Public Not So Foolish As Congress Thinks

The great American voter is popularly supposed to believe that the average congressman is a blockhead and a nitwit.

Meanwhile, most of us fail to notice that the average congressman returns the compliment, with interest.

That is to say, Congress, collectively, seems to feel that the electorate is made up principally of egg-heads who have to be led in out of the rain by kindly policemen.

For proof, consider the flurry that has swept through our congressional halls because of the suggestion that Congress vote upwards of a billion dollars in new taxes.

The background of this request is perfectly simple. A soldiers' bonus law is on the statute books. A new farm bill is also on the statute books, and the old one has left behind it certain inescapable obligations. Added up, these things will put the bite on the treasury to the extent of a billion or more.

Considering the fact that the budget has been out of balance for something like seven years, and that our national debt is higher than it ever was before, it is hard to see how any legislator in his senses could hold back when it comes to voting money to pay some of these bills.

Yet the president's suggestion that new taxes be voted has aroused a perfect storm of congressional resentment. Hearty congressmen go about looking as if their best friends had sneaked up behind them and delivered a collective kick where it would do the most good.

Why? Because this is a campaign year. Congressmen must run for re-election this fall, and they don't like to take into the arena a record of having voted for new taxes only six months before.

And that reluctance is the measure of Congress' contempt for the intelligence of the American voter.

Why would any voter, old enough to be trusted out alone after dark, resent the fact that his congressman had voted for new taxes at a time when new taxes were absolutely unavoidable? Isn't this country intelligent enough to realize that it can't live on credit forever, and that what it buys has to be paid for sooner or later?

"Red" McFarlane Sheriff Aspirant

The candidacy of A. D. (Red) McFarlane for sheriff, subject to the Democratic primary election, was announced Tuesday.

McFarlane, a resident of Eastland county for 18 years, has been a spudder contractor and connected in oil field work in that time and in 1933 through 1935 he was a special agent for the Texas rangers in East Texas.

He has been connected with the major oil developments in Texas for many years, leaving the county occasionally for new fields near Cross Plains, Coleman, Berger, Kilgore and other points. McFarlane has also been a special officer for the Prairie Oil & Gas company, working at Cushing, Okla.

NYA Workers In 142 Counties Making A Physical Survey

(Editor's Note: this is the last of a series of United Press stories on the work of the rehabilitation division of the state department of education.)

By RICHARD M. MOREHEAD
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN.—National Youth Administration workers in 142 Texas counties are surveying 145,000 families to determine physical disabilities that the state may help correct.

"I expect we'll find in those families 50,000 persons with physical handicaps," said J. J. Brown, director of the state department of education's rehabilitation division.

Lack of information has hampered work of the state department of education and Texas society for Crippled Children in the past. A card index system will enable officials to quickly and economically make plans for aiding such underprivileged.

The five-year program already accomplished has aided some 4,500 persons directly. The cases are from El Paso to Texarkana, Amarillo to Houston.

For $100, the state trained a El Paso youth to help fellow sufferers. He graduated from the Texas School for the Blind here and returned to El Paso as a home teacher of other sightless persons. The man is now in charge of "The Lighthouse," El Paso blind center.

Nearly 500 miles to the East, a man in Roscoe, Nolan county, has a prosperous watchmaking shop. Several years ago his leg was amputated after an accident gunshot wound endangered his life. Useless in his former occupation, the man turned to the state who spent $340 sending him to a watchmaking school in St. Louis.

Two Coleman citizens have made their own following a "lift" from the state. One man, 22, was trained to make watches after undergoing an operation to amputate his leg. The other youth, 20, was rehabilitated for $165 and got a job in a jewelry store.

A Brownwood girl was afflicted with curvature of the spine. She was trained in dress-making and now has a prosperous home business. A young man, 24, lost his left arm. The state sent him to business college and he now has a job keeping books for a grocery store.

A 24-year-old Cisco youth was handicapped by paralysis of the legs. The rehabilitation service used $228 training him in a tailor shop and he became a master cleaner and dyer. Another young man was disabled, unable to follow his ambition of a law career. He was trained as a barber at $419 cost, worked in a barber shop while going to law school and now has a license to practice law.

In Waco, a handsome 24-year-old public accountant, but was without funds and handicapped by an injury received from a leg fracture. He was trained as a bookkeeper and now has a job in a wholesale grocery firm, still working to achieve his ambition. Every city in Texas has similar cases. With an increased federal and state appropriation, Director Brown expects to develop the service to extent hitherto unreachd.

Your Income Tax

Extension for Filing Returns and Payment of Tax

It is important that the taxpayer render on or before the due date, which is March 15 if the return is filed on the calendar year basis, as complete and final return of income as possible. However, when by reason of illness, absence from home, inability to secure the necessary data, or for other good and sufficient reasons additional time is required, a reasonable extension of time may be granted. Application should be made in writing to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer files his returns on or before the due date of the return, a full recital of the causes for the delay being given. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no extension may be granted for a period of more than six months.

An extension of time for filing the return does not extend the time for payment of the tax, or any installment thereof, unless so specified in the extension. Application for an extension of time for payment of the tax or any installment thereof should be made on form 1127 to the commissioner of internal revenue through the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer's return is filed. The applicant should set forth under oath the specific reason for desiring an extension and should clearly indicate what hardship, if any, would result if the extension were not granted. In addition, a statement of assets and liabilities showing the taxpayer's financial condition as of the last day of the preceding month, or as of the close of the last taxable period, and a separate statement of receipts and disbursements for each of the three months immediately preceding the month in which the application is filed should be submitted. The amount of tax for which the extension of time of payment is desired should be stated. The commissioner will not consider an extension of time of payment unless request is made on or before the due date of the tax or installment thereof. If the extension is granted, interest at the rate of 6 per cent a year is collectible from the date the payment should have been made if there had been no extension to the expiration of the period of the extension.

A LIGHT SMOKE
OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

Over a period of years, certain basic advances have been made in the selection and treatment of cigarette tobaccos for Lucky Strike Cigarettes. They include preliminary analyses of the tobacco selected; use of center leaves; the higher heat treatment of tobacco ("Toasting"); consideration of acid-alkaline balance, with consequent definite improvement in flavor; controlled uniformity in the finished product. All these combine to produce a superior cigarette—a modern cigarette, a cigarette made rich, ripe-bodied tobaccos—A Light Smoke.

News of 1770 Gives Account of Boston Massacre
BOSTON, March 9.—One hundred and sixty-six years ago a barrage of snowballs precipitated the Boston Massacre.
The tragedy, in which four patriots were killed and seven were wounded, was one of several incidents that crystallized sentiment in the American colonies against British rule.
The following first-hand account of the massacre, surrounded by a black border and illustrated with four coffins bearing the initials of the victims, appeared in the Boston Gazette and Country Journal for March 17, 1710:
"On the evening of Monday, being the 5th current, several soldiers of the 29th regiment were seen parading the streets with their drawn cutlasses and bayonets, abusing and wounding numbers of the inhabitants."
Four youths on scene
"A few minutes after 9 o'clock, four youths named Edward Archibald, William Merchant, Francis Archibald and John Leeh, Jr., came down Cornhill together, and separating at Doctor Loring's corner, the two former were passing the narrow alley leading to Murray's barracks, in which was a soldier brandishing a sword of an uncommon size against the walls, out of which he struck fire plentifully. A person of mean countenance armed with a large cudgel bore him company.
"Edward Archibald admonished Mr. Merchant to take care of the sword, on which the soldier turned around and struck Archibald on the arm, then pushed at Merchant . . . Merchant then struck the soldier with a short stick he had, and the other person ran to the barracks and brought with him two soldiers, one armed with a pair of tongs and the other with a shovel.
"Struck Down With Tongs
"He with the tongs pursued Archibald through the alley, colored and laid him over the head with the tongs. The noise brought people together, and John Hicks, a young lad, coming up, knocked the soldier down, but let him get up again; and more lads gathering, drove them back to the barracks. . . .
"In less than a minute, 10 or 12 of them came out with drawn cutlasses, clubs and bayonets, and set upon the unarmed boys and young folks . . .
"On hearing the noise, one Samuel Atwood came up to see what was the matter . . . and when the boys had dispersed, he met 10 or 12 soldiers aforesaid rushing down the alley toward the square, and asked them if they intended to murder people.
"Threats From Soldiers
"They answered: 'Yes by G-d, root and branch!'
"With that, one of them struck Mr. Atwood with a club, which was repeated by another, and being unarmed, he turned to go off, and received a wound on the left shoulder which reached the bone and gave him great pain. . . .
"Thirty or forty persons, mostly lads, being by this means gathered in Kingstreet, Captain Preston, with a party of men with charged bayonets, came from the main guard to the commissioner's house, the soldiers pushing their bayonets, crying, 'Make Way!'

"They took place by the custom house, and continuing to push to drive the people off, pricked some in several places; on which they were clamorous, and, it is said, threw snowballs. On this, the captain commanded them to fire, and more snowballs coming, he again said:
"Damn you, fire, be the consequence what it will."
"One soldier then fired and a townsman with a cudgel struck him over the hands with such force that he dropped his firelock; and rushing forward aimed a blow at the captain's head, which grazed his hat and fell pretty heavy upon him arm.

"However the soldiers continued the fire successively, till seven or eight, or as some say 11 guns were discharged.
"By this fatal maneuver, three men were laid dead on the spot, and two more struggling for life; but what showed a degree of cruelty unknown to British troops, at least since the House of Hanover has directed their operations, was an attempt to fire upon or push with their bayonets the persons who undertook to remove the slain or wounded!"

Dallas County Wind Different From that in Kaufman County
DALLAS.—In Dallas county the wind is from the southeast six months of the year, but in the next door county of Kaufman, south-east winds blow for only one month. The farmer who wants his bedrooms to face the breeze, and his pig-pen to be down-wind, needs a different layout in Dallas county from that of his not-so-distant fellow farmer in Kaufman.
Maps showing prevailing winds in each county of Texas and Oklahoma have been prepared by the Resettlement Administration, to guide remodelling houses and relocation of barn-lots and fields.

Among the restlessness
recently authorized was the chase of individual farms from families who are now operating as tenants in 12 counties of Central Texas. Selection of farms is now under way from nations made by county committees. Sample farms have been plotted and approved by Washington as the pattern development of other farms under option, or to be optioned.
The plans were made under direction of Dan Scoates, the agricultural engineering department of Texas A. & M. college, who is on leave of absence from the college to serve the settlement Administration.

We Invite You—Come As Our Guest

From a bowl for keeping fishes

To a set of china dishes'

From a nest of new utensils

To a brush—

Almost anything you're needing

Is displayed in ads you're reading;

So when shopping for essentials

Do not rush!

For the one who heeds these pages

Is the one who truly gauges

Honest bargains . . . truly sees

The "goods" from "bads."

You'll avoid the crowds and hurry,

You'll save money, time and worry

Just by sitting down at ease

To read the ads!
