Election Shows Need of Party Alignment

The New Year will have come, probably, before people get through talking about what the election signified. Just now we have the rather amazing spectacle of an administration winning the support both of those who feel that it is heading in the direction of change and of those who believe it to be the one secure bulwark against change.

That is to say that Mr. Roosevelt, in some manner, has contrived to draw strength from liberals and conservatives alike. The liberals believe that he is going to amplify and co.tinue those changes inherent in the New Deal; the con- The Newfangles (Mom 'n' "... servatives believe that he will make as few changes as pessible, and that anyone who might be put in his place would almost certainly go farther to the left.

These exceedingly contradictory developments make it very hard to figure just what the election may have meant.

The administration continues to enjoy public support, in a quite unprecedented way; and yet this solidarity is more apparent than real, since it includes the support of two diametrically opposite schools of thought. Mr. Roosevelt cannot forever continue to be the darilng of the liberals and the white hope of the conservatives.

All of which is just another way of saying that the much talked-of realignment of parties cannot be postponed much longer.

Liberalism and conservatism are not words of very exact meaning. Nevertheless, they will have to do for want of better ones; and sooner or later they will have to be the unofficial labels of our two chief political parties, with one party standing for the one attitude and the other for its opposite.

For what the New Deal neds more than anything else is a critical and intelligent reappraisal that goes to the fundamentals beneath it. It did not get that in this recent campaign. It cannot get it until the two parties stand for something more than just two groups of assorted officeholders and officeseekers.

While the New Utility Cooker brings to you the possibilities of enjoying old-fashioned meals in addition, it permits you to prepare foods by the newer methods of cooking without water.

Science has discovered that there is so much natural moisture in all meats, vegetables and fruits that it is entirely feasible to cook them with little or no water.

About the only reason why we have cooked with water was to avoid burning. Water distributes the heat evenly, conducting it away from the point nearest the fire.

our foods we have poured off the excess water and with it we have poured the bone-forming, teethbuilding minerals; the iron, calcium and phosphorus that constitute the essential elements which the human system must have. With the new perfected Utility Cooker you can prepare foods deliciously tender and full of these health-building elements. The Utility Cooker is ideal for the housewife who wishes to practice this modern, more healthful and more economical way of cooking.
