A Hermit Comes Back to Topsy-Turvy Life

An old prospector came down from the mountains in Alaska the other day after having spent 35 unbroken years away up back of beyond. He got sick, at last, and someone took him to Fairbanks for treatment; and a brief news dispatch says that the old fellow was amazed and bewildered by the changes that had taken place during his long exile.

It occurs to us that if the changes in Fairbanks could startle this bearded hermit, a trip down into the states would absolutely paralyze him.

Never mind about the inventions and the gadgets that he would see for the first time—the autos and airplanes, the skyscrapers and radios, the concrete roads and moving pictures. Those would be the obvious, surface shocks. His real trouble would come when he began to find out how people are thinking and what they are trying to do.

Here was a man who went into seclusion just four years after Bryan's great free silver campaign of 1896. He probably supposed, when he went up there, that free silver was as dead as George Washington's horse; but he would find it livelier than even Bryan himself ever dreamed, being looked upon kindly in the national capital itself.

When this prospector went north, the United States was busy conquering the Filipinos; today he would find it equally busy setting the Filipinos free. If he remembered the growing murmur against the "trusts," back in 1900, he would see today's government feeling regretful because the supreme court wouldn't let it band the big combinations of industry together in a system designed to restrict output and maintain prices.

Remembering the anti-railroad agitation of the 1900s, he would see the government coming to the rescue of the railroads with millions upon millions of dollars. And then, of course, there would be the AAA for him to think about.

Probably it would all seem pretty confusing. If he looked abroad it would be even worse.

England, which he last saw descending on the South African Boers, preparing to wage war to protect the independence of an African nation . . . Russia under a despotism as rigid as ever, but turned upside down so that a different set of people is in Siberia . . . Germany minus its kaiser, with a former house painter ruling more autocratically than the kaiser ever dreamed of ruling . . . wouldn't that be enough to bewilder the most intelligent of hermits?

Indeed, the old gentleman could hardly be blamed for taking one long look at the nation and the world which he last saw 35 years ago, and then turning around and heading back for his Alaskan diggings at top speed. And he would probably be accompanied by the shouts of despairing stay-at-homes—

"Hey, buddy, is there room for any more of us up there?"

Security Body Begins to Protect Investor

If your enthusiasm got the better of your judgment back in 1929 and led you to buy copiously of some stock which is selling today at a tenth of its 1929 price, you might be interested in the case of Michael J. Meehan stock market speculator.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has ordered Meehan to answer charges that he had been manipulating an aircraft stock on the New York Curb Exchange in violation of the securities exchange act.

The order calls on him to show cause why he should not be expelled from the stock exchanges of which he is a member. Members of the SEC stated that they believe he has been entering "matching orders" in aircraft shares since last April, creating "actual and apparent active trading" for the purpose of boosting the security's price and inducing its purchase by others.

Whether the present charges are substantiated remains to be seen. The important thing is that the SEC is at last moving against traders who seek to manipulate the market—and, in that way, is offering a real protection for investors.

Such manipulation was a common practice back in the 1929 boom. When a new stock was offered to the public, a canny operator would be retained to make the stock look good. Frequently his activities would take the form of promoting a series of sales from his right-hand pocket to his left-hand pocket, so to speak.

The volume of trading in the stock would rise, the price would begin to go upward, and the innocent outsider, beholding only that which appeared on the surface, would edge himself up to the conclusion that here was an excellent buy.

Then the new issue would be marketed, and the operator's careful work would keep the market active and the price firm until the last of it had been disposed of. After which the operator's interest would cease—and if, as not infrequently happened, the price had been artificially maintained above the level warranted by the stock's intrinsic merits, the eager investors would presently find themselves holding a large and empty bag.

If the public has real assurance that stock prices really reflect actual values, instead of being produced by the clever work of insiders who are trying to sell something, the whole securities market will be in better shape.

Bond Is Requested In Murder Case

DALLAS, Nov. 19.—Attorneys for Buck and Jack Terry, Fort Worth brothers, under indictment on charges of murder and robbery for the poker game slaying of Robert Williams, filed an application to obtain their release from jail under bond. District Judge Grover Adams said the application for hearing would be heard Friday. Trial was set for Monday. Williams was killed last Aug. 11 during the holdup of a poker game in the woods near the Dallas-Denton county line. Fred Batson, of Cleburne, also is under indictment in companion cases of murder and robbery.

By HARRY GRAYSON

THE Michigan system may still be a punt, a pass, and a prayer. Sweet was there to do the kicking, and Evarhardus to lug the leather. There was the nucleus of a formidable line in Matt Patanelli, an all-round luminary at end with fingers glued for passes; Vierger, the tackle; Bissell and Schumann, guards, and Wright, the center. But the new men couldn't be so hot. The Smithers quickly gave Michigan men a pleasant surprise, however. Ritchie, handicapped by injuries, obtained his real start against Pennsylvania, when he put Michigan in position to score with his first run—a 30-yard end sweep. Ritchie is exceptionally fast, but has the knack of following his interference. Until he substituted for Renner at quarterback and played the entire second half against Pennsylvania, Barclay had had only 10 minutes of varsity experience—against Wisconsin.

Winning End Position as Soph Unusual at Ann Arbor
INJURIES kept Valpey out of the right end position until Pennsylvania was met, and he took the field against the Quakers slightly injured. That did not prevent him from turning in a brilliant game. If Valpey stands up, he'll do something unique in Michigan football history—win a regular berth in his sophomore year. Not even the polished Ivan Williamson could do that.

Sobsey increased the drive and speed of Michigan's forward wall in breaking in as a regular guard in the warfare with Wisconsin. Assigned to the important center position on defense and guard on the offense, Sobsey's play has been outstanding. Kramer's speed gives him a slight edge over Luby, a highly strung youngster, at tackle, but the latter has come in mighty handy once the pressure of the early game was relieved.

Michigan Regains Stride After Dismal Start
MICHIGAN STATE, Chicago, Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio, State, Minnesota, and Northwestern took keen delight in giving Michigan, mightiest of Western Conference powers down through the years, the boot last season. And when Michigan State repeated the dose in the opener this autumn, the great majority of Wolverine rooters were reconciled to the belief that Harry Kipke would require at least another year to rebuild.

Renner was back all in one

One of the provisions in the old age pension is that the petitioner may establish his age by a birth certificate. There is in the Bureau of Vital Statistics a birth certificate of a woman born in Texas in 1859. It stood up through the courts of Denmark. The grandchildren of that woman participated in the division of her grandfather's estate.

Those who expect to secure old age pensions should file their birth certificates now, but in handling those records, there are several things that you must remember:

1. Neither the state nor the city will pay the fee for these records.
 2. The expense must be borne by those wishing to file the certificates.
 3. There must be two affidavits attached to each certificate.
 4. The certificate must be written as a statement of the facts as they existed at the time of the event. If the physician is dead, the record may be signed by a relative acquainted with the facts at the time the event occurred.
 5. The person who signs the record must execute the first affidavit. (A)
 6. Some person not related by blood or marriage but who is acquainted with the facts must execute the second affidavit. (B)
- Full instructions and printed forms with affidavits attached will be furnished by your local registrar. Records on typewritten forms will not be accepted.
- When the record is filed, a certified or photostatic copy may be secured and attached to the petition for an old age pension as establishing the age of the petitioner.
- For instructions see Mrs. John Matthews, 212 North Walnut street, Eastland, Texas.

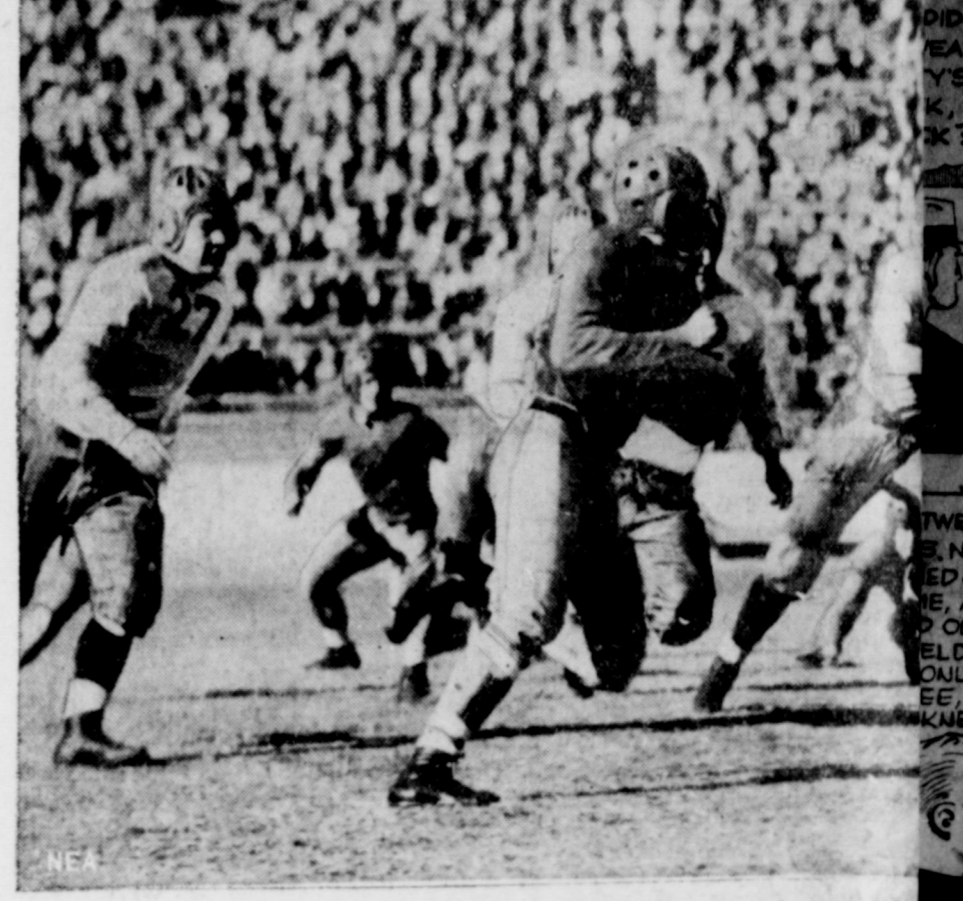

Abilene's Moser May Be Out For Eastland Game

ABILENE, Nov. 19.—Regular schedule of practice for the Abilene Eagles was resumed yesterday, after a layoff that covered most of last week following the defeat by Breckenridge's Buckaroos. The club was given complete rest Tuesday and Wednesday, and had only short workouts Thursday and Friday.

Within the next ten days Dewey Mayhew's squad will play two games closing its schedule. Friday the Eagles will be at Eastland, and Thanksgiving day they will come home to battle the Cisco Lobos. They probably will need a victory in both games to hold undisputed claim to second place in the final standings of the Oil Belt.

All members of the team expect Odell Herman, end, who played with a fever at Breckenridge, and Leonard Joeris, tackle, are well. They are still suffering with colds. Mayhew said that if Ray Moser by Robert Bruce © 1935 NEA Service, Inc.

The GOLDEN FEATHER

Jean Dunn delays her answer when Bobby Wallace asks her to marry him. At the Golden Feather night club she meets Sandy Harkins whose business connection is vague. Sandy introduces Bobby and Jean to a Mr. and Mrs. Lewis. Bobby sells some bonds for Lewis, who buys a car.

Larry Glenn, federal agent, is trailing Wingy Lewis, bank robber. He learns about the bond transaction and questions Bobby. Larry believes the car Lewis bought is armored. Bobby undertakes to find out.

Jean agrees to a secret engagement with Sandy. The bank of which her father is president is robbed, and Larry starts a search for the robbers.

Jean goes to see Sandy who has been injured. He and the Lewises are staying at a farmhouse. She soon finds herself a prisoner. The whole party leaves the farm.

Meanwhile Larry has discovered Jean is with the robbers. He and his men reach the house where the gang is. From an upstairs window Jean sees Larry. He calls out and is answered by gunfire. Jean faints.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

When Jean Dunn fainted, the last sounds she heard were the ear-splitting noises of a large-scale and sustained gun battle. When she emerged from her stupor, three or four minutes later, the sounds were still in her ears.

She lay on the floor of the bedroom, blinking at the darkness, as her senses returned. Someone had come into her room and was kneeling there, tense and motionless, for a moment; then his trigger finger moved, and the sharp rattat-tat of his weapon drowned out all the other noises.

Acid powder smoke was on her lips and in her eyes, as she lay there dully watching. The night had gone insane; it seemed as if she would always be in just this position, groveling on the floor while a nerve-destroying racket filled the air and shadowy figures moved about in the half-light on errands of violence and destruction.

The man had stopped firing, and dodged down below the window sill, his bulky weapon clutched in his hands, its muzzle touching her knee. The man blinked and saw her recumbent figure in the dusk.

"Hey!" he said hoarsely. "Who is it?"

Jean made no answer, and the man evidently took it for granted that she had been killed. He wasted no time on vain regrets, but slowly raised himself to peer out of the window. After a long look, he got to his knees again and raised his weapon to shoot; but before he could press the trigger he unexpectedly spun half around, teetered drunkenly on his knees, and then collapsed on his face. The machine gun lay beneath him; Jean found herself stupidly wondering if it wasn't an awfully uncomfortable thing to lie on—until, suddenly, she realized that the man was dead.

With this realization the lethargy that had held her seemed to fall away. Outside, somewhere, was Larry Glenn—and Larry represented safety, rescue, a return to the old life which, half an hour ago seemed forever out of her reach. No longer could she lie here in a half-stupor, listening to the clamor all about her in a drugged detachment. The fight that was going on was her fight. If the people in the house won, then she lost—everything that made life worth living.

She raised herself to her hands and knees; conquering her revulsion, she crawled to where the dead gunman lay. She wanted a weapon and she meant to have one.

Tugging at his shoulders, she rolled him over. The sub-machine gun lay there, vicious-looking—and she realized, altogether too late, even if she did take possession of it. Did this man carry a revolver? Jean bent closer. His coat had fallen back, and a shoulder holster was visible under his left armpit. She reached in, pulled out a revolver, and looked at it curiously.

At least, now, she was armed... and if worst came to worst, and Larry's fight failed—

There was a momentary lull in the firing; and in the lull Jean heard hurried footsteps coming along the hall. A voice called, "You, Spike, in there—what's the matter?"

She moved before she had time to think—one quick lunge that hid her in the shadows in the corner of the room. The door swung open and someone came in and went to where the dead man lay. Jean could see him squatting down, could hear him mutter something; then she saw him pick up the machine gun and move cautiously toward the window.

As he came into the moonlight, she saw his face. It was Red Jackson.

Jean never quite knew, afterward, how she managed to do what she did then. She could only remember raising the heavy revolver, gripping it with both hands, pointing it at the man at the window, shutting her eyes tightly, and squeezing the trigger. Then, for the second time that night, she collapsed in a faint.

his chief lieutenants. The rest of the gang are good for long terms in prison.

Jean was standing beside him, waiting for him to take her back to Dover. She laid her hand on his wrist and said, "Larry, how about—"

He looked down compassionately. "How about Sandy?" he asked softly. "Sandy's on his way to the hospital. He was shot four times, and—" He hesitated, then decided that she might as well be told bluntly. "He's dying. I doubt if he'll live until he reaches the hospital."

Jean made no reply, but looked at him soberly.

"Do you still care for him?" he asked, putting his arm about her shoulders. Her eyes met his without wavering, and she shook her head.

"No," she said evenly. "I don't think I ever did. I—oh, Larry, I was just insane, that's all—insane, I—"

She broke off abruptly, then added: "Of course, I—Larry, it's a shock to know that he's DYING. Don't think I'm heartless. But the man I thought I cared for—he died long before the fighting started."

"All over it?" said Larry.

"Yes," she said. "If I can ever forget what a fool I was—"

"Never mind about that," said Larry. "I blame myself. I should have warned you long ago."

"You tried to, but I wouldn't listen," she said.

"I could have made you listen," he said. "Don't blame yourself too much. Blame me, too."

He helped her into the car, shut the door, and went around to take his place behind the wheel.

"Now we'll highball for Dover," he said. "Your father's there waiting for you, and you'll have a good long rest, and then—"

"And then?" she said, as the car started off.

"And then," he said, smiling in the darkness, "I think I know a young man who'll be only too glad to help you try to forget about the whole business."

She shook her head slowly. "No, I've forfeited any claim I ever had on Bobby."

CARBON PEANUT COMPANY

AUSTIN, Tex.—Pecans, the favorite nut of thousands of people, may be a source of the spread of disease, according to E. C. Koerth, Director, Bureau of Food and Drugs. The pecan itself is not to blame, but the manner in which it is shelled and later handled is the cause for this warning.
The shelled pecan industry has assumed large proportions in the last few years and the shellers in other states have attacked the Texas product on the ground that the shelled nuts are not handled in a sanitary manner. The large packing houses that have the nuts shelled in their own packing plants maintain a satisfactory standard of sanitation. The evil of the shelled pecan industry is where pecans are taken into individual homes where no supervision is possible.
Many Mexicans, Negroes and a few whites do this work at home, with at times the neighbors coming in to help them out. It is possible for the communicable diseases to spread by shelled pecans, and for that reason it will be to the public's advantage to ask where the pecans were shelled and under what conditions. The food inspectors of the State Department of Health have investigated the home shelling of pecans for hire and report that many homes where this work is done are most unsanitary.
All persons engaged in shelling pecans should have a health certificate the same as any other food handler. The purchaser should demand that the pecans they buy shall have been shelled by such a person and handled in a sanitary manner and under supervision to lessen the chances for the spread of tuberculosis, colds, dysentery, typhoid, and other diseases.

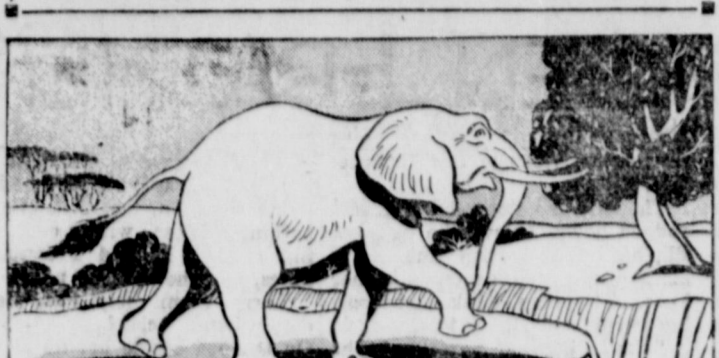

Hillsboro Junior College Will Have Big Homecoming
HILLSBORO, Tex.—Over 1,000 ex-students of the Hillsboro Junior College are expected to attend the Homecoming here November 22nd when the North Texas Agricultural College eleven of Arlington and the Hillsboro Junior College team meet in Hillsboro in a night game. As there are a number of students from this section who have attended the Hillsboro school and are attending now, it is expected that they will be on hand for the game.
A parade will be held at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon and all ex-students are invited to be in it. Merchants of towns where these former students or present students in the college reside are invited to enter floats and decorated cars.

20,000 Students Are Given Opportunity To Receive Jobs
AUSTIN. — Twenty thousand Texas boys and girls have been placed in schools or given an opportunity to go to work, in two months by the National Youth Administration, Lyndon B. Johnson, state director, said Tuesday night in a radio address at Austin.
Of this number, 5,700 were given part-time jobs in all the eligible colleges and universities of Texas. Approximately 9,000 have been given jobs to help defray incidental expenses in high school. Freshman colleges centers are being opened to care for 750 high school graduates who did not enter college this fall. "Two thousand young men and women from 16 to 25 have been called for work on WPA projects, in addition to the adult workers requisitioned, and NYA projects, designated exclusively for youth, are to be started soon."
"The NYA is investing this money in actual, productive work," Johnson said. "It is work which is good for the young people who are doing it, and is of real permanent value to your city, your town, your county, the whole commonwealth of Texas."
"No one gets anything for nothing under any of the NYA programs. The NYA has no dole to give out to young people. Any assistance they receive springs from their own desires to better themselves by their own initiative and determination. Whether a young-

English Traffic Is Peril to Pedestrians
By United Press
LONDON.—Pedestrians are by far the most frequent victims in road accidents in England.
This fact is revealed in the Chief Constable's official report just issued. Other surprising disclosures are that only 4 per cent of those killed are drivers of vehicles and that in 33 per cent of fatalities the speed of the vehicles is under 20 miles an hour.
The report covers the results of injuries into 1,500 fatal cases. Of that total, vehicles killed pedestrians in 842, and 403 deaths were due to collisions.
There were 918 accidents on straight roads or open bends with a good sight line.
While the percentage of pedestrians killed was 55.9, and bicycle riders 20 per cent, the percentage of drivers was only 4.8.
Of the pedestrians killed, 30.2 per cent were under 15, and 49.9 per cent were 55 and over.
The people who cause the accidents, according to the Chief Constable, are: pedestrians, 49.1 per cent; drivers, 25.1 per cent, and pedal cyclists, 15.9 per cent.
