AMARILLO MAN VICTIM OF BOMB IN CAR

By United Press
AMARILLO, Mar. 1.—Louis, 50, motor car dealer, was killed today by a bomb exploded in the engine of his automobile.
Sheriff Bill Adams revealed that a check recently was issued to carry a gun.
"I took to my life, was killed," Adams said, as his Amarillo police sought the mystery of the blast.
The blast tore the automobile through the family garage, razed the structure and other automobile in it.
The incident was reminiscent of a famous Amarillo case eight years ago when A. D. Payne, an attorney, placed a bomb in his automobile, killing her and severely injuring their 11-year-old son. Payne later committed suicide in the Potter county jail by blowing himself up.
The blast tore large pieces of flesh off his legs, chest and face. Physicians said he had only a slight chance of recovery. He also suffered serious internal injuries. Police searched for a customer who had a fight with Kock several weeks ago over payment on an automobile.

Indians Revealing Secrets of Music

By United Press
JUAREZ, Mexico.—Felipe Salvatierra, a Mexican, is revealing the secrets of a new instrument played by the Indians of southern Mexico. He also had friendship with natives who taught him their secrets in building the instrument. Today he is working on his new and largest marimba, a kind of primitive xylophone, that has taken him more than a year to build.
The information he gathered to construct the marimba, a percussion instrument consisting of a series of graduated wooden bars and sounded by striking with small wooden mallets, pertained to carving sticks of wood selected for their sounding quality and making the long, queerly shaped tubes that hang below the keys.
A little hole placed at the bottom of the resonance tube is the most important secret the Indians showed him, Salvatierra related. A tiny piece of membrane stretched across the hole vibrates when the key is struck and makes the air in the tube hum with a hollow, piano-like tone foreign to a given mode or key.
His newest and largest marimba, the sides carved by hand in deep relief from Mexican mahogany, is constructed of Ormange wood. It is a hard, heavy wood he had sent from southern Mexico. The first marimba used by the Indians was constructed of this material.
The keys, all hand carved, must be just the right length and weight.
Tuning is the most difficult task. Next hardest is the making of the long pipes below the keys.
Sloping downward, small at the top and large and pointed at the bottom, is the little hole near the tip of the tube that is the most important part of the instrument.
An impulse is sent down the tube when the wooden key is struck with a mallet. Like an ear drum, the little membrane catches the vibration and buzzes to make the pipes hum. The instrument would give just a dull plunk without this little hole and membrane.
For each note there is a tube and key. His newest instrument has four positions, base, melody, harmony and piccolo.
Salvatierra and his three sons, who have already made several marimba concert tours, play with two mallets in each hand making a total of 16 hammers on the same marimba at the same time.

Nazis Step Backward to Try a Clergyman

Probably as much adverse criticism is directed at the American judicial system, the manner of conducting trials in the United States, as at any one division of the governmental system.

The courts are scolded for their ponderous slowness, the endless red tape, dockets which are years behind schedule, the blatant displays of showmanship in criminal trials and the peculiar tactics of attorneys before a jury.

All these criticisms have a basis of truth and some of them often are more than justified. But with all its faults and all its public spectacles, how near the acme of perfection our courts seem when compared with trial procedure in Nazi Germany.

There, in Berlin, the Rev. Martin Niemoller, Protestant minister, is on trial accused of sedition. Rev. Niemoller is no ordinary pastor, or better, no average pastor. During the World War he commanded a German U-boat. He was repeatedly decorated for valor. He is a tall, rigid figure, uncompromising and courageous in one of Berlin's richest Confessional pastorates. In his congregation are former military leaders of the old monarchy, army officers of the present period, Storm Troop commanders, bankers, industrialists and diplomats. There is no better-known nor more influential pastor in all Germany.

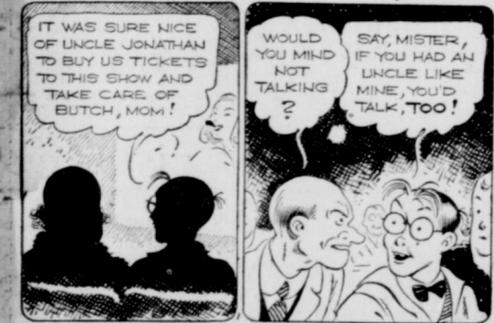

Rev. Niemoller has been arrested before, but this time he is tried on the sedition charge and the picture of his trial will amaze those unfamiliar with the Nazi methods.

His attorneys were barred from the courtroom, but later permitted to re-enter. All representatives of the church were likewise barred, but this rule was suspended to allow one Confessional clergyman to sit in the courtroom and hear the evidence. He had to take a special oath of silence and will be watched by secret political police to prevent his informing Confessional Church leaders of what goes on.

All possible measures have been taken to prevent the German public or the outside world from learning anything about the testimony except through official government bulletin. And contact with foreign correspondents will be constituted as an act of treason.

These star chamber trials in Germany are a step backward into the middle ages and the inquisition. Trials in the United States may fringe on the ridiculous now and then, but it can never be said the defendant doesn't have a chance to tell his side of the story and get it judged—by jury and public alike.

Reorganization

A revised bill by Senator Byrnes of South Carolina empowers the President to reorganize, and coordinate government agencies. It was reported to the Senate by special committee on government reorganization. The bill would establish a cabinet-headed Department of Welfare, a National Planning Board, replace the Civil Service Commission with a Civil Service Administration, replace the Comptroller General with an Auditor General. It would give power to the President to coordinate functions with a department but not abolish in its entirety functions of any executive department or major agency.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Because in these days one can never be quite sure what the administration is going to do next, there is only one prospective signpost which will point to whatever road Roosevelt means to take in the up-until-recently flourishing anti-monopoly attack.

Someone will have to be appointed to replace Robert H. Jackson when he steps from the assistant attorney generalship in charge of anti-trust cases into the office of solicitor general. Mr. Jackson displayed an uncommon amount of interest in strengthening and enforcing the anti-trust laws, although hampered in the latter effort by lack of funds and court-weakened statutes.

If Jackson's place is filled by a man whose interest in breaking up illegal business combinations is doubtful, the New Deal anti-monopoly crusade may be considered to have withered and died. General Counsel James L. Fly of TVA is the man receiving the most vigorous backing of the New Deal's would-be trust-busters.

Italy Sets 1940 As Year for Crude Oil Supply at Home

By JOSEPH D. RAVOTTO
United Press Staff Correspondent

ROME, Feb. 23—Italy has reached the half-way mark in its drive to be free from dependence upon foreign refined gasoline and lubricating Libya.

Italy expects to be completed products by 1940 when two large oil refineries are completed in Bari and in Libya.

Last November the most modern refinery in Europe was inaugurated at Naples. It cost $5,000,000 to construct. Planned and built by American engineers and specialists it required two years of high pressure work to complete. Although Italian money is invested it is controlled by Socony Vacuum.

The refinery is equipped to produce aviation gasoline and has the largest capacity in Italy for lubricating oils.

Although the plant is equipped for a much larger output, it is licensed to produce annually 60,000 tons of motor gasoline, 50,000 tons of oil for diesel engines, 10,000 tons of lubricating oil and 10,000 tons of aviation gasoline.

Experts estimated that the plant is capable of producing 40 per cent beyond its licensed limits. With additional equipment it will be able to double its capacity of motor gasoline, bringing it to a total annual production of about 170,000 tons.

The other three refineries are the government controlled AGIP at Venice for motor gasoline, the Shell at La Spezia and a small Standard Oil of New Jersey plant near Milan for the refining of domestic crude oils.

These four plants are capable of producing more than half of Italy's peacetime requirements. With the completion of the two new refineries under construction, Italy will become entirely independent of foreign refineries by 1940.

These two plants will double the production of the Naples refinery. Construction on both refineries, larger and more modern than anything yet seen in Italy, was begun in 1936 through AGIP.

One is located at San Cataldo, suburb of the Adriatic port of Bari, while the other is situated in Libya.

They are equipped with the hydrogenation process to permit the refining of the low grade Albanian crude oil. The existing refineries cannot handle Albanian oil because of its exceptionally low quality. Both are also equipped to handle Albanian shale from which some oil is extracted.

Italy is unusually desirous of importing the raw material because it can be transported easier in its own tankers and can be had with much more facility from any of the countries producing oil.

The running of this oil in Italy will give employment to additional thousands of workers who otherwise would be jobless. Construction of new tankers and crews to man them will take care of thousands of others.

Although the decree forbidding importation of all finished gasolines and lubricating oils will not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1939, none of these products have been permitted to enter the country since July, 1937.

This has been made possible only because of the tremendous stores of oil which were accumulated during the Italo-Ethiopian campaign. By the time they are fully consumed, Italy hopes to have the new refineries in working order.

Lavish use of gasoline is discouraged in Italy. A new tax was imposed last November on motorists, increasing the price between 20 and 25 per cent, depending on the region. This has had the desirable effect—from the government point of view—of curtailing consumption.

New Drug Used to Cure Mental Ills

By United Press
ST. LOUIS—Dr. F. M. Grogan, city sanitarium superintendent, has revealed that six dementia praecox patients have been receiving injections of metrazol in an experiment to find a simpler and more effective treatment for "split-personality" than insulin shock.

Metrazol, a drug, produces a state similar to epilepsy which lasts from 2 to 10 minutes. It is injected directly into a vein, Dr. Grogan explained, and its effect is produced by irritation of the nervous system.

The injections were begun several weeks ago. Treatments are administered twice weekly for 15 weeks. Several of the patients have already shown decided improvement.

Chief advantages of the metrazol treatment over insulin shock are its economy, simplicity and more favorable reactions, according to Dr. Grogan. He pointed out that one doctor, aided by a nurse, can administer more than 25 treatments in a few hours. He said insulin shock is far more expensive and its reactions many times unfavorable to the patient's health.

The treatments will be extended to several hundred cases of dementia praecox in the sanitarium as soon as relatives grant approval, Dr. Grogan said.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
POLLY CHEESEY, heroine; stranded in London when war breaks out.
JERRY WHITEFIELD, hero; the Yankee who sees her through.
CABELL BANKS, privateer captain.

Yesterday skimming across the ocean, dodging British vessels, Polly says "good night" to Jerry, who is on watch. She is fearful.

CHAPTER XXIV

GOOD weather held. The Gray Gull was cutting the deep green water of the Atlantic now as if she ruled it. Fear gave way to a feeling of well being, rousing whispers turned to shouts. The sailors sang chanteys as they climbed the shrouds and waded down the deck. At night they told tales of the seven seas, wonderful to hear.

A score of the crew claimed to be excellent gunners, and these men boasted of what they could do to an English brig. They grumbled a good deal at their inactivity.

"Bide your time!" Cabell told them shortly.

It was Jerry who was more explicit. He was not the sort of officer who believed in hiding plans from the crew. From experience and memory he knew how such a course breeds uneasiness and discontent. Though seasickness was rather an insensitive lot, he knew they could develop the nerves of aged animals when kept in ignorance of what they were to face. And so he explained plainly:

"We'll hold the course we've taken and try to enter Chesapeake Bay. We'll run up the Potomac if possible. Then Captain Banks will go into Washington and get our Orders in Council from President Madison. Without our papers, we're drifting dead-wood. With them, we can go after English merchantmen and keep the booty. There'll be an honest division of booty, you understand. When we harass the enemy far our country, we benefit ourselves."

As a matter of fact, Jerry gave little thought at this stage of the game to booty, yet he knew that part that prize money would play with a crew; it would be the means of paying them and regarding them on to a valor that patriotism could not always inspire. This was the private officer's code, and Jerry was honest to gloss it over with a shining idealism. In time, he would be too to be thinking of the prize dollars and captured ships, full of tea and silks and dainties. The thought disturbed and saddened him.

POLLY kept much to her cabin, but when Jerry permitted it, she would go on deck with him or with Cabell and watch what went on there. The sailors were respectful and agreeable to her and seemed to attach no omen of ill luck to her presence on the ship.

When she wondered at this, Cabell explained it. "I weeded out the superstitious ones to save trouble later on. Every time I interviewed a sailor I said, 'My first mate's taking his wife, this crossing. Furthermore, we've got a black cat in the galley.' Only one man refused to come aboard and he was a Portuguese."

Polly laughed at sharing status with the black galley cat. "It's a fine voyage," she told Cabell. "I'm not afraid of anything any more, now that we're getting close to home."

Cabell Banks made no answer. His own apprehension, like Jerry's, was growing keen again. It was time to cross paths with some British merchantmen coming up from Jamaica. The Caribbean was a rest for war sloops also; these, they reasonably suspected, were being sent north to close American ports.

That evening well after sunset the two lookouts riding at the mastheads yelled down in unison, "Sail, ho!"

"Where away?" the cry went up. And the answer: "To larboard!"

Jerry climbed the shrouds with his binoculars. He could, by that time, make out two sails, then three, then four, then "God knows how many more!" His voice held a sort of awe.

"He climbed down to the deck. 'It's a convoy,' he said to Cabell and the gaping crew. 'Merchantmen, from the looks of them.' Cabell climbed to have a look. 'They're bearing down on us fast,' he called, 'and there's a war schooner herding them!'"

"We'll run for it," Jerry decided aloud. And to the bosun: "Pipe all hands!" Suddenly he remembered that Cabell Banks stood beside him, and Cabell Banks was "the captain of the Gray Gull. 'I beg your pardon!'" he said in confusion.

"It's all right," Cabell replied when the whistle had ceased drilling. "In danger let the best man take over. . . . Or shall we try it together? . . . Take the helm. I'll climb for another look."

Jerry turned he saw Polly standing, wide-eyed, near a companion ladder. "Go below and stay there!" he shouted at her. He would not have dared disobey, for Jerry Whitefield seemed suddenly a stern stranger to her. They manned the sweeps then and wore ship; and when proper sail had been crowded on under Jerry's shouted directions, the Gray Gull fell away from the convoy and ran frantically north.

The convoy ships kept to their course, but the big warship, as if out of sheer deviltry, gave chase. It was like an angry hen that would punish a sparrow for looking at her chicks.

Jerry at the wheel laughed and bared his teeth. Cabell, clinging to the ropes above, laughed too and gave news of the frigate's progress. "If night falls, sooner or later we'll lose her!" he shouted.

The Gray Gull seemed to be panting before the great spread wings that pursued her. Under those menacing wings there would be two decks pierced with long guns, Cabell calculated, and a crew of 400 men. There would be officers in gold braid, important young midshipmen, surgeons to dress wounds, carpenters to repair damage to masts and hull. . . .

Jerry Whitefield too was seeing those things as he carried the Gray Gull before the sloop of war; he was seeing, as well, the grating where a man could be tied and lashed at a captain's whim. Under his wind-whipped sea-coat his scarred back crept in a sort of angry frenzy while his thoughts seethed like the foam that spread from their prow.

"I'm like a drunken man," he thought, and was suddenly ashamed. There came to him a saying of his little New England mother: "No man does his best when the devil's stirring him."

With a super effort of will Jerry laid his devil. He who was free under God's sky should not hate like a man in a dungeon. Perhaps no one should hate anything—not even British naval officers.

As he accepted this great truth and let it wash over him like a wave he saw his hands grow steady on the wheel. His body relaxed and he felt an influx of strength. It was an "experience," and he could not account for it. It was his own, never to be shared.

When night was almost fallen and one bright star stood in the northwest, the muzzling sails were no longer to be seen. Jerry and Cabell held council and there was jubilation aboard the Gray Gull. They wore ship again and sailed southwest, for they were a little off their course. . . .

Jerry wondered if Polly was frightened. She had been at the back of his mind all the while, as is a precious burden one must carry safely home. He hoped she had kept the little dog beside her, for cheer.

Motor Industry Pledges Support to Used Car Week

DETROIT, Mar. 1.—The motor industry today pledged its full support to National Used Car Exchange Week, the industry's cooperative drive to stimulate used car sales and start the wheels of recovery in motion. The program opens next Saturday, March 5.

Uniting in statements announcing the purposes of the industry's program were Edsel Ford, President of Ford Motor Company, K. T. Keller, President of the Chrysler Corporation, and William S. Knudsen, President of General Motors Corporation.

"The Ford Motor Company and its dealers," said Mr. Ford, "are solidly back of National Used Car Exchange Week. We are determined to do everything in our power to make it a success."

"The fact seems to be generally admitted that the automobile industry was the bellwether in the 1933 to 1937 recovery. We are confident that this new united effort to start things moving again will achieve its purpose."

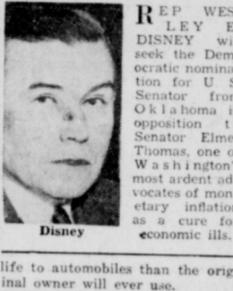

"The great contribution the automobile industry made to the nation in its efforts to throw off the last depression was its demonstration of courage in the face of adversity. That same fearlessness is evident today as a united industry moves forward to start the wheels rolling again."

"In the Ford organization we have an abounding faith in our country's future. We are passing through a period of readjustment. When that phase has been completed, we are certain that the country again will swing ahead in true American fashion."

Mr. Keller emphasized the unusual use of car values available in the present market, at the outset of the spring selling season. He said:

"Chrysler Corporation and its distributors and dealers are cooperating enthusiastically in National Used Car Exchange Week. Both engineering advances and improvements in manufacturing methods in recent years have resulted in giving far more strength and safety and longer

William does not know all this, because he is only a few days old, but he has a strange family puzzle he will have to solve later.

It started when a Kely man, Alex Fotheringham, a widower with family, married Mrs. Robb, a widow, also having a family. Then Mrs. Robb's son, William (baby William's father) married Fotheringham's daughter, Agnes and Fotheringham's son, Andrew married Mrs. Robb's daughter, Bessie.

Alex Fotheringham, Jr., was born to find himself the half-brother to all the other members of the family and brother-in-law to two of them. He is at the same time uncle on both sides of the family to the four children of Mr. and Mrs. William Robb.

There should be no defective cars on America's roads. The industry will continue its work for economy of operation and safety in motor cars, buying with low cost and easy terms of payment.

"America has shown the world its progress in motor car transportation, let us show that we can furnish safe transportation. Spring is almost here, and the cars that have been laid up during the winter because of poor condition are now ready to be traded. The industry wants to get these cars. It wants to furnish transportation at low cost and replace inefficient units in a way that will make the purchasers satisfied and able to cover the road."

Mr. Knudsen asserted the industry's determination to make available to the American public the latest developments in transportation. He said:

"General Motors Corporation and its dealers are happy to endorse National Used Car Week, sponsored by the entire industry. With the progress made in reconditioning used cars, and the guarantee which used cars offer for the protection of the buyers, there should be no reason why cars which cost more to maintain than what is fair, should continue to operate on the road to the detriment of general safety. LEN'EN abstinence is a personal matter. But food for your family and your friends is of almost public interest. Meatless days from now until the day of the Easter bonnet need not be trials on the palate and the cook. To prove the point, try a brilliant combination of noodles, cheese and shrimp with tomatoes and fresh asparagus—all ingredients being canonically correct.

Noodle Cheese Ring (Serves 6)

Two cups boiled noodles, 1-2 cup melted butter, 3 beaten eggs, 1 cup grated sharp cheese, 3-4 cup milk, 1 teaspoon Worcester-shire sauce, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1-2 teaspoons finely grated onion. Salt to taste.

Mix above ingredients together, being sure that the mixture is well seasoned. Butter a one-quart ring mold and fill with noodle mixture. Place in pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until done (about 45 minutes). Loosen noodle ring around edges with a silver knife before turning out.

Fresh Shrimp a la Newburg (Serves 6)

Three-fourths quart cooked and cleaned whole fresh shrimp (or quick-frozen shrimp) sprinkled with 1 teaspoon onion juice, 1-2 teaspoon paprika, salt, pepper. Melt 3-4 cup butter in pan, add seasoned shrimp and saute. Remove shrimp and sprinkle 1-1-3 teaspoons lemon juice.

Sauce

Melt butter. Add flour and cook well. Heat together the shrimp stock, the cream and the milk, and then add to the first two, blending well together. Cook for 10 minutes. Remove from stove. Add egg yolks, slightly beaten, and sherry. Add sauteed shrimp and more seasoning if desired.

Service

Place noodle ring in center of large platter. Fill the center of the ring with shrimp a la Newburg, allowing some to run over two sides, as in the photograph. At each end of the platter place three grilled tomato halves. On top of each tomato place three small cooked asparagus tips, cut the same length as the width of the tomato.

Garnish the platter with fresh watercress.

SPORT GLANCES . . . . By Grayson

NEW YORK.—Packing his duds for his annual pilgrimage to St. Petersburg, Col. Jacob Ruppert reveals how he once threatened to make a laughing stock of the American League which he eventually made the more powerful of the two majors.

Ruppert told Byron Bancroft Johnson that he would build a park at Madison Avenue and 102nd Street on a lot 200 by 600. "It will accommodate 1500 people," he advised the fiery president of the junior loop. "I'll play to capacity every day, and every ball hit will be a home run."

Ruppert was having real trouble with Charles A. Stoneham at the Polo Grounds. He was at loggerheads with Johnson in regard to the Carl Mays case. The Yankees purchased Mays from the Boston Red Sox while the submarine hurler was under suspension. When Johnson refused to permit the Yankees to pitch Mays, Ruppert in the Supreme Court obtained a permanent injunction from Judge Robert Wagner.

This controversy had considerable to do with the installation of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis as Baseball Commissioner following the expose of the Black Sox scandal in 1920. Ruppert became one of the leaders in the war against Johnson and a strong supporter of Landis.

It was when Johnson hinted dis-franchisement unless Ruppert constructed an American League park in New York that the colonel pointed out that there were no rules to stop him from building his miniature park.

Ruppert long wanted to buy the Giants. He offered Andrew Freedman $450,000 for the club in 1902. To this day, the brewer cannot understand why John T. Brush was dragged in from the midwest, and given the franchise at the same figure.

Colonel Jake hadn't seen the Yankees play a half dozen times when he bought a half interest in them in the fall of 1915.

Ruppert had never met Capt. Til Huston until he was introduced to him at a dinner at the old Claridge. They formed their partnership in 30 minutes. Each put up $225,000.

"I must have been looney to have tossed $225,000 into the Yankee franchise of that day," smiles the brewer. "Having no park and no players to speak of, we were at the mercy of the other major league clubs."

WHEN Stoneham jacked up the Polo Grounds rental to $100,000 a year, Ruppert told the Giant owner that he would build unless he obtained a more reasonable deal.

Stoneham laughed at him, but up went Yankee Stadium. The property at River Avenue and 161st Street cost $650,000, and had to be filled in. A street had to be closed.

By the time the Yankee Stadium was completed in 1922, Huston suspected that he was putting too many eggs in one basket, and wanted to step out. Ruppert bought him out for $1,200,000, so the captain did quite all right on his original investment.

You know the rest. Major Huggins. . . . And along came Ruth.

LET'S KNOW TEXAS — TEXANS

WILL H. MARX'S AUTO IN TEXAS

In this column answers will be given to queries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Marx, Austin, Texas.

Q. Who was the first to draw a black bean at Hacienda Salado?

A. Capt. William Mosby Eastland, for whom Eastland county was named, who was in command of a company at Mier and was the only officer who drew a black bean. He was born in Woodford county, Ky., in 1806; came to Texas in 1834 and located near the present town of La Grange; served as a lieutenant at San Jacinto; organized his Mier expedition; organized his Mier expedition company in Fayette county.

Q. Who was John Rufus Alexander, who gave an account of the Mier Expedition to the time of the escape of the Texans at Hacienda Salado?

A. He was born March 28, 1817 in what is now Washington County, Mo.; came to Texas about 1838 and settled in Brazoria county; answered call to defend Mexican invasions in 1842 and was among those who refused to return back near Laredo; was captured at Mier; escaped at the break at Salado and made his way back to Texas with four others; settled near Round Top, Fayette county, in 1843; was a member of Texas State Troops during Civil War; sheriff of Fayette county, 1869-70; became totally blind in 1881; dictated story of his Mier Expedition experience to his son, Rufus M. Alexander; died May 29, 1908, and was buried near Round Mountain, Blanco county, where he was living at the time of his death.

Q. What disappointment did the Texans meet at Laredo?

A. They expected and had prepared for an attack there on the Cos forces, but found only a few old men, women and children, who gave them a hospitable welcome. Many were disgusted because the Texans were allowed to sack the town, with little or no effort at restraining them.

He was a cousin of Nicholas Mosby Dawson, who was killed in the fight at Salado creek, with whom he came to Texas.

Q. With their fight apparently so much in their favor, why did the Texans surrender at Mier?

A. The Mexican officers asked for a parley and informed the Texans that large reinforcements were approaching, and promised that if the Texans would lay down their arms then, they would be treated as honorable prisoners of war, kept near the border and exchanged at the first opportunity; otherwise they would have to take the consequences of humiliating defeat.

FLYING BLIND

In thick weather, it is often necessary for airplanes to "fly blind" . . . to depend on instruments rather than vision and charted landmarks. Almost uncanny in their accuracy, such instruments are nevertheless second choice in the navigation of the air.

Shoppers who trot off down-town to the stores without first consulting the advertisements of those same stores are likewise flying blind. And needlessly so. The advertisements in this paper are put here for your guidance, for your safe landing in the Ports of Value.

Study them in comfort of your home . . . map your course before you put on your hat and drop the latch-key into your handbag. Compare the products offered, their prices, their general advantages. Then set out on your shopping-trip prepared for what you will see, what you will wish to have sent home.

Let the advertisements serve as guiding beacons of buying. It's the smart thing to do.

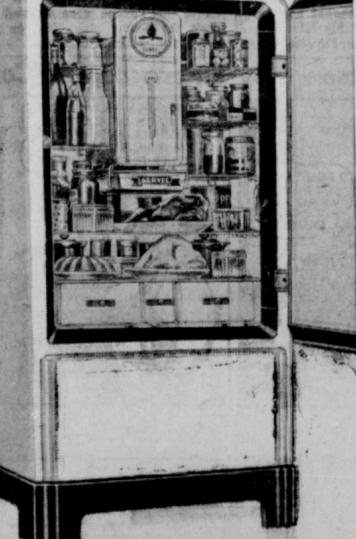

What Owners Say Is What Counts! Here's what MRS. AUBREY KENNEDY, Brownwood, Texas, thinks about her kerosene-operated Servel Electrolux: "Everything you told me about what my Servel Electrolux would be and do for us has proven true—only you didn't tell half the story. Its operation has been very economical, burning only about a half gallon of kerosene per day during the hottest weather last summer. It keeps food, milk, cream, butter, leftovers, etc., perfectly. It has never failed to give more than an ample supply of ice cubes. I would not part with my Servel Electrolux."

From MRS. J. L. BRUMBLOW, Elia-ville, Texas, comes this statement on her gas-operated Servel Electrolux: "I don't believe anyone could invest money in anything that is more beneficial to the whole family than an Electrolux. It will save enough on the ice bill and the foods left over from day to day to pay its way. You can be assured that the foods will be kept wholesome and delicious."

"It provides ice at any time it is needed and it will keep foods for a long period of time without them spoiling. The operating cost is so small that it is hardly noticed on the meter. No home with growing children should be without an Electrolux because of the need of wholesome foods for children."

SERVEL ELECTROLUX THE Gas REFRIGERATOR (OR KEROSENE)

3¢ a Day—to keep Sickness Away

THE one piece of home equipment the whole family enjoys is a Servel Electrolux—the Gas or Kerosene refrigerator. It is the only one that more than pays for itself. In cream every day, if you like. Delicious frozen salads, frozen desserts of all kinds—yet your Servel Electrolux operates for a little as 2 or 3 cents per day! And even more important than the pleasure is the safety it provides. Did you know that 70 per cent of all sickness is caused by what you eat or drink? Maybe you can't taste or smell the spoilage—but that doesn't mean it's not there! Can you afford to take chances when Servel Electrolux protection costs a little as 2 or 3 cents per day? And while it protects, it saves. Saves leftovers. Lets you buy bargains. Lets you buy refrigerator—different from all others. Its freezing unit has no moving parts. Nothing to wear. Nothing to make noise. That's what makes Servel Electrolux an investment—one that more than pays for itself. Or—put it this way: You're paying for a Servel Electrolux now—why not own one? Why not NOW?

Different From All Others—No Other Refrigerator Can Give You All These Advantages: (1) Any home, anywhere, can enjoy it—runs on gas or kerosene. (2) No moving parts—no wear, no noise and constant, steady cold—no starting, stopping. (3) Defrosts automatically. (4) Plenty of ice—just the average family's daily needs. (5) Ice tray grids of stainless steel—A hip of your thumb gets the ice cube out. (6) One piece seamless shell—a box as good as the freezing unit.
