Living Within Income Scorned By Europe

Old-fashioned ideas about living within your income aren't very popular these days, so perhaps it would be better to say nothing about them. But a thoughtful man must wonder, now and then, just what is going to be used for money when it comes time to settle for all the wars and near-wars that are shaking the air in Europe.

Italy, of course, will meet the showdown the soonest. Even before the war in Ethiopia began, the Italian government was spending more than it took in. Its budget has been unbalanced for several years. It has a debt of some 107 billion lire, dating back to before the Ethiopian campaign, and now, of course, in the process of enormous expansion.

In addition, Italy's gold is rapidly draining away. John T. Flynn points out that the Bank of Italy had $554,000,000 in gold a year ago compared with $370,000,000 today. In addition, there has been a substantial unfavorable trade balance for many years.

In view of these facts, it is hard to see how an expensive overseas war is going to help get back to a position which an ordinary business man would call anything like solvent.

Yet Italy does not stand alone in a fix of this kind. England is spending heavily on armaments, and unless all signs fail will start a prodigious program of new naval construction within a few months. Yet England has a debt of approximately $32,000,000,000, her people labor under the heaviest taxation known to mankind. English currency has gone off the gold standard, and a default of $4,000,000,000 on the debt to America still stands on the record. How on earth is a nation in such straits going to finance an expensive new preparedness program—to say nothing of an actual war, if worst comes to worst?

And if England's position is odd, how about Germany's? Here is a nation which has defaulted on innumerable foreign bond issues, and which is moving heaven and earth to get its national books into something which at least resembles balance; yet Germany also is spending enormous sums on rearmament, and apparently plans to continue doing so for a long time to come.

In lesser degree, the same things are true of most of the other nations of Europe. In the face of great financial stringency they continue not merely to carry their already burdensome military expenditures, but to plan new ones.

It is old-fashioned and unpopular, nowadays—in America as in other lands—to expect a government to help wondering just what is going to happen when the time finally comes for the heavy spenders to lay some cash on the line.

Why Not a Davis Mountain Highway?

Why not a Davis Mountain highway? Why not prompt recognition of the concurrent resolution adopted by the legislature and signed by the government? This resolution urges the state highway commission to take all proper steps to secure the cooperation of all agencies of the federal government in making provision for the use of unemployed labor in completing the Davis Mountain State Park highway so that the area which it traverses may be utilized by the public for recreation purposes to the largest possible extent with the least possible delay. Moreover, the Texas Planning commission is also urged to cooperate in all proper and practical ways to secure the accomplishment of this end.

Fourteen miles of the highway has long since been completed and is in use, extending from Fort Davis to Mount Locke, on which the great observatory of the University of Texas and the University of Chicago is located. The concurrent resolution said "It is highly advisable that the people of Texas, with the least possible delay, should utilize the Davis Mountain area, comprising literally the highest and most beautiful mountains between the Rockies and the Alps for recreation purposes." Incidentally the Davis Mountain highway is 75 miles long. It is one mile above sea level and is unsurpassed for scenic beauty and climate suited for both summer and winter recreation. It should be made one of the summer and winter showplaces of the Lone Star state and available to the vast armies of tourists who will cover the highways and byways of Texas during the Centennial year.

Local Option at Beaumont Sustained by Judge Shivers

Judge R. A. Shivers of Jefferson county overruled motions attacking the validity of the local option law of that county. An adverse ruling on the local option law by the court would have opened the county to sale of hard liquors and this question was more interesting generally than the return of 200 cases of whisky seized by Texas rangers last summer. The court ruled that the election of 1919 was entirely legal if accepted "as such at that time."

It is to be regretted that a liquor control act was not completed and sent to the governor at the close of the first called session. There will be a tremendous loss of revenue to the state—and rich fees for lawyers and clogged dockets for the courts.

NEW YORK

Paris Expecting Three New Operas

By United Press

PARIS.—If all the promises of Paris' two subsidized opera houses materialize, the French capital has an interesting season ahead.

George Enesco, the Roumanian violinist, expects to see an opera from his pen and that of Andre Pernet, on a poem—libretto of Edouard Fleg, produced for the first time at the Opera "Oedipus."

Another probable newcomer is M. d'Olone's "The Samaritan Girl," for which Edmond Rostand has provided the libretto. Finally "Penelope," by Gabriel Faure, is expected to take the boards toward the end of the season.

Among operas of the standard repertoire that the Opera has allowed to slumber for a year or more, but which will be revived during the year are "The Huguenots," "The Magic Flute," "Parsifal," and "Tristan and Isolde," formerly a specialty of the Opera-Comique.

The Saint-Saens centenary, at present deluging Paris with a heavy dose of this composer's music, accounts for an exceptional number of performances of "Samson and Delilah," a standby of the Opera, together with a lesser known work of the same composer "Javotte."

The Opera ballet will also be busy. Last year's successful innovations will be repeated—Milhaud's "Salad," Pierre's "Images" and ballet-master Serge Lifar's "musical ballet," "Icarus," which is danced to percussion instruments only. The next step in Lifar's plan, restoring music to the musicless dance—that is, composing the choreography first and having the score written to fit it—will be seen in Lifar's "The Naked King," for which J. Francaix has done the music.

COUGAR ATTACKS 2 YOUTHS

By United Press

WALDFORT, Ore.—A cougar attacked and severely scratched two youths who were sleeping along a trail in the mountains. The young men on a prospecting trip, frightened the animal away with a flashlight.

Other new ballets promised are Gaubert's "Alexander the Great," Deodat de Severac's "Adonis," Samuel-Rousseau's "Promenades in Rome," and George Migot's "Confessions and Promises." Two of the classic ballets of the Opera's standard repertoire, "Giselle," and "Coppelia," will be entirely remounted.

The Opera-Comique has a long list of promised and tentative innovations. Among the newcomers are Raymond Bonheur's "Malva," Sylvre's "Ninety-Three," Michel-Maurice Levy's "Mayflower," and a still unnamed opera which Georges Hue is composing to a book by Marcel Prevost.

According to an English tutor, American do not know to enjoy leisure. For instance go to English lecturers.

Recently she celebrated her 101st birthday. She is a little disgusted with the modern girl, who "swills gin and sucks on cigarettes."

"It's not her duty to gallivant around," Mrs. Davis says. "A girl's duty is to make an advantageous marriage and raise children."

Automobiles? They're the bunk, she believes. "It's on their account that everyone's in a lethal hurry," Mrs. Davis declares. "In my day we saw a little country, but really saw it. Today you try to see a lot, and fail."

Deportation of the "woman in red" teaches that, in America, anything of that color may be waved, but not worn.

WHAT THE MILDNESS OF CAMELS MEANS TO FAMOUS AVIATORS

Lieutenant Commander Frank Hawks, U.S.N.R., famous holder of 214 speed records and the Harmon Trophy, says: "I've been flying for 19 years and smoking Camels almost as long. Making speed records tests the pilot as well as his plane. Camels never make me jumpy or bother my physical condition in any way. As the athletes say, Camels are so mild they don't get the wind. And I've found they never upset my nerves. Camel must use choicer tobaccos."

"Camels don't get your Wind" Athletes say

"Speaking of cigarettes, I make it a rule to smoke Camels," says Mrs. T. W. Kenyon, sportswoman pilot. "They are the mildest cigarette I know. Morning, noon, and night, I can smoke Camels steadily. They never upset my nerves. And each Camel renews the zest and enjoyment of the last one!"

"They Never Get on Your Nerves"

"I appreciate the mellow flavor of Camels," says Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, the transpacific flyer, in a recent interview. "Camels refresh me so when I'm fatigued," he continues, "and they are so mild that I can smoke any number without throwing my nerves off key."

Increase Is Shown In the Nebraska Supply of Water

By United Press
LINCOLN, Neb. — South-central Nebraska, stricken last year by the greatest drought in history, nevertheless saw its water supply replenished by more than 1,500,000 acre feet during the past four years. This information was contained in a report prepared by the conservation and survey division of the University of Nebraska and the United States Geological Survey and was based on information gathered by Dr. A. L. Lugin of the university and L. K. Wenzel, representing the geological survey. Investigations covering the period from Jan. 1, 1931, to Jan. 1, 1935, show that there was a deficiency in rainfall in the section of about 1,400,000 acre feet and a net loss in ground-water storage amounting to 400,000 acre feet. During the same dry period, however, a replenishment of the water supply amounted to more than 1,500,000 acre feet. The conclusion was reached that despite the four years of decreased rainfall, the ground-water depletion is not permanent and with the return of normal years there will be essential restoration of the reserve.

Production Control Announced For Syrup Industry

COLLEGE STATION — "A production control program for commercial producers of sugar cane syrup is the latest program launched by the A.A.A." according to E. N. Holmgren, extension administrative assistant. "This program does not apply to sweet sorghums or seeded ribbon cane ordinarily used in Texas for making syrup," he explained. Eligibility to participate in the program is based on four points. The producer must agree not to have more acres of sugar cane in 1935 than he had in 1934. He must not manufacture more syrup for any purpose in 1935 than in 1934. He must not sell more in 1935

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

Varsity Guard Is Almost a Soldier

By United Press
MANHATTAN, Kan. — Augustus Caesar Cardarelli is still playing guard for Kansas State college, but he well might have been lost to the team for war service. Cardarelli was born in Italy, and although he has lived 19 of his 21 years in Republic, Pa., it was not until a few months ago that he was naturalized. Wes Fry, his coach, is glad Cardarelli will do his fighting for Kansas State and not for Il Duce. The 1935 payment will be made after proof of compliance of the current year. The exact amount has not yet been set, as it will be based on the parity price of syrup as determined by the secretary. Whatever the price, however, the parity price will be paid on 88 per cent of the 1935 production provided actual production does not run under 88 per cent of the base.

Further Progress

which have come under the AAA program now have comparatively bright prospects; whereas the prospects for the cotton industry, which has supposedly received special government favors in the form of rental and benefit payments and pegged prices, are far less favorable. If subsidies for agriculture are needed as a permanent policy to compensate for the natural hazards agriculture constantly faces and the weak bargaining position which the industry holds because of its six million widely scattered operating units and diverse interests, these subsidies, it would seem, should be associated with a program for promoting efficiency in production and not in the reverse. With such a program, the additional tax burdens which direct subsidies would involve might be at least partially offset by lower costs of food and the maintenance of our foreign markets for agricultural products. The statistical position of agriculture is now the strongest it has been in years as a result of the devastating drought of 1934 and the growing demand for farm products. This is the time, therefore to consider carefully to what extent the Federal Government itself may have been responsible for the building up of burdensome surpluses through the 20's by its production loan policies, the activities of the Federal Farm Board and the recent price pegging operations of the AAA.

The GOLDEN FEATHER by Robert Bruce © 1935 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JEAN DUNN, secretary to DON-ALD MONTAGUE, lawyer, delays her answer when BOBBY WALLACE, automobile salesman, asks her to marry him. At the Golden Feather night club, who's business connection is vague, Sandy introduces Bobby to Lewis, who is Mr. LEWIS. Bobby sells some bonds for Lewis, who is Mr. LEWIS, federal agent, is treating WINNY LEWIS, bank robber, to rob about the bond transaction and questions Bobby. Lewis, the car Lewis bought is armored. Bobby undertakes to Jean goes home for a vacation and she sees to it that she and she agrees to a secret engagement. The bank of which her father is president is robbed. Larry starts a search for the robbers. CHAPTER XXX
IT did not occur to Jean Dunn—until it was far too late to make any difference—that the robbery of her father's bank was to be a profoundly important event in her own life. Her father wrote to her about it, and she saw accounts of it in the newspapers; but although Jean shivered pleasantly as she read, and wrote a long letter to her father, bubbling over with thankfulness that he had not been hurt—still it did not seem to be anything that really touched her. A few days after it happened she was going her way just as she had before. She had other things to think about. She had promised Sandy to become his wife, at some busy, unsettled time in the future. She spent a miserable unhappy evening explaining to Bobby Wallace that she could not be his wife—and the misery had flared up into an outright quarrel when Bobby, learning at last that she loved Sandy, had tried once again, to tell her that Sandy was a shady character. Afterward, to justify herself in her own mind, Jean had assured herself that she did love Sandy, deeply and truly, and that her affair with Bobby had been after all only a boy-and-girl romance. With things standing thus four or five days after the holdup, she answered her desk buzzer one morning and went into Mr. Montague's office with pencil and notebook in hand, expecting to take dictation. Instead she found Mr. Montague looking at her with grave sympathy. Sandy Harkins, he told her, had been painfully hurt in an accident. She gasped with surprise. No, Mr. Montague did not know any of the details—it was a traffic accident, apparently, somewhere down in the southwestern corner of the state. Sandy was in a critical state, and he wanted Jean to come to him. Long afterward, Jean remembered an odd thing about her own emotions at this moment. She remembered that instead of feeling a sudden outpouring of racking anxiety and fear she had been chiefly concerned with the thought, "My lover has been hurt and he needs me—I mustn't let him down. I mustn't fail to be properly worried about him." In other words she felt the need of emotion, rather than emotion itself. But it was a long time before she bothered to analyze her feelings in this way. MR. MONTAGUE was asking her if she wanted to go to see Sandy—she nodded, her face pale

Ethiopian Prince Dons Turncoat's Finery

Ray Rousseau, NEA Service staff cameraman, in this picture rushed to America from conquered Tigre province, portrays the final step in the evolution of the Italo-Ethiopian war's most notorious figure—the turncoat, Haile Selassie Gueza, son-in-law of the Ethiopian emperor, who went over to the Italians and has been made governor of the conquered territory. Resplendent in his new uniform, he preens himself under the gaze of the Italian officers whose ally he became.
