic majority and it freed Texas of the obnoxious election feature of the constitution of 1869.

Q. What provision did the Thirteenth Legislature make as to voting?
A. It passed a law that repealed the four-days election provision of the 1869 constitution and allowed people to vote in their own precincts or communities instead of at the county seats.

Q. What were the most notable contributions of the Lamar administration to the cause of education?
A. They were Lamar's first message to the Congress of the Republic in December, 1898, containing his oft-quoted utterances on education, followed by the passage of an education bill, Jan. 26, 1899, providing that three leagues of land be set aside in each county to establish a primary school or academy, and 50 leagues to be set apart for the endowment of two colleges or universities. The grants to counties were increased to four leagues each the following year.

Q. When and why did Governor Pease resign from office and what followed his resignation?
A. Governor Pease resigned in December, 1869, having become dissatisfied with the extreme reconstruction measures and the methods employed. Gen. Joseph J. Reynolds, then military commander, a former classmate and a close friend of President Grant, became military governor.

Q. What proclamation did Gov. Davis issue governing voters under this provision?
A. Before the election of 1872, he issued a proclamation requiring voters who did not live in the county seat at which they voted, and who went there to vote, to leave immediately after casting their ballots.

Poultry Expert Is Also Cake Baker

By United Press
STEPHENVILLE.—T. A. Hensarling, professor of poultry at John Tarleton Agricultural College, has a unique hobby that increases income of the poultry industry.

Hensarling, who is supervisor of the International Egg-Laying Contest conducted by the college, spends his spare time baking angel food cakes.

Friends of Hensarling pointed out that poultrymen's profits are hiked proportionately with every angel food cake baked. Here is Hensarling's recipe for a pleasing pastime, profits for the poultryman, and a good cake:

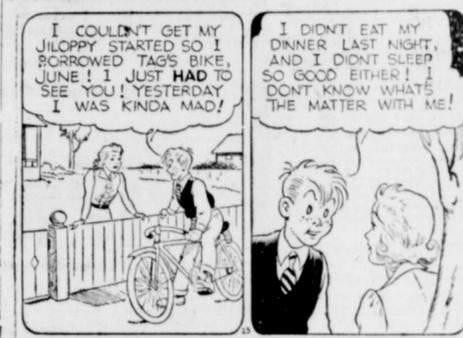

Hensarling's angel food cake: 1 1/2 cups egg whites, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar, 2 cups fine granulated sugar, 1 1/2 cups cake flour, 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla, 1 1/2 tablespoons water.

Add salt to egg whites and beat until foamy with egg whip. Add cream of tartar and continue beating until eggs are stiff but not dry. Fold sifted sugar in with a knife, small amounts at the time. Mix vanilla with water and fold in batter. Fold flour, four times sifted, in the same manner. Bake in ungreased pan 60 to 80 minutes. Use heat 275 degrees first half of baking period, increasing to 325 second half. If baked in square tins, this recipe makes 32 medium or 24 large servings.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS -- By Blosser

ALLEY OOP -- By Hamlin

NEA Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK.—Far be it from me to become too bullish on the program. Such is the case, if you hadn't previously been aware that fans are interested in the mile run—or its 1500-meter—than in any other event in the book. That, they piece de resistance of every meet.

Without being an out-and-out non-conformist I think popular pattern, and nominate the 440 as the thrilling quarter of all. And with an ear turned to the ground I can folks backing me up.

True, you find some of the most highly-publicized names running the mile—Glenn Cunningham, Archie Hahn, Gene Zenzke, Don Lash, and others.

Those names are on the tip of your tongue. You probably have to think a moment or two before you could name notch quarter-milers.

ON an outdoor track, the mile is run around four laps each. What, then, can be so thrilling in the first three quarters of the race? There's nothing but jockeying on the part of the spectators in those first three laps.

The real race comes in that final 440 yards. In other quarters of the race is merely a buildup for what is to come. The 440 is one single lap around the track—no jockeying—just plain, headin' for the tape.

Most track men and track coaches will tell you that the toughest race to run than the mile. It's probably the most flat race there is, being practically a full sprint over a quarter of a mile. To examine it a little closer let's quote the time record for the quarter is 46.6, held by Bill Carr. That's running four good centuries in 10-flat, which is pretty with six seconds left over for the added 40 yards, or throughout the race.

TO me, there's more of a thrill in seeing a half dozen quarter-milers streak it tapeward than there is in seeing a pound down the 100-yard dash. The century is top speed it's over too soon.

They call Gene Zenzke a "picture runner." But you'll never see him as thrilling a sight as Bill Carr when he's in his terrific quarters.

Pennsylvania's 1932 Olympic champion, whose career was by an auto accident, was the spectacle of his day. Perhaps the reason for the quarter not being as popular as the mile is the fact that it rarely is included on the big door meets, where the show is stolen by the Wannamaker, Baxter Mile, and other featured mile events.

But put Archie Williams, Ray Malott, Loren Benke, Al Fitch, and a couple others in a few 440 indoor track bugs will clamor for more.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

WASHINGTON.—The public eye is drawn to the White House, but one who is not a member of the administration in Europe, still help and receive the same respect as the President. It is not the feeling of American officials who decided that they ought to colonize the territories and islands of Canton and Enderbury even though the British had beat them to it.

Although this "international incident" is far from serious it does represent the first American attempt in a long time to acquire a few square miles of new territory. There are about 20 speckish and valueless islands in the area, visited at one time or another by British or American vessels.

THE "draft" James Roosevelt put American officials in the bringing negotiations to a close. Official insistence has no chance, peculiarly more true. They are for important new territory they may prove to be of commercial value.

TWO years ago the Division of Territories and Island Possessions colonized Howland, Jarvis and Baker islands with four Hawaiian each and is building lighthouses on them.

But Department of Commerce officials, who chose those islands with aviation purposes in mind, seemed to overlook the fact that they would be useful only for land planes and not for seaplanes, the only type used for oceanic flying.

Canton Island, on the other hand, has a long lagoon, only a few miles from the Hawaiian Islands. Honolulu Enderbury seems to be an island of no importance.

The British occupy so many islands in this section of the Pacific that their occupation of Canton was somewhat annoying to the State Department, which understood negotiations were to precede any colonization.

Last June an American naval supply vessel carrying an American scientific party to view the eclipse anchored at Canton. Soon came a British cruiser from New Zealand carrying a British eclipse expedition and signaled her

Asserted Timidity Of Candidates for House Criticized

"An interested tax payer" preferring anonymity, Tuesday in a letter to this paper expressed disappointment "at the timidity of some of our candidates for the legislature in the 106th and 107th districts."

The letter of the "interested tax payer":

Editor:

The writer has been somewhat disappointed at the timidity of some of our candidates for the legislature in the 106th and 107th districts.

The issues to be considered in the present campaign seem to be reasonably defined, yet our candidates seem to have their ears to the ground in an effort to find what would be popular to advocate. A candidate who has no opinions of his own by this time could not be reasonably expected to have any at primary time or afterwards.

The trouble with most legislators who have been elected the last few years is that they are like the fellow's wife who knew nothing about balancing the budget, but if she chanced to find a balance in the bank, it did not take her long to budget the balance.

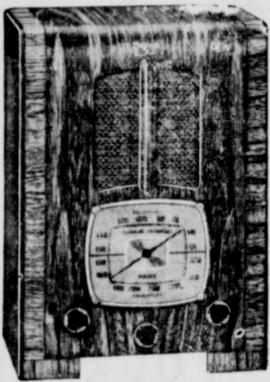

Am sure that a great many people of the county would like to have each of the candidates for the legislature in the districts mentioned above answer the following questions:

Do you favor any additional tax levies at the next term of the legislature?

Do you favor a tax of oil of 10 cents, or any other amount, per barrel in addition to that already levied?

Do you favor liberalizing the present Old Age Assistance law, if so to what extent?

Youth Does His Good Deed, But Goes Too Far With An Auto

COLLINGSWOOD, N. J.—John Pennington, 16, "took" his reward for being a good Samaritan and ended with being placed on probation for six months.

Mrs. Mae Green of Westport stalled her automobile. The volunteer to help start the engine, Pennington succeeded in starting the car, but instead of stopping at the nearest garage, he continued on. He returned 40 miles later with the explanation that he had taken a "joy ride" as punishment for his service.

I used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and my appetite returned, I gained in weight and strength and felt just fine in every way. Get it in liquid or tablet form from your druggist today."

SIMPLE QUESTIONS AND UNDERSTANDABLE ANSWERS ABOUT YOUR BANK

NOTE: (Clip this ad out and watch for our ad tomorrow). Visit the Cooking School! PART NUMBER TWO:

Why is public confidence so important to a bank? There are two main reasons why public confidence is so important to a bank. In the first place people must have confidence in a bank before they will deposit their money. This means confidence in the honesty, integrity and ability of the bank officers, plus the belief that sound, efficient methods are used in its management.

Secondly, public confidence is important because it gives the bank assurance of stable deposits. This, in turn, enables the bank to loan or invest its funds for reasonable periods in sound business undertakings. It is the revenue from these loans and investments which makes it possible for the bank to pay its operating costs, build up reserves and pay stockholders a fair return on their invested capital.

The officers of this bank have justifiable pride in the widespread public confidence it enjoys in this community. What are the duties of Bank directors? Stated in simple terms, it is the duty of bank directors to direct.

They are elected by the owners of the bank—the stockholders—who delegate to the board of directors the responsibility of management. The directors, in turn, hire the officers who, with other employees, carry on the daily work of running the bank.

But the final and inescapable responsibility for the bank rests upon its board of directors. It is their job to exercise control and supervision of its affairs. It is their duty to know about the important phases of the bank's business and the manner in which it is conducted.

Our directors actively direct the affairs of this bank. They meet regularly to pass on important matters, to make decisions and establish policies which guide our officers in the daily management of the bank.

Why are "Banking hours" so short? The hours during which a bank is open to the public for the transaction of business are usually called "Banking Hours." They are only a part of the working day for bank employees.

A bank is very much like an efficient housewife who has work to do before a dinner party and work to do after the guests leave. There is much work for employees to do before the bank opens to the public.

At the close of "banking hours," many important tasks begin. Window tellers count and balance their cash; bookkeepers prove accounts and tally ledgers; checks are arranged for clearance to other banks and to other cities; staff meetings and conferences are held; officers dictate and sign correspondence, go over reports and attend to many other duties. An important part of every bank's work is done before and after "banking hours."

Do Banks coin money or issue currency? Banks do not coin money. Money is coined by the Federal Government mints under authority given to Congress by section 8 of the Constitution which says: "The Congress shall have power to coin money and regulate the value thereof."

The banks of the country (except the twelve Federal Reserve Banks) do not issue currency. This function is exercised by the Treasury of the United States. The twelve Federal Reserve Banks issue Federal Reserve Notes. National banks formerly issued National Bank Notes but that authority was terminated by an Act of Congress.

How are a Bank's investments made? The most important function of a soundly-managed bank is to keep most of its deposited funds employed at the best rates of interest consistent with safety. A considerable portion is, of course, put to work on local loans. Other investments are made depending upon legal requirements, local conditions and business conditions generally.

All investments of this bank are made under the directions of our officers and investment committee. From a variety of sources—files, business and statistical services, industrial, state and municipal reports, information developed by correspondent banks—we constantly collect investment information.
