We Should Take More Interest in State

Among the things that no fond mother ever told her snub-nosed young son is: "And if you work hard and be a good boy, you may grow up to be a member of the state legislature."

The state government in most of America, in other words, works under a cloud. There still is a certain glory to being governor, perhaps, but the ordinary America would be hard put if he had to name, from memory, as many as three other high state officials, or six members of his legislature.

Yet the state government touches the life of the average citizen quite as closely as does the federal government, with which he is far more familiar. It affects his taxes even more directly.

It has the power to alter the conditions under which he works or does business. With the county governments, it is at his elbow every day of the year.

The point of all this is that a direct and simple road to cheaper and better government is wide open for the people of America, if they will only take the trouble to find it. By bringing state and county governments up to date, by taking an interest in them and insisting on efficient, intelligent administration, they can save themselves untold millions.

Here is an illustration. A committee of business experts headed by Col. C. O. Sherrill, former city manager of Cincinnati, recently made a survey of the Ohio state government to see if it could be run more cheaply. A glance at a few of their recommendations is enlightening.

In the administration of the state sales tax alone, for example, Ohio could save $578,000 a year. It could save $750,000 more by a more intelligent purchasing system in its highway department. It could save another $166,000 by adjusting the warehouse and trucking contracts of its liquor department.

Altogether, simply by running the state government in the way a business organization would be run, the experts figure the state could save $13,000,000 a year. This, be it noted, does not call for abandonment of any state activity; nor does it even touch the county government, a political form which is as out of date today as the one-hoss shay.

The moral is obvious. We have abandoned our state governments to the politicians, and then we have gone off and forgotten who the politicians are. As a result, we are paying right through the nose.

If we want lower taxes, we have only to bring our state and county governments up to date, take an intelligent and unsleeping interest in the way they are operated, and insist on getting full value for our money.

That issue is quite as pressing as the more talked-about issue of reducing expenditures of the federal government.

Rubber Adds to Life of Highways

By United Press

BOSTON.—Rubber will be used to make Massachusetts highways smoother and longer-lived. The state public works departments, after years of laboratory tests, is about to begin use of a new rubber compound to join slabs of cement on highways, both in construction of new roads and in maintenance of existing surfaces.

Asphalt Commonly Used Moreover, expansion and contraction caused by extremes of temperature had to be considered and it was found necessary to leave a three-quarters-inch space between the slabs. Asphalt was used for 15 years to fill the joints, but it tended to extrude above the edges and thus form a series of bumps.

Next used was a moulded material made of a mixture of rubber and cork with a layer of asphalt on top, which, however, continued to protrude above the level of the highway.

No Heating Required The new compound is a liquid which is packed in sealed drums. It is not necessary to heat before applying. Some of it is brushed over the edges of the slabs to form a priming coat.

The mixture then is poured into the joint. It immediately coagulates and quickly hardens to form a permanent bond which seals both the end and top of a joint against water, sand and gravel. The compound also can be used for joints in bridge structures.

164 Per Cent Gain In Payroll's Is Announced by Vicks

GREENSBORO, N. C., Nov. 15.

For the five months period ending Oct. 31, employment here at the laboratories of Vicks Chemical Company, makers of Vicks VapoRub and other aids to better control of colds, reached an all-time peak, and payrolls increased 164 per cent over the corresponding period of 1934.

This record is all the more impressive in view of the fact that Vicks' employment showed progressive upward steps throughout the depression. The company gained national recognition in 1932-33—at the lowest point of the depression—in showing an employment increase of more than 100 per cent over the best normal records of pre-depression years. At the same time came the rather startling announcement that no Vicks salary had ever been cut because of "hard times."

This record Vicks has consistently maintained—outstandingly doing its share to speed recovery in employment and wages during the past five difficult years. In fact, Vicks' expansion policies were already carrying out what the federal government sought with its N. R. A. in the summer of 1933 to increase employment—and it is noteworthy that Vicks still adheres, in all its laboratories and offices, to the five-day, 40-hour week prescribed by a code no longer binding.

While exact figures are not available except for laboratory forces, the office employees, technical staffs and management groups employed by Vicks have also shown marked increases in payrolls and personnel through the years since 1928-29.

All of which reflects a period of continuing increases in volume of Vicks' sales. Not only have sales of its leader, Vicks VapoRub, increased, but—with the progressive addition of Vicks Va-tro-nol, Vicks Medicated Cough Drops and Vicks Voratone Antiseptic—now over 53 million Vicks aids to better control of colds are used yearly, in the United States alone.

"Depression?"—said Lunsford Richardson, president of the company, a few years ago when asked about conditions—"Vicks isn't afraid of 'depressions.' Fact is, we were born in the 1907, and since the ed stimulants radiants to Vicks' The record seen out. And an intermen is that, though Vicks has consist its use of newspaper looked upon as the advertising. This using the largest in over 1,600 daily

GIRLS, GAY TUNES, ROMANCE MAKE PERFECT MUSIC FILM

What is the recipe for a well-balanced screen musical? Offhand, most people would reply "girls, gay tunes, spectacle, comedy and romance in liberal portions."

But the question goes much deeper, as was proved by the investigations of Producer Jesse Lasby during the production of the gay musical extravaganza, "Redheads on Parade," which comes Sunday to the Connellee Theatre.

For one thing, there can be too much music!

A review of musical successes past and present reveals that music should be mixed with action in a proportion of about one to five. Producers who ignore this rule find that too much music impedes the action of their picture. Many have had to scrap costly production scenes for their picture's sake.

Another axiom which Producer Lasby found it advisable to adapt is that all music should be appropriate to the film's action. Numbers that fail to contribute to the story's movement hinder it. But in the case of "Redheads on Parade" this difficulty was obviated by the intriguing music of Jay Gorney and Don Hartman.

A musical picture, however, rarely suffers from an excess of beautiful girls. The opposite is more often true. In "Redheads on Parade" this danger is avoided by the bevy of beautiful redheads, redheads of every shade selected from the most glamorous and gorgeous of their kind.

silos by R. W. O'Neal of Cochran county would have netted him about $3 per acre for the dry corn if sold at market prices, while in the trench silo he is getting two and one-half tons of green feed which he values at $4 per ton, according to his report to G. R. Schumann, county agricultural agent. Neal estimated that the corn that was put in the silo would have made about five bushels of ear corn to the acre when harvested dry. The corn was cut up by an ensilage cutter.

GONZALES—One of the largest pecan crops since 1926 is reported by Gonzales county producers, according to J. M. Saunders, county agricultural agent. Producers expect to harvest enough additional pecans from cleared bottom lands to pay for the clearing of the lands. These pecans have been lost heretofore because of the excessive undergrowth.

JEAN IN AN effort to answer when BOBBY WALKER asks her to marry him at The Golden Feather night club she meets SANDY HAWKINS, whose business connection is vague. Sandy introduces Bobby and Jean to a Mr. and Mrs. LEWIS. Bobby sells some bonds for Lewis, who buys a car. LARRY GLENN, federal agent is visiting WINGY LEWIS, bank robber. He learns about the bond transaction and questions Bobby. Larry believes the car Lewis bought is armored. Bobby undertakes to find out. Jean agrees to a secret engagement with Sandy. The bank of which her father is president is robbed, and Larry starts a search for the robbers. Jean goes to see Sandy who has been injured. He and the robbers are staying at a farm-house. She soon finds herself a prisoner. The whole party leaves the farm. Larry discovers Jean is with the robbers. He and his men arrive after the robbers have gone. They continue the search. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIX WHEN the big blue sedan whirled away from the Engler farm, Jean nudged in a corner of the back seat and stared straight ahead of her, unseeing, her mind in a turmoil. Beside her, Eva Brady sat at ease, smoking a cigarette; in the other corner Red leaned back against the cushions, a cigar gripped in his teeth, and kept his own counsel. The two men in the front seat were silent, also; and the car sped along over the road without a sound except for the hum of the motor and the whistling of the wind about the body of the car. They did not go through Midlothian. Instead, they turned to the left and headed north; not, as far as Jean could remember, in the direction either of Plainfield, the railroad junction point, or of Dover. The red-headed man had practically forced her to get into the car. He had said nothing except, "We're going for a ride"; of Sandy's whereabouts she knew nothing, except that he had "gone on ahead" with Mr. Lewis. Jean felt herself a prisoner; the red-headed man seemed a monstrous and enigmatic embodiment of menace, with his expressionless eyes of pale blue conveying an unspoken but irresistible threat. They rode for perhaps five miles before she managed to regain enough calm to speak. Then, her fists clenched in her lap, she turned to her companions and asked, "Just where are we going?" Eve Brady cast a sidelong glance at her and smiled faintly. The red-headed man looked at her in mild surprise, and finally said, "Just who wants to know?" "I do." He gave her another stare, subtly derisive. "You'll find out when we get there," he said at last. "I want to know now. Are we going to Dover? I've got to get back. This isn't a joke, to me." He gave a mild little sniff. "It's not a joke to anybody," he said. "But lemme tell you this, baby - and try to remember it. He leaned across Eve Brady and tapped Jean on the knee with a massive fist. "Where we go, you go. It's too late to back out now. You're in with us, and you stay in. See?" They rode on and on, skimming over the concrete road with

"CRUSADES" FOURTH EPIC IN DeMILLE FILM CYCLE

Cecil B. DeMille's newest great screen spectacle, "The Crusades," will open at the Connellee Theatre for a three day's run showing beginning Monday. "The Crusades" is the fourth picture in DeMille's epochal cycle of religious-emotional-historical drama which began with "The Ten Commandments," and which includes "The Sign of the Cross" and "The King of Kings." It is also the most astonishing of this famed director's work.

Effects in the mass movement of armies, in battle between invading Crusader and opposing Saracen, in assaults on impregnable medieval fortresses, were secured on a scale never before attempted for the screen.

On the screen the flames mount skyward like a volcanic eruption hundreds of feet in height. This thrilling scene is only one incident of many in the Battle of Acre which the Crusaders waged to recover the portion of the True Cross preserved within its walls.

The chief motive of the Crusaders was the rescue of the Holy Land and its sacred relics from the Saracens. Loretta Young heads the cast of "The Crusades," as Berengaria, Princess of Navarre, who very unwillingly married Richard the Lion-Heart of England, played by Henry Wilcoxon.

Wilcoxon was seen as Mare Anthony in Cecil B. DeMille's "Cleopatra." Katherine DeMille, the director's daughter, has the role of the Princess Alice of France; C. Aubrey Smith is seen as the Hermit, instigator of the Crusades, and Ian Keith, Joseph Schickelruth, Alan Hale, C. Henry Gordon and George Barbier have feature roles.

The cast numbers more than 10 thousand persons. Hundreds of horses and other animals were used and the properties include ponderous and awesome war machines, hawk-like war galleys.

"The Crusades" is the complete picture of one of the world's most colorful eras.

GOOD OLD DAYS RETURN IN "DIAMOND JIM"

New York in the colorful era of the Gay Nineties and the Naughty Nineties, forms interesting background of Universal's "Diamond Jim," with Edward Arnold in the title role at the Connellee Theatre.

The success story of James Buchanan Brady, son of an obscure New York saloon-keeper, surpasses the wildest flights of imagination and is made-to-order movie material.

The picture shows how the prince of spenders made history with his lavish entertaining of bank presidents, railroad magnates, stage celebrities, prizefighters and chorus girls, his craze for collecting hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of diamonds which won him his nickname, his genius for revolutionizing railroad equipment and his incredible capacity for eating. It is generally said of him that his generosity was as great as his girth, and his heart as big as his stomach.

Before Brady was 12 years old, he outgrew the sawdust confines of the family saloon. He became in succession, a bellhop, baggage-smasher, station agent, chief clerk in a railroad office and finally a super-salesman of railroad equipment.

By a clever ruse, he pioneered steel undertrucks for freight cars and made himself a multimillionaire. His romantic life was no less glamorous than his business career.

He thought nothing of sending diamonds, emerald or ruby jewels to his lady friends and gave away gold-plated bicycles and jeweled handle bars to a group of intimates.

the country in the throes of relief from government money which must be paid by the taxpayers who in the instance are home owners, business industries of every nature there isn't much chance to get down to the business of industry taking up the slack of unemployment. Chevrolets Tested In 100,000 Event

"Two Chevrolet cars used by us as part of a fleet for a protracted road test at Toms River, N. J., have paid honor to your engineering," said W. M.
