Interests Threatened, Britain Protests

If your memory is good enough to reach back three years, you can get a pretty fair idea why Mussolini is going ahead in Ethiopia in defiance of the League of Nations.

Three years ago the Japanese set out to help themselves to Manchuria. Like Ethiopia, Manchuria was a potentially rich land held by an extremely weak people.

It is instructive to note what happened thereafter. The American government launched a series of sharp protest. The seizure of Manchuria (afterward renamed Manchoukuo) was in violation of sundry treaties.

Where, in those far-off days, were those English statesmen who have been talking so loudly of late about the need of collective resistance to unprovoked acts of aggression?

The thing to remember is that the Japanese adventure in Manchuria was almost an exact parallel to the Italian adventure in Ethiopia.

The answer to that one is easy. Japan's act was not a threat to the interests of the British empire; Italy's is.

All this is worth keeping in mind. If the present situation grows more serious, European publicists will presently tell us that it is our sacred duty to aid the league.

That news with the proper amount of salt.

The bank of which her father is president is robbed. Larry starts a search for the robbers.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIX
It was dusk by the time Larry Glenn and the other two federal men reached Maplehurst. They drove at once to the bank, where Mr. Dunn was waiting for them.
Larry shook hands, introduced his men, and went to work at once. In a few minutes he had every scrap of information about the robbery that Mr. Dunn could give him. He took an envelope from his pocket and drew out a few postcard-size photographs. He selected two and handed them to Mr. Dunn.
"Recognize either of them?" he asked.
Mr. Dunn looked down at a surly face in the conventional profile and side-view shots of a penitentiary rogues' gallery photograph. He gave a start of surprise as he looked at the black type beneath it—"Red Jackson"—and studied the picture with care.
"I'm not absolutely certain," he said at last. "It looks somewhat like him. I didn't get a very good look at him, though—not close up. You see, we were all herded up against the wall, and—"
"Who about the other one?"
Mr. Dunn looked at a picture of a perky, black-haired little man with rat-like eyes. Without hesitation he nodded decisively.
"That's the man who held the gun on us while the other one got the cash," he said. He handed the pictures back. Larry pocketed them.
"Who knew about this tear gas installation?" he asked suddenly. Mr. Dunn looked up in some surprise.
"Who, I suppose almost everyone in town knew it," he said. "You know how it is, in a place like this. We saw no special reason for keeping it a secret, anyway."
Larry stood up.
"Mr. Hobart might not," he said. "Mr. Hobart didn't have been a very unpleasant experience. You see, this being of a shot before a word was said—that isn't like the Jackson gang, or any other gang. It's pretty obvious that they knew about the tear gas, and simply shot first in order to prevent Mr. Hobart from using it."
Dunn looked grave, and shook his head slowly.
"Poor Hobart!" he said. "That's my fault, I suppose. Too, I'm glad he didn't have to pay a higher price for it."

EDITORIAL
The Rosebud of Success.
What is success? We often wonder if true success is ever in this world truly attained.

The factors which enter into the making of true success are so varied that we ponder the not well defined subject over and over in our minds. What is its true meaning?

Success, as defined by some authorities, "is the reaching of some favorable end." True success comes when we best correlate our sincere efforts to meet the commands of the supreme and matchless. Its meaning may be, therefore, compounded as inward and outward.

We can at least say, that in the hills of somewhere is the rosebud of success. Mounted on some lonely peak is the bush which bares this blossom fair. The path that leads to this somewhere spot is rough, rugged and pebbled worn by the spring that water the seekers below.

Just one scent of this fragrant rose plunges seekers into its depth—they must all like the fishes of the sea swim the upward course. Some will begin the task to pluck, but falter and fall back to the valley below. Some may swim to some lonely ravine and down in the depths to distress and woe. Some will climb and climb and climb—they ponder and plunder the peak of the hill and waste their lives in riotous skill.

The one who is to reach this success which is sublime, must hold, must suffice, must swim, and must climb. It's not for honor or glory or fame, nor that we should seek a great name. But honest efforts our whole duty perform is the breeders of the bud where success is born.

Seek fair seekers with courage and faith; not all will welcome and open the gate.

CHARACTER
Our character is what we really want it to be. If we wish to be a good citizen of our country, not only in dreams but in reality, we must have courage which means we must be strong enough and brave enough to control what we think, say, and do. We must have strength and courage to be truthful—to be able to tell the truth without fear, being honest in all our dealings and thoughts, for unless we are honest we cannot have self respect upon which hope is established and hope is power for improvement.

We must have wisdom and knowledge enough to act wisely in school, at home, in our playing, working or talking, and be able to choose good and escape bad. We must respect everyone who has more wisdom than we, and have reverence for that which is good, and know where and how to obey. We must be able to know ourselves, our fellow man, and the world about us so as to make use of useful knowledge and welcome it at home, in school and elsewhere.

We should be good sports at all times, joyous over victory, but never angry over defeat. We must love God, our parents, our home, our neighbors, our country and be loyal to all of these—good health is an obligation we owe them; we owe them the best that is in us. The teaching of Christianity, truth, honor, and a right ambition fits us for a

1936 Model Chevrolets Now on Display Are Creating Much Local Interest

New Master de luxe and Standard Chevrolets for 1936, embodying marked advances in styling, engineering and performance.

Completeness in equipment, in appointments, and in convenience is stressed in the company's 1936 announcement.

The Master de luxe, offered with either knee action or conventional springing, has been restyled in its most important appearance elements, notably by the adoption of a higher and narrower grille of distinctively original design, in combination with a new treatment of the hood louvers, new style headlamps mounted on the sides of the radiator shell, and new interior trim.

The lower priced Standard models have been completely redesigned in chassis and bodies. Last year the Standards differed materially both in appearance and in construction from the Masters; this year, the two lines are identical in all major features of styling, engineering, and performance, the chief difference being only a matter of wheelbase.

Outstanding among the many new features of both Master and Standard models for 1936 are perfected hydraulic brakes; improved engines having higher compression ratio (6 to 1), balanced carburetor, full length water jacketing and other changes resulting in better cooling and improved gasoline and oil economy; and chromed rust-prevention of fenders and running boards.

Front doors of all models of both lines are now hinged at the front. The solid steel turret top, exclusive last year with Master models, has been adopted this year for the Standard line also. Spoke-type pressed steel wheels, instead of wire wheels, are used on all Standard models.

Body interiors of Master models show marked advances in comfort and style. An important innovation is found in the design of front seating arrangement. Master coach and town sedan instead of the usual divided hinged front seat of the two models, a single seat cushion tends the full width of the permitting three passengers comfortably. The seat-back divided, the right side section hinged to fold forward over seat cushion to open a passage to the rear compartment.

Chevrolet's Standard model 1936, besides incorporating features that appear for the first on the Masters, take their place on the line as entirely new with new box girder chassis more powerful engine, wheelbase and larger bodies line of body types has been increased to seven by the addition of three models—the four-door sedan with built-in trunk, two-door town sedan with trunk, and the cabriolet.

In changing to perfected hydraulic brakes on both chassis, Chevrolet has adopted the principle of brake mechanism within the brake instead of the cable of floating cam formerly used. A master hydraulic cylinder with double opposed pistons to actuate each pair of articulated brake shoes.

On the Masters, brake are of composite construction comprising a cast iron rim pressed steel web. The surface is accurately machined to insure true concentricity, life, freedom from scoring more effective braking are claimed for cast iron outer surface of the drum chined in deep grooves that five ribs, to promote cooling

Pie-Throwing Comics Back On Screen

In the special short subject attraction, "Keystone Hotel," that will be shown on the Connellee programs for three days starting Monday, will be many of the well-known comedians that will recall pleasant memories of the silent picture era, when pie-throwing was the greatest laugh provoker on the screen. The cast of this short subject is composed of Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin, Marie Prevost, Hank Mann, and Ford Sterling, all famous stars of the Keystone Comedy, a decade ago. The attraction, "She Couldn't Take," starring George Raft and Joan Bennett will be the feature attraction on the program.

That Reminds Me (Continued from page 1) soon be completed by the Sinclair Oil company. It is located on the corner of Main and Daugherty, convenient on the highway and the general traveling public. It has transformed an unsightly corner into a pleasing asset to civic pride of the city. Sinclair products are known for their extra fine quality by those who use them for motoring. Announcement will soon be made as to the opening day according to officials who have been on the ground supervising the work.

A group of filling stations and garages are making a campaign to remind the general public that winter is laible to throw its fury into this section at most any time. It is decidedly important for all motorists to prepare their automobile for winter. Winter driving requires a different weight of oil for the protection of the motor. Anti-freeze is an important item to have it ready when the big freeze comes. Batteries should be looked after and if there is the least sluggishness noted it should be replaced with a new one. Radiators should be drained and cleaned and inspected for leaks. All these things are a stitch in time. When the first freeze hit Eastland in 1934 automobiles were stalled in every direction and many folks had to walk to work because the car was either froze up or something else was wrong that could have been prevented if negligence hadn't stepped in and ruined the thing. There is no reason for any motorists to go through the agony at the last minute of having an expensive process as any one of the garages and filling stations can do the work and do it right. Remember a careless negligent gesture can cost a lot of money, so this is the time to listen to the timely suggestion of these stations. They are proving a friend indeed provided the autoist will listen and do it now.
