New Governor of Mississippi Will Aid The Farmer

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 21.—Hugh Lawson White, son of a millionaire Mississippi lumberman inaugurated today as governor of Mississippi, pledged to a program of "balancing agriculture with industry." He succeeds Gov. Sennett Conner who defeated him in the election four years ago. White is a comparative newcomer in politics and the governorship is the first major public office he has ever held. Previously he served three terms as mayor of his home town of Columbus, Miss., where his lumber mills are located. In 1931 White first entered politics seriously, running for governor against Sennett Conner, incumbent. White led the ticket in the first Democratic primary, but in the second primary he was defeated. Last year White again entered the race, and with Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo actively supporting him, stumped the state. He was elected by a large majority. White's platform pledged him to build up the rural sections of the state and improve its agriculture, and to seek to industrialize the state as much as possible by attracting industries. He is particularly interested in having cotton and textile industries established in the state, and has invited large concerns in the South to extend their industrial domains to Mississippi. During the campaign White also pledged himself to an extensive program of road building, including the hard surfacing of the main highways of the state; to lengthening the school term in rural districts to eight months; and in increasing homestead exemptions from $1,000 to $5,000. White is 55, married, but has no children. He is an Elder in the Presbyterian church. He is well known in the state for his philanthropies, as he has given liberally to educational, religious and charitable institutions. He takes office with a cash balance of nearly $4,555,000 in the state treasury, a larger amount than has ever been left by any other administration.

KING EDWARD VIII

The former Prince of Wales, who was proclaimed King of England today in an age-old ceremony following the death of King George V.

EDWARD VIII IS PROCLAIMED AS NEW KING

LONDON, Jan. 21.—His face bearing the marks of grief for his dead father, Edward Albert, Prince of Wales, formally was proclaimed King Edward VIII today. The age old ceremony was held 16 hours after King George V died at Sandringham house. It was announced his funeral would be held next Tuesday in St. George's Chapel, at Windsor. The new king and his brother, the Duke of York, the heir presumptive to the throne, flew from Sandringham to London for the ceremony making him ruler of one-fourth of the world, king of Great Britain and Ireland and of the dominions beyond the seas and emperor of India. Thousands of the new king's subjects milled outside as the councillor and assisting dignitaries approved the proclamation saying that "we, therefore, the Lords, spiritual and temporal of this realm, being assisted with these of his late majesty's privy council, with numbers of other principal gentlemen of quality, the lord mayor and citizens of London, do now, hereby, with one voice and consent, publish and proclaim the high and mighty Prince Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David is now, by the death of our late sovereign of happy memory, our only lawful liege Lord Edward VIII." King Edward then took the oath to respect the Church of Scotland and signed a proclamation preserving the continuity of office of his ministers and public servants. The king did not appear before his people. After spending a quiet hour at York house, his residence, he walked, hatless, across the ambassador's court to the state department of St. James palace, perfectly groomed and wearing morning dress. Mounted police rode into the throng of some 5,000 who broke through the police lines at the rear of the palace. Several were knocked down and police had trouble clearing the way.

The shooting occurred at the fifth ward, first precinct polling place. Joe Schultz surrendered to police. Raids on other anti-Long headquarters were begun. Home Rule officials were busy checking complaints anti-Long voters were being intimidated. Harold Wise, Home Rule commissioner of the Third Precinct, and William Ingram, a Long worker, were arrested and charged with fighting. Home Rule headquarters said Wise had been struck without provocation when Wise approached the ballot box to take up his duties. Anti-Long officials refused to comment except to deny that any of the men arrested with guns were Home Rule workers.

D. Conway were present to pay their last respects to the deceased. The church was filled to overflowing during the last rites and the casket was banked with a large number of floral offerings. W. D. DALLAS.—An old-time Texas Ranger who helped bring law and order to Greer County, formerly a part of Texas but now comprising about six counties in Oklahoma, has been added to the special events staff of the Texas Centennial Exposition to collect relics of early-day members of the state's famous and colorful law enforcement body. Relics taken from Indians and the desperados of early Texas crime will also be included in the collection. He is Major B. Black of Comanche, Texas, rancher, who served as a Texas Ranger from 1890-92 and is now president of the Texas Ex-Rangers' Association. Tall, gray-eyed and gray-haired, Major Black is typical in appearance of the popular conception of the old-time Texas Ranger. Campaign Drums of Texas Politics Begin to Rumble In State Capitol

AUSTIN.—Campaign drums of Texas politics rumbled in Austin today as vote-seekers prepared for 1936 battles over individual offices and six proposed amendments to the state constitution. Politicians and state legislators were on scouting expeditions to the state capitol before Gov. James V. Allred called a special 30-day session to raise revenue for old age pensions. Personal political fortunes are at stake when legislators pass judgment on the issues of sales tax, natural resources levies, and others. Long-range plans were mapped for constitutional amendments on which voters will ballot on Nov. 3. One, which authors were confident would pass after five unsuccessful trials, would increase the salary of the governor and other state officials. Chief sponsor of this amendment is Lieut. Gov. Walter F. Woodul, Houston. He is optimistic over chances for a victory. Previous attempts to increase the governor's $4,000 a year salary were answered by a resounding majority of "No" votes. The most recent test, in 1929, showed 76,166 against and 49,644 for. The new proposal embodies increases for five other officials: the attorney general from $2,000 (plus a maximum of $2,000 fees) to $10,000 annually; comptroller, treasurer and land commissioner from $2,500 to $6,000 each; and (Continued on page 2)

Parlous Times? Yes, But U. S. Is Tough!

If you hear a queer flapping noise up and down in the land these days, it is undoubtedly being caused by honest citizens throwing back the lids of their cyclone cellars and sticking their heads out to learn what all the hollering is about.

The combination of a presidential race which is about to break loose, a Congress which has divers discordant things on its mind, and a supreme court which is swinging a big ax, has created an uproar which will probably get worse and worse until next November arrives.

So far it seems to be producing more heat than light, and more noise than heat.

On the one hand we are assured that the only way to preserve the liberties of the American people is to toss the administration out, neck and crop, and install a leader of the opposite political faith.

On the other hand we are assured that these same liberties will inevitably die in agony unless the administration stays in power and keeps its foot on the neck of the opposition.

And shuttling back and forth between these two camps we have a similar row over the supreme court. If it fails to stand firm and crack down on all unwise legislation, our liberties are as good as done for; contrariwise, if it does not stop exercising its power to nullify acts of Congress, the American eagle will be caged forever.

All these claims are being made, these days, by orators and nation-savers all up and down the land. It is perfectly obvious that all of them can't be right; sooner or later, the honest citizen is apt to start wondering if any of them can be right.

Are we, that is in as much danger of losing our liberties as our rival leaders seem to think? This republic has endured for more than a century and a half, and it has been through some very bad times—through foreign and civil war, through boom and depression, through incompetence in high places and corruption in government, through looting by irresponsible financial pirates and indifference on the part of the electorate.

It has survived the Ku Klux Klan and the Know-Nothing movement, the Populists and the Greenbackers, the Credit Mobilier and Teapot Dome. It has lived through the Abolitionist and Prohibitionist eras, the times of Jay Gould and the times of Al Capone, the California gold rush and the Miami land boom.

It has taken an awful beating from every imaginable source, including its own occasional stupidity, and it has always come back for more.

In other words, it's a pretty tough country, and the liberty it prizes is one of the hardest growths on the planet.

It's just possible that this liberty will survive and grow no matter who wins the next election or what happens to the supreme court.

Campaign Drums—

The governor's salary, now fourth smallest in the 48 states, would be increased to $12,000 a year.

Woodul believed no extensive speaking campaign for the amendment would start before next fall. Combined interest in the six individual offices are counted on for victory where individual increases might be opposed. As the amendment is worded, voters must take all or none.

Greatest public interests attaches to the amendment for a state monopoly on hard liquor sales. Drys predict that package law violations in some wet areas will result in favor of strict state control.

A proposal in which metropolitan areas are vitally interested would limit the representation of counties with large populations. Seven state representatives are offered as the maximum for any county under 700,000 population, with an additional representative for each 100,000 thereafter. No county would be immediately affected, but Dallas county now has six House members and Harris county five.

Other amendments on which the people will vote are: creation of a contributory old age retirement system for public school teachers; authorizing the legislature to provide workmen's compensation insurance on state employees; and limiting the governor's pardoning power to clemencies recommended by the board of pardons and paroles.

Activities on the 1936 political calendar begin May 26 when the state Democratic convention meets to select—perhaps to instruct—delegates to the national party convention. This normally Democratic state has its first statewide election on July 25—the first Democratic primary. Aug. 22 is the date of the second party primary. The final election of the year will be on Nov. 3—on the six constitutional amendments and offices ranging from the president down.

All candidacies must be filed by June 1 for participation in the party primary elections.

"Another idea I want to carry out in connection with the ranger exhibit is to have Texas' old Indian fighters—and there are a number of them left—appear at the exposition not more than three at a time, to spin the stories and yarns of their adventures and of early Texas."

Major Black was attached to a company of 15 rangers stationed at Quanah, Tex., although his operations, with three or four other rangers, were largely in the desperado haunted "No Man's Land," famous as the hide-out of criminals, which began at the Red River and extended over a large section of what is now prosperous Oklahoma farm land.

Old Greer County and "No Man's Land" was adjoined by what was then Indian Territory and the little band of rangers were aided in their work of rounding up desperadoes by the Deputy United States Marshals of the territory, Major Black said.

Trophies and relics of old-timers of the famous rangers will include guns and other equipment of the officers, their reports and records, and articles which the rangers seized with the slaying or capture of Indians or criminals.

Among the relics already obtained is a bow and arrow set, once the property of a Comanche chief. Its chief interest is its decorations—the hair of a scalped French woman—at the tips of the bow.

Another is a map drawn by Capt. June Peak, famous Texas ranger who killed the notorious Sam Bass. Capt. Peak's map shows the section from San Angelo to Colorado City and designates water holes and where fire wood could be obtained. It bore directions, also, for the traveler to carry wood or water with him over certain sections of the route, where these necessities were unobtainable.

Major Black will also obtain a collection of rifles showing the evolution of the rifle from Revolutionary War days to the present time. A wide collection of pistols will be included.

The special company of rangers will be guard of honor during the BORGER, Texas—A three-year-old red Duroc-Jersey sow owned by S. H. Chisum of Pringle, would have to sing "Three Little Pigs" all of 27 times to include all her off springs. She has just given birth to her sixth litter, making a total of 81 pigs.

Three of the litters have consisted of 14 pigs and three of 13. The average litter for ordinary sows is from six to 12.

Chisum's prize sow was one of a litter of 19. He purchased her from his brother-in-law, Theodore Pike, who lives in Bentonville, Ark. The pringle farmer has lived in Hutchinson county since 1901, and has been county surveyor for the last 18 years.

The Homestake is leading the drive for mineral wealth, with its new Ross shaft that eventually will sink a mile into the ore-bearing earth. Above ground a new hydro-electric plant and assay office have been erected.

Gold has revived the ghost town of Rockford where three mills are being built and two mines are expected to be producing ere soon.

Two miles from here new interests have acquired the Capitol Hill mine where a new ore vein recently was discovered. Ten miles away the Maitland mine successfully has worked out a treatment of blue ores and is now employing 70 men.

Other minerals are also sharing in the mining boom.

Columbite is being shipped from Pringle and the Keystone is producing feldspar, they reported.

This area is also aiding in the production of flares, fireworks, batteries and medicines from its output of spodumene from the Etta mine at Keystone. It's content of lithium ore is said to be the largest in the world.

Bentonite is attracting capital to the edge of the Black Hills where a new mill has been built and two others are under construction.

The STRANGE CASE of JULIA CRAIG

by Ned Jones
Copyright NEA 1935

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JULIA CRAIG, pretty young secretary to GEORGE WOODFORD of the law firm of Woodford and Brooks, is ambitious to become a night club singer. Julia shares an apartment with AMY SANDERS.

PETER KEMP, also employed by Woodford and Brooks, is in love with Julia, but she discourages his intentions. He gives Julia a letter of introduction to HENRI LAMB, band leader, but in the letter, asks Lamb not to give her a job. Julia discloses this and tells Peter everything is over between them.

ROYAL NESBITT, friend of Amy's, promises to help Julia find a job as a singer, but days pass with no word from him.

Woodford tells Julia he is giving a week-end party on his yacht and asks her to come to sing for his guests. SMITH GARLAND, night club owner, is to be in the party.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

At the mention of Smith Garland the best known night club owner in the state, Julia's heart literally skipped a beat. Woodford smiled as her mouth opened slightly and she stared at him unbelievably. He knew perfectly well that to anyone with Julia's ambitions the name of Smith Garland was magic indeed.

"Of course," Woodford went on. "I don't know that Garland can do anything. But it won't hurt to have him hear you. Like to come along?"

"I'd like very much to," said Julia quickly.

"Good! We expect to pull out some time late tonight. But I suggest you go along to the yacht club about 9 o'clock and get aboard. The name of the boat is the Wood Nymph. I'll phone the skipper to expect you."

"Thank you, Mr. Woodford. I really can't tell you how much I really appreciate it."

"Forget it, Miss Craig." He smiled up at her. "I need a singer aboard, and you're a good one."

Julia hoped so. She hurried back into her office, her thoughts in a whirl. For the rest of the afternoon she went through her work like an automaton, and got precious little done. She could scarcely wait to get to the apartment and tell the good news to Amy Sanders.

But Amy wasn't at all surprised that Julia was to get her chance. "I knew you'd finally bump into a break, Julia. When a girl wants a thing as bad as you want this, she finally gets there. But it does bowl me over that you'd find the rainbow right in your own office. Right in the place you've been trying to get away from."

JULIA laughed. "I've found the rainbow. But not the pot of gold yet. Nobody knows whether Smith Garland will like my singing."

"Nobody but Smith Garland," admitted Amy. "But think what a break it is for him to hear you aboard Woodford's yacht. He'll know you work for Woodford, and that you're a guest on board, and—"

"Not a guest," amended Julia. "I'm just going along as an entertainer."

Amy gave Julia a long look. "Do you really believe that?"

"Why, of course. Mr. Woodford said he needed a singer, and he never been on anything but an excursion boat in my life."

"Don't worry," Amy told her from the other room. "Woodford's yacht is probably the size of a hotel. I'd suggest that white evening gown—a sports outfit, with some soft-soled shoes in case he's fussy about the deck paint—and a package of seasick remedy." There was a long silence, and then Amy added: "I saw some collapsible rowboats the other day. They were made of canvas, and you could probably fold one up and get it in to your week-end bag."

A shoe came hurtling out of the dressing room, successfully terminating Amy's advice.

WHEN Julia reached the boat moorings the clubhouse itself was dark except for a dim light at the desk in the lobby. The sleepy night-caretaker directed her to the slip at which the Wood Nymph was moored.

"She's all lighted up," he said. "You can't miss her. Big white ship."

The Wood Nymph was a big white ship, indeed, far larger than any of the other boats which Julia passed as she hurried along the boardwalk of the mooring dock. Her bag in hand, Julia hesitated by the small gangplank which led to the deck. But just then a white uniformed figure appeared from the cabin and touched his cap.

"I'm Captain Bakely. Looking for the Wood Nymph?"

Julia told him that she was. "I'm Miss Craig, and I believe Mr. Woodford said I should be here about 9."

"Of course, Miss Craig. Come right aboard and I'll show you to your stateroom. Mr. Woodford and the other guests aren't aboard yet."

When Bakely had taken Julia to her stateroom and deposited her bag on the berth, he paused a moment at the door. "Please make yourself at home, Miss Craig. There are deck chairs aft."

"Thank you. I think I'll just stay here a while."

He nodded. "I'll tell Mr. Woodford when he comes that you're aboard."

When Bakely had gone, Julia looked about her. The stateroom was small but very pleasant, and furnished in quiet taste. She wondered whether she should accept the captain's invitation to sit on the after deck, but at length decided not. Bakely might not know that the owner had invited her as an entertainer rather than a guest.

TAKING a magazine from a little table in the corner of the room, she sat down to read. She read through one story, and began another. Then, impatient, she looked at her watch. It was after 10, but she had heard no one come aboard, yet the gangplank was quite close to the porpoches of her stateroom. "But he said they wouldn't leave until late," Julia told herself, and resumed her reading.

When another hour passed, however, with no word from Woodford she began to wonder. All she had heard were vague sounds from below her, possibly in the engine compartment—and the occasional soft footfalls of someone on deck above. She was about to put on her coat and go above when there was a light knock at her door. It was Captain Bakely.

"I've just had word from the clubhouse that Mr. Woodford telephoned and said there'd be some delay in getting the rest of his party aboard. He suggested you needn't wait up unless you wanted to."

Julia thanked him, relieved—and decided that she wouldn't wait up. After all, the day in the office and the ensuing excitement of Woodford's interview hadn't prepared her to be at her best. "I'll get a good night's rest," she told herself, "and see what the world holds in the morning."

A moment later she was between the sheets of the berth and the stateroom was in darkness. With the water lapping rhythmically against the hull of the boat, Julia was soon asleep.

She awakened with a start, conscious of a new, yet still rhythmic, sound. Unmistakably, it was the sound of the yacht's engines. Julia tossed back the covers of the berth and looked from a porthole. Deck and gangplank were gone! All she could see was an expanse of water which dissolved into the pitch blackness of the sky.

But beyond the soft throbb of the engines and the wash of the hull driving through the water, there seemed to be not another sound aboard.

Canada Tries CCC Type of Camp for Youths of Nation

OTTAWA, Ont.—A new and brighter era is about to open for unemployed youths in Canada.

After three years of monotonous existence in the unfriendly atmosphere of relief camps, they are to be sent to training centers patterned along the lines of the conservation camps in the United States.

The present camps where 20,000 youths are earning 20 cents a day and their "keep" with a pick and shovel, will be abolished. The camps were established in 1932 to care for unemployed youths from urban centers, but have never been popular, and were the scene of many disturbances, allegedly instigated by communist agitators.

Decision to replace them by training centers was reached at the Inter-Provincial Conference held here last month. A resolution presented by Hon. David Croft, Ontario's labor-welfare minister, urging the Dominion government to "devise a system for training youths in habits and techniques of work and industry, and for a thorough and well-integrated apprenticeship system."

Adoption of such a system will mark a new departure in treatment of unemployed youths in Canada. The Dominion department of labor has been studying closely the CCC camps in the United States and will likely pattern Canada's new camps after them.

The new camps will be centers of vocational training and education, and the men will be paid a regular wage, from which they will pay board and lodging and buy their own clothes. Under the present system, youths receive 20 cents a day and food, lodging and clothing.

A number of the proposed camps will be for youths only. Others will take care of older unemployed men. The various departments of education in the provinces will cooperate in providing education for the men.

It is hoped the new camps will check the drifting of youths from province to province—one of the major difficulties encountered under the present system. Men come and go as circumstances change, but under the new plan the unemployed will stay in one place for a definite period.

The whole purpose behind the project is training of the youths' minds and bodies to prepare them for jobs whenever work becomes available.

LATEST CLUE CLUB MYSTERY PICTURE AT CONNELLEE TODAY

"The Murder of Dr. Harrigan," First National's new Clue Club mystery thriller, opens at the Connellee Theatre today with Kay Linaker, Ricardo Cortez and Mary Astor in the featured roles.

Based on the story by Mignon G. Eberhart, famous author of mystery dramas, the picture is said to carry a most baffling, as well as most exciting, plot in which one man is spirited away from an operating room of a hospital without leaving a trace, the attending surgeon is strangely slain, his body being found in an elevator with a surgical knife in the chest, and three women are attacked and choked by an unrecognized person.

The murder plot is tied up with a new anaesthetic which is believed to be worth a fortune, and the formula for which the head of a big drug company steals from the various physicians and chemists who have worked on it.

This is mixed up with a scandalous flirtation between the wife of the doctor who is eventually slain, and a gigolo.

There is hilarious comedy also, centering around a merry mix-up in the hospital between a nervous patient and an inebriate, roles played by Don Barclay and Johnny Arthur.

The story cumulates in intensity from one terrifying situation to another to the astonishing climax.

Others in the cast include John Eldredge, Joseph Crehan, Frank Reicher, Anita Kerry, Phillip Reeds, Robert Strange, Mary Treen, Gordon Elliott, Don Barclay, Johnny Arthur and Joan Blair.

Frank McDonald directed the picture from the screen play by Peter Milne and Sy Bartlett.
