MAY DAY IS QUIET OVER ENTIRE WORLD

Labor organizations in virtually all cities of the country celebrated the 50th anniversary of May Day, with parades and speeches today. Socialists and communists took charge of ceremonies in some communities but police did not expect any disturbances.

A traditional holiday of the organized workers, the day was celebrated all over the continent of Europe with police on the alert for disorders. Spain was the chief potential trouble center, but in Poland authorities took extraordinary precautions.

A united labor May Day committee, in which American Federation of Labor unions and socialists and communists of all hues cooperated, expected 200,000 marchers to participate in a seven hour parade past New York's Union Square.

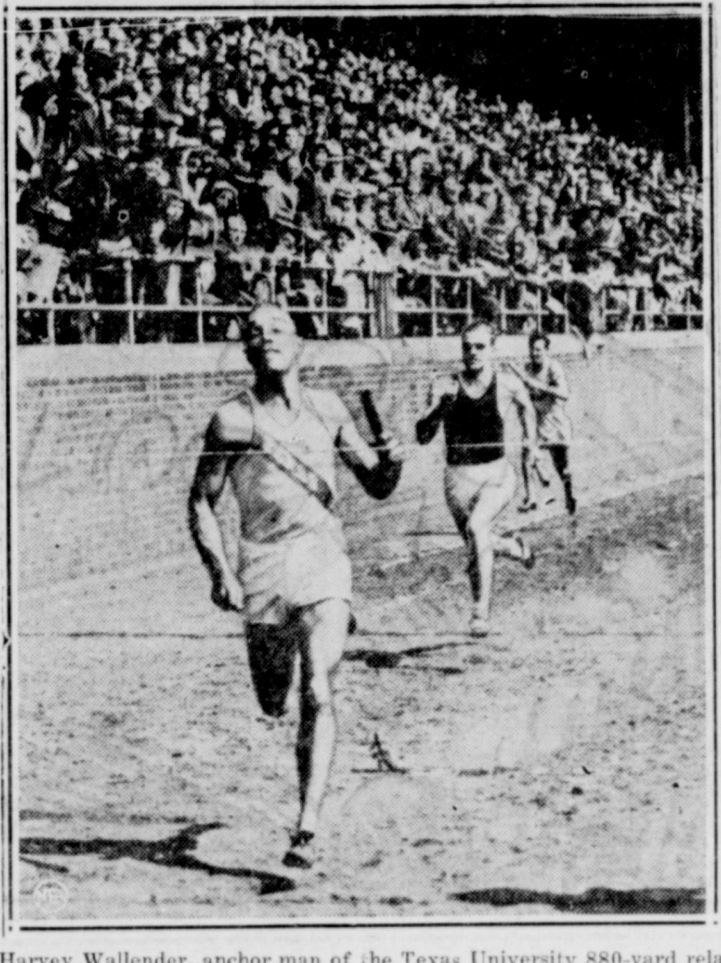

A plan to have Tom Mooney lead the march failed because Gov. Frank Merriam of California refused to release him from San Quentin prison under $1,000,000 bail.

The emperor said direct peace negotiations with the Italians are out of the question, and that he would negotiate only through the League of Nations.

Just before the departure of 5,000 men of the imperial guard for the hills, Haile Selassie said his abandonment of Addis Ababa under duress is not significant and that a new seat of government would be established farther south.

"I will never negotiate peace directly with the Italians," he said. "This country will negotiate only through the league. I will never leave my country of my own free will. 'Will he outside world abandon us to our fate? 'Ethiopia is not suing for peace," he said.

Senator Wilbourne B. Collie Will Run For Re-election To State Senate; Announces His Platform in Statement For Re-election

State Senator Wilbourne B. Collie, a candidate for re-election to a second term, has issued a statement to the people of the district. He has held the distinction of being the youngest member of that body and in addition to his assignment to 16 major committees, he was elected by a unanimous vote president pro-tem of the Senate, the recognition, he says being conferred on his district.

Economy in Government "The people elected me to the Senate on a platform of rigid economy, and the 43rd Legislature—of which I was a member—was the first in the history of Texas to reduce the running expenses of government. A reduction of 28 per cent in the four major appropriation bills, totaling $13,144,905.00, was made. We had inherited a deficit in the treasury of approximately 10 millions, and through the adoption of the Homestead exemption amendment—one which I favored—the revenue of the state was reduced about four millions a year." RELATIVES SAY ACCUSED WAS 'AFFECTIONATE'

GREENVILLE, May 1.—Relatives of Mrs. Velma Patterson, defended her today from state charges that she was a gay party-going widow, who poisoned her two small daughters to get them out of the way of her love affairs.

L. W. Williams of Sulphur Springs, her father, testified in her trial on murder charges that his daughter appeared "heart broken" at the funeral of Dorothy Leon McCasland, 12, the last of her daughters to die, allegedly, of poisoning.

His wife likewise described her as being "very affectionate" toward her children. The grandmother said she took Dorothy Leon to Sunday school and church several times herself and said the child was given a Sunday school diploma.

Each of three defense witnesses called, told of seeing rats or mice in the Patterson home, supporting the defense contention that Mrs. Patterson had a legitimate reason for purchasing arsenic.

Newsmen Warned Addis Ababa May Not Fall Soon

Recommendation that officials take steps to recommit an Okra resident of unsound mind with a fascination for fires and who is causing considerable fear" to a institution was expressed in a resolution passed by retiring 88th district court grand jurors Thursday noon.

The resolution was as follows: "Whereas it has come to the attention of the grand jury that the Okra community has been heretofore a jury and court ad of unsound mind, who considerable fear, and it is known that fires are a considerable fascination for said party has heretofore been confined in institutions for treatment of his mental condition, but has been allowed to return home, and Whereas there have been numerous fires in and around the neighborhood where said party lives: Now, therefore, it is the recommendation of this grand jury that the officials, and those interested, adopt such measures as are necessary to have said party re-committed to an institution for restraint, observation and treatment, that such bond be required as will protect all parties, and that such party be confined unless and until it shall be entirely safe for him to be released from such institution by the proper officials.

ADDIS ABABA, May 1.—Emperor Haile Selassie, with the Italian forces at the gates of his capital, proclaimed late today that he would resist the Italian invaders to the last, although forced to abandon Addis Ababa.

The emperor said direct peace negotiations with the Italians are out of the question, and that he would negotiate only through the League of Nations.

Just before the departure of 5,000 men of the imperial guard for the hills, Haile Selassie said his abandonment of Addis Ababa under duress is not significant and that a new seat of government would be established farther south.

"I will never negotiate peace directly with the Italians," he said. "This country will negotiate only through the league. I will never leave my country of my own free will. 'Will he outside world abandon us to our fate? 'Ethiopia is not suing for peace," he said.

The emperor had lost his de-homair look of a few months ago and seemed worn and haggard. His beard was streaked with gray. His hands were bandaged, allegedly because of burns from Italian gas.

Selfishness To Blame For League Failure

If you listen carefully these days you can hear our friends beyond the Atlantic chanting the first bars of that old familiar song about how the League of Nations is being crippled because the selfish, thoughtless Americans aren't pitching in and doing their part to make it work.

The French and the English, those high-souled believers in the sanctity of treaties and the beauties of collective action against aggressor states, simply couldn't be bothered. They looked the other way so pointedly that our Mr. Stimson was left way out on a limb, to his vast embarrassment.

The Japanese went ahead with their program as unhampered by collective action as if the league had never been invented. A few years passed and Mussolini sent his troops into Ethiopia. This time England suddenly awoke to the need for collective action—Ethiopia being in the back yard of a private English preserve—and demanded action.

The French couldn't see it. They might need Mussolini later on; so they approached the council table with all the reluctance of a country bridegroom at a shotgun wedding, and the upshot was that Mussolini had his way.

More recently, German troops marched into the Rhineland. This time it was France which suddenly discovered the sanctity of treaties and the need for international action, and the British who displayed a coy shyness in the matter.

While the argument went on, the Germans kept on marching. As before, the result was a complete lack of action. It is against this background that European statesmen and publicists are beginning once more to accuse the United States of wrecking the league by refusing to play its proper part. It would be tragic if any American were fooled by this kind of talk.

The league has failed in its great opportunities because the English and the French have sought to use it, not as an instrument for keeping the peace, but as a means of advancing their own national policies. If the league is not what it might have been, they can blame their own selfishness.

Senators Collie

(Continued from page 1) year. Because of this, the legislature sought to balance the budget through reduced expenses rather than by the levy of additional taxes, and it refused to levy them, thus carrying out our pledges to the people.

"After these reductions were made, it became our duty, in response to a mandate of the people at the polls to provide for the Centennial appropriation of $3,000,000 and the relief bonds of $20,000,000. These issues were favored by the people by tremendous majorities, and as unemployment and need prevailed everywhere, the legislature created the set up providing for work relief in various governmental activities rather than the dole, which the people themselves did not want.

"Furthermore," he continued, "the people were requiring increased appropriations for other essential functions and obligations of the government. In order to keep the schools open, provisions had to be made to permit the increase in the per capita apportionment to its highest end, $17.50, and rural aid appropriation was increased from five to 10 millions of dollars. The salaries of teachers remains shamefully low, and they have to discount their warrants, as do all state employees, but the legislature did not raise taxes. On the other hand they were lowered.

"Our Eleemosynary institutions required new buildings and equipment to house and take care of the thousands of unfortunate insane, blind, deaf and dumb, epileptics, Confederate and orphan homes, crippled, dependent and neglected children, girls in training schools and boys in training school, tubercular patients and others. In spite of this, we have been unable to take care of, and provide buildings for hundreds of persons applying for admission to the state's tubercular hospitals; the hundreds of insane now confined in the jails of Texas; the scores of epileptic patients that ought to be in the colony at Abilene and the long list waiting for the state to do its duty and make room for them in other institutions. Many of the inmates of these institutions are now sleeping on the floors. While many demands for money were being made, I thought it better to disburse and disallow them by my vote until we could make every possible provision for these wards of our state. It is a moral wrong to neglect them.

"I did not favor restoring salaries and creating any board or department except those made necessary by a vote of the people. I believe it to be my duty to do my dad level best to carry out, put into operation, and discharge the obligations voted by the people. I favored the old age assistance amendment as a wholesome governmental policy, both in the submission and at the polls, and by its adoption we were, and are, bound to make provisions to discharge. The tremendous amount of money needed to meet this obligation alone is generally recognized, although there are varied viewpoints regarding the nature of the program, and the corresponding sum of money which that program will require.

"It is certain that the liquor taxes, under any proposed program, will not be sufficient for old age assistance, not to mention the demands for the care of our diseased sick and others society must provide for. After giving these matters serious thought and study, I supported increases in the franchise tax—sulfur, utilities, gas, oil, liquor and others.

Revenue and Taxation "The state gets its revenue, mainly in the following particulars: About 22 million a year from ad valorem; about 8 1/2 millions in gross production taxes on oil; about five millions annually from the sale of cigarettes; 12 hundred thousand last year from beer sales; and about four millions will be realized from licenses and taxes upon intoxicating liquor; half a million from gas and power companies; another half million from telephone companies; a million from sulphur; half a million from pipe line companies; in all these gross receipt taxes amount to $11,659,306.99. The occupation taxes on insurance companies brings in two millions annually; the franchise tax a million and a half; the gasoline, or motor fuel, tax brought in net last year $35,559,273.84 and the car license fees more than five millions.

"The state's revenue is spent, mainly as follows: Out of each dollar received, 41 1/2 cents goes for highways; 36 1/2 cents for education; 5 cents for eleemosynary institutions; 6 cents for relief; 1 1/2 cent for executive and administrative expenses; 7-10 of 1 cent for legislative expense; 1 cent for regulation of business and industry; and approximately 2 cents for the courts.

Senators Collie

"The present contributions of industry to the support of the state. Some of them, like our farms, ranches, and business properties, have suffered from the effects of the depression and economic disorder. Oil, in this West Central Texas district, for instance, carries an extremely heavy burden. There are about 6,000 wells in the district and the average daily production per well is less than four barrels. Such wells, as $1.00 per barrel, means an average of less than $4.00 per day. The land owner gets one-eighth, they have the expense of pumping, and pipeline rates cost 25 cents per barrel to get the oil to deep water. In addition they now pay a 2 cent per barrel gross production tax, and a very heavy ad valorem tax to the state, county, schools and other local subdivisions. Suppose the tax was raised to 15 cents in this district. What would that mean? It goes without saying hundreds of people would be thrown out of employment, most of the wells plugged, leases cancelled, new development stopped, and our chief means of business, they wired and called me saying: "That's all right—we will stand the burden and do more than our part."

"Let me say, however, on the proposed tax on oil was a sliding scale according to the number of barrels produced. My district would not have suffered the increases levied on oil from more productive fields. I agreed to take a 25 per cent increase in my district simply because I didn't want our patriotism challenged, and accused of being punitive in voting taxes on the people and industries of other districts—and to the credit of our own people, who are deriving very little out of the oil business, they wired and called me saying: "That's all right—we will stand the burden and do more than our part."

Old Age Pensions Collie deplored the fact that so much time had been lost between the approval of the Old Age Assistance Amendment to the Constitution and its being put into effect. He also expressed dissatisfaction with some provisions of the law passed by the legislature and said that he sought to amend and correct the measure at the time it was pending.

"It is being handled in many quarters," he said, "that the law is deficient in several particulars, but let me remind you that this decision has been reached after months of calm and cool reflection; whereas, in the midst of a rush and heat of debate when the bill was before us for passage, I introduced a written motion (page 252 of the Senate Journal) which would have eliminated every detail of which is now being complained of. The changes which I advocated then would have started the payments last fall; would have eliminated the section which gives the power to investigators to discriminate between deserving applicants; would have reduced the administrative expense in half; and would have placed all qualified applicants under the law on an equal basis, with no distinction

"I was born in this district. I have lived here all my life; I know its industries and its needs; I love its people; they have been good to me, and my only ambition is to serve them."

"I expect to continue the fight for court procedure reforms. The bar associations of the state, as well as many leading laymen, have repeatedly endorsed these bills, but the legislature has failed to cooperate in their passage. In effect, they would eliminate technicalities, delays and absurdities, save expense and subserve a better administration of justice.

"There are other matters of extreme importance, and these issues and principles of government will be discussed candidly with the people, with confidence they may be duly considered to the advantage of public interest."

Honor Bestowed on District "Although I am serving my first term, my colleagues were generous enough to elect me president of the senate. This place goes to a much older member whose honor being recognized, I am deeply grateful."

made in their standards of living. If the standard of living clause remains in the law, there will be a deferential in the aid grants, not contemplated by the people, that is both discriminatory and unfair. Under such a policy a person of moderate means and used to all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life, according to his standard of living, will receive more than the person who has been on relief or who has had no means of support whatever. To pay a person of means more than another who is in need is grossly unjust, and the provision in the law authorizing it should be repealed.

Texas Oil Industry Could More Than Supply Demands of the Entire Nation U. S. Bureau of Mines Data Shows

Texas is not only the largest State in the Union, but, also, produces the largest volume of oil. In fact, present rates of oil production, based on official data compiled by the U. S. Bureau of Mines, show that Texas produces 40 per cent of the nation's oil supply.

So prolific are the existing oil producing fields of Texas that this state alone could probably produce five or six times the normal daily oil requirements of the entire United States. In fact, estimates prepared by the Statistical Department of the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas association of Texas indicate that Texas could reasonably produce as much as 14,000,000 barrels of oil a day, if all wells in the state, numbering more than 56,000, were opened to maximum flow. Under rigid state control, however, Texas' oil output is held at a daily rate of about 1,100,000 barrels, which is considered to be the reasonable market demand at this time.

which represents about 46 per cent of the total available supply in sight in the United States at this time.

Salient statistics of the Texas oil industry show that wells drilled in 1935 aggregated 12,000; crude output in 1934 was 376,000,000 barrels; natural gas production was 600 million cubic feet. There are 197 oil refineries in the state, with an aggregate daily operating capacity of more than a million barrels. The state also has 46,000 miles of pipe lines in operation.

The state's most prolific oil producing area is in East Texas, where, in one concentrated area, there are now more than 20,000 producing oil wells, many of them capable of producing 10,000 barrels of oil or more per day. In the Texas Gulf Coast, there are about 455 proven and prospective oil fields, principally salt-dome structures, which constitute a highly important present and future source of America's oil supply. In fact, very latest developments in the Texas Gulf Coast comprise an active drilling campaign to extend into the bay waters indenting the coast line along the Gulf of Mexico.

Texas truly an oil and gas empire, in proportions and enormous possibilities. It also has a place of great importance in the world's oil picture and its strategic location

Living Standard Pension Clause Removal Sought by W. B. Collie

(Editor's Note: The following story written by Byron C. Utecht appeared in a state paper Tuesday.)

BY BYRON C. UTECHT
AUSTIN, April 27.—When the legislature meets again, whether in special or regular session, Senator Wilbourne Collie, Eastland, will sponsor an amendment to the old age pension law to eliminate the standard of living clause and make the payments applicable to every person 65 or older. Collie, here today, announced he will urge this important change at the first opportunity. As the law now reads, the pension board may pay an applicant any amount it decides needed, according to his or her standard of living. Collie tried to get through an amendment to prevent such provision at the last special session.

With the standard of living eliminated all persons 65 or older would receive from the state $15 a month, and this would necessitate the levying of sufficient taxes to meet the load. Some question has been raised as to the constitutionality of the standard of living clause but it has never been tested in the courts.

"The taxes on the liquor will not come near paying the pension bill," Collie said, "let alone balancing the budget, with additional funds to be demanded for sick, blind, deaf and dumb. The tax on business, industry and natural resources will have to be increased to some extent, and we can not look to the ad valorem tax on property for additional revenue. Valuations and rates are carried at about the maximum over the state at present and must be reduced."

Collie, however, does not want to impose a heavy burden on industries in Texas, realizing, he pointed out, that these industries support payrolls, needed to purchase food, clothing and medicines for families. He is strongly opposed to the plan of F. W. Fisher to raise the oil tax to 15 cents a barrel, as well as to the proposed heavy increase on sulphur and natural gas. Such a plan, he pointed out, will do irreparable harm to the people of Texas.

"Some of our industries," Collie said, "have suffered from the effects of the depression and are still in disorder. Oil in Central West Texas carries an extremely heavy burden. There are 6,000 wells in this area, averaging less than four barrels daily, and if the tax went to 15 cents many hundreds of persons would be thrown out of employment and development would stop."

Walter Woodul, who as lieutenant-governor became acting governor today, had a few words, himself, to say about the condition of state finances. He wants a continuation of a deficit in the general revenue, now standing at about $8,000,000.

"Should enough money be raised by new taxes to overcome this deficit and provide all sorts of funds, the legislature would spend all of it," he said, "and we need some kind of a deficit as a brake in expenditures. Anyway, the Government doesn't have to declare dividends, and in a State like Texas, an empire with great resources, a deficit of $8,000,000 or more is nothing to be alarmed over."

The one big issue in the gubernatorial campaign so far is old age pensions and proposed taxes to meet the bill without crippling Texas industries.

and accessibility to world markets through its numerous coastal water shipping terminals. Yet, its enviable position is admittedly endangered by thinking citizens who continually strive to increase the oil industry's heavy tax burden. As it is, about 60 per cent (60 per cent) of the state's current tax revenue is derived from the Texas oil industry. In this respect, the future of Texas oil apparently lies in the hands of the legislators.

From the standpoint of natural advantages, however, oil in Texas is destined to occupy an increasingly important place in the world of industry and commerce.

HOW TO DRIVE A CAR SAFELY

By Professor Alvan R. Lauer, Iowa State College

Granting ability of the individual to think clearly, the important factors for safe automotive manipulation are:

1. Know yourself.
2. Know the other fellow's failings.
3. Know your car.
4. Know the law and traffic regulations.
5. Know the road.
6. Be careful all the time and in specific ways.

Few people realize their actual capacities and limitations. Most persons over-estimate themselves. Many underestimate themselves. Still others make no estimations at all. They just proceed and hope for the best. To consider some very basic facts, one must know something of three aspects of his being or existence; (a) how well he receives situations or stimuli; (b) how well he interprets such stimuli; and (c) how well he organizes his responses to meet a given situation. The third depends upon his speed of movement, psychophysical lag or reaction time, and the necessary energy or strength to

BEGIN HERE TODAY

LINDA BOULING, 30 years old, pretty and socially prominent in the little town of Newtown, is almost penniless after the sudden death of her father.

She becomes friendly with PETER GARDINER, political reporter, and shows him a scenario she has written. Peter gets Linda a job as society reporter.

OLYMPIA CARTER with whom Linda is in love, goes ahead for a year. His letters are far between and Linda tries to forget him. She becomes engaged to Peter, but postpones the date of the wedding.

HONEY HARMON, film actress, comes to Newtown on a "personal appearance" tour. She has a severe cold and goes to the local hospital. Peter interviews her, tells her about a play he has written.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IX

LINDA inspected herself carefully in the mirror, and spoke with sharp sarcasm, "Well, Miss Bourne, you certainly are a fascinating woman. What is it that you have, my girl, that ties men to you with such utter devotion?"

She gave an angry glance at the old-fashioned clock on the mantel and went back to her book. It was the newest best-seller, but for all the attention she was able to give it, it might have been a statistical report of taxes in 1845.

The clock struck 11 and Linda closed her book with a bang. Definitely she was not waiting up. She wouldn't wait until that hour for any man. And what right did Peter P. Gardiner have to treat her so rudely? He had distinctly said that he would arrive at 8 o'clock. He hadn't, and he hadn't telephoned. Very well, he'd never do that again. She could get along very well without him. If he never saw him again it would be all right!

Nevertheless, she went to the front door, opened it and peered down the street before she went upstairs.

"I'm acquiring the bad habit of talking to myself," she said coldly to herself as she mounted the stairs. And then did it again—"Movie star!"

The "movie star," Miss Honey Harmon, appeared clearly in Linda's mind. Miss Honey Harmon gazed adoringly into Peter Gardiner's eyes as she snuggled up to him in her car. Linda wished she hadn't seen them that afternoon.

Of course she'd have to see him again, she thought, brushing her hair savagely. She'd have to see him every day at the office. At that moment the blade, her career, the limitations of her life, presented a drab prospect, and she tried to look ahead at what the years might hold for her. True, she hadn't been sure she wanted to marry Peter. She loved him, in a way, but from the moment that he had promised to marry her, she had felt she was going to make him happy.

SHE laughed then, but not very lightly. Make men happy? What was the matter with women? Linda was only 20, and the only two men she had given any affection to had let her down. First Dix and now Peter.

He was probably holding Honey Harmon's hand at the moment and eating up her words, feeling like an irresistible male. Linda wished she lived in a world of women.

Pete Gardiner wasn't eating up Honey Harmon's words, but he was hanging on them. What Honey had to say to him this night was the most important thing in his life at the moment.

For nearly 10 days since Honey Harmon had come to Newtown, Pete had been dancing attendance on her, and since 5 that afternoon, since he had told her that he had a play he wanted her to read, he had been waiting for this moment.

He tried to talk about it in the afternoon, and he tried again during dinner and when finally Honey demanded to see the manuscript immediately, he brought it forth and forgot to telephone Linda. When he realized that Linda was waiting, he was sure that he could explain to her.

An exceedingly pretty frown appeared on her alabaster brow as Honey pored over the pages of Pete's play. She curled up in a mound of pillows and assumed pose 61 as she perused page after page and Pete smoked cigaret after cigaret, not daring to interrupt the train of thought. If there were any. There was.

"But Pete"—how he hated to be called Pete—"it isn't me!"

Pete didn't answer that. He still hoped.

"It's too marvelous, but it's not for me. It's sophisticated." Pete agreed, and smiled at her. "But it's a new kind of sophistication. Julie is young and glamorous. She's deep. She is you!"

"Oh, darling!" Honey, the deep one, rose from her pillows and touched him lightly on the cheek. "You really do know me, don't you?"

She ran her hand through her curls, placed a cigaret in an ivory holder and glided across the room. "You see I can't be what I really am. My public wants me to be something entirely different." Her eyes pleaded with Pete to understand.

He didn't. He knew Honey's pictures and managed to point this out gently.

"No, you don't understand. I'm just a little pawn in my producer's game. You never can tell what she is going to do, but before I left Hollywood, we had conferences—oh, so many of them—and you know big bugaboo Box Office directors all. My producers direct-ply won't let me make another sophisticated picture."

"All right, Honey," Pete smiled charmingly and picked up his script. "Well, skip it. I wanted you to see it."

"I think it's grand, Pete, and I'm sure you'll sell it. You ought to be in Hollywood."

Pete didn't tell her what he thought of Hollywood. He said nothing, and whenever Pete said nothing, Honey always found something to say, particularly if the subject had been herself.

"The real reason I'm on my way east is to find a play. I do wish you had another. What my producers want is to cast me in something about a little working girl." She sighed. "It seems that the public is more interested in working girls than glamorous ladies these days. Of all things, they want me to find a play about a stenographer. Something where there is a big bad boss and,

and . . ."

HONEY had more than that to say, but when she arrived at the boss part, Pete was on his feet, a new light in his eye and his hat in his hand.

"Honey," he said, "I have got another play! And it's about a stenographer and two big bad bosses only one isn't bad . . ."

"Two?" Honey asked.

"One a Menjon and one a Gabble," he promised.

"But I must see it!" Honey exclaimed.

Pete was already on his way to the door. "It's down at the office. I'll be back with it in 10 minutes."

One hour and 10 minutes later Linda sat up in bed and pulled the cord on her bed-lamp. Below the bell was pealing insistently. She drew a robe over her nightgown, thrust her feet into slippers and went to the window.

"Who's there?" she called.

"Linda, come down and let me in. I've wonderful news for you," Pete called back to her.

"I'll not come down, and you have nothing to say that would interest me. Good night Mr. Gardiner!" Linda shut the window with an unmistakable bang.

The bell pealed again.

"He'll wake the neighbors if he keeps that up," Linda said as she trotted down the stairs and opened the door.

"In addition to being the rudest . . ."

"Listen, Linda, I can explain. I've been with Honey Harmon all evening . . ."

"I guessed that," she said coldly.

" . . . and she's bought the scenario!"

"What scenario?" asked Linda, startled into forgetting her anger for the moment.

"Yours!"

taining alcohol not in excess of 14 per cent by volume in Eastland county; that appropriate orders were made by the commissioners court declaring the result of said election.

It is contended by plaintiffs that the election held on April 18, 1936, involved the same issue as on Jan. 3, 1936, involving Section 32 of Article I of the Texas Liquor Control Act which provides as follows: "After the first local option election held as provided in this act, in any county, etc., no subsequent election upon the same issue in the same political subdivision shall be held within one (1) year from the date of the preceding local option election in said county."

It is the contention of the defendant that there was contemplated by the legislature that three issues might be submitted to the voters of any county or political subdivision to determine whether or not the sale of liquors containing certain alcoholic content might be submitted to the voters for determination, that such issues are separate and distinct, one from the other, and that the issue submitted in the election held in Eastland county on Jan. 3, 1936, was a different issue to that submitted to the voters on April 18, 1936, and for that reason the election in April, 1936, was in all respects legal.

In passing upon the issues involved in this suit it is necessary for the court to construe the articles of the statute relied upon by the parties to this controversy for the purpose of clarifying the issues involved. Section 40 of Article I of the Texas Liquor Control Act provides in part as follows:

"The commissioners court upon its own motion may, or upon petition as herein provided shall, as provided in Section 32, order local

A Townsend Plan advocate, Representative Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, above, is Democratic nominee for the Nebraska seat in the U. S. Senate now held by George W. Norris. Carpenter won by a small margin in a four-cornered race. He is expected to face opposition in his own party in favor of Norris if the veteran liberal will reconsider his decision to retire and run as an independent.

In view of the statements as above quote and agree with the contention of the plaintiffs that the same issues were involved in the election held on April 18, 1936, as was involved in the election on Jan. 3, 1936, but I am convinced that it was the intention of the legislature to create and provide these separate and distinct issues to be voted on from time to time by the citizens of the various counties of the state.

The temporary writ of injunction heretofore issued in this case against the defendant is therefore dissolved and judgment now rendered in favor of the defendant, that the plaintiffs take nothing in this suit and that the relief for in their petition be denied, with costs.

(b) "For legalizing the sale of vinous and malt liquors that do not contain alcohol in excess of four per cent (4 per cent) by weight."

contain alcohol in excess of fourteen per cent (14 per cent) by volume," and "Against legalizing the sale of vinous and malt liquors that do not contain alcohol in excess of fourteen per cent (14 per cent) by volume."

(c) "For legalizing the sale of all liquors," and "Against legalizing the sale of all liquors."

After a careful study of the statutory provisions above cited, I am of the opinion that it was the intention of the legislature to authorize elections to be held in the various counties and political subdivisions thereof in Texas to determine whether or not the sale of intoxicating liquors of certain alcoholic contents should be legalized and that for the convenience of the voters the legislature designated by alcoholic contents three issues that might be voted on by the citizens of any county or political subdivision thereof, these issues are quoted above and referred to as Subdivisions a, b, and c. Subdivision a provides for an election to determine whether or not malt liquor containing an alcoholic content not to exceed 4 per cent by weight may be legalized; subdivision b provides for an election to determine whether or not malt liquors containing an alcoholic content not to exceed 14 per cent by volume may be legalized, and subdivision c provides for an election to determine whether or not all liquors are to be legalized.

In view of the statements as above quote and agree with the contention of the plaintiffs that the same issues were involved in the election held on April 18, 1936, as was involved in the election on Jan. 3, 1936, but I am convinced that it was the intention of the legislature to create and provide these separate and distinct issues to be voted on from time to time by the citizens of the various counties of the state.

The temporary writ of injunction heretofore issued in this case against the defendant is therefore dissolved and judgment now rendered in favor of the defendant, that the plaintiffs take nothing in this suit and that the relief for in their petition be denied, with costs.

Better Homes Concert Tonight, Friday
The Eastland Methodist church auditorium will be open to the public at 7:30 p. m. tonight on occasion of concert which opens at 7:45 p. m. under auspices of Better Homes Week.

The concert is of unusual value, presenting musical talent of the city and a number of Better Homes features including the motif of the silver gift offering and book reception.

It is hoped there will be a generous response to either one or both of these offerings, to be used in establishing, on a more permanent foundation, the library for the colored people, which is to be named "Frank Evans Memorial Library."

The original library was collected under auspices of Better Homes four years ago, and placed in the school for colored children.

Books will be received at door of auditorium by committee in charge, and the silver offering accepted, during the offertory by Mrs. D. L. Kinnaird.

The program will be presided over by Mrs. Bert McGlamery and will be linked with interesting introductions.

Presidents of the clubs of Eastland will form the reception committee to welcome guests.

Three features include violin solo by John Allen Mouser, with Wilda Drago on piano; the address by Mrs. J. M. Perkins, and the voice solo by Mrs. Grady Pipkin.

The rich program will climax in the two-part trio, "In the Chimney Corner," by Music Study club members.

The concert will be a brilliant one, with all those taking part in evening dress.

An unusual feature of program will be the acapello choruses by choirs of the colored churches. The prelude to the formal program and to be given on steps of church entrance. Public invited to attend.

WORSE THAN WAR
WARS under 300,000 AUTOS almost 400,000

In many respects the problem of automobile accidents is worse than war. During the last 15 years the number of deaths from automobile accidents in this country has approximated 400,000. But during the 15 years constituting the total length of time of all the wars in which this country as a nation has been engaged, the number killed and who died of wounds received in action has been less than 200,000.

In the last 10 years, according to the Travelers Insurance Company, deaths from automobile accidents increased from 21,528 in 1925 to more than 35,000 for 1935—a gain of 67 per cent. During this same period, the number of cars on the road increased only 31 per cent, and the population of the country increased only 11 per cent. Deaths gained twice as much as the number of cars in use and six times as much as the increase in population.

Death At Night

DARK 21,480 DAYLIGHT 14,620
During the normal hours of daylight last year, from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., according to statistics of the Travelers Insurance Company, there were 14,620 persons killed in automobile accidents, while in the normal hours of darkness, from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m., there were 21,480 deaths. This record raises the question, "Shouldn't drivers and pedestrians be afraid of the dark?"

The exceedingly high rate of death per accident for the normal hours of darkness puts the spotlight on the conditions and conduct of drivers and pedestrians responsible for such a record of fatalities after sun down. At night drivers can't easily avoid what they can't see. This is something that pedestrians need to remember.

Girls Advised To Drop Rouge For One Night's Date
By United Press BLUFFTON, Ohio.—Feminine members of Bluffton college's popular class in marriage who are being "squired" will give their faces a good soaping on "date" nights if they heed the warning of Dr. Frank Slutz, Dayton, O., to "remember, there comes a time in courtship when cosmetics will do no good."

He emphasized there is a time in every courtship when there is real appraisal of the prospective wife by the "beau" and at this time no amount of paint or powder will influence the thinking of a young man's decision.

Five pillars of making given by Dr. Slutz were as follows: Health "Make sure you don't marry a hospital," he warned. Family background—"The prospective bride represents a whole group of persons who will call on you after marriage," he said. Likeness—"The couple should have similar likes and dislikes."

Ages recommended for marriage by Dr. Slutz were from 22 to 26 for girls, and from 25 to 29 for men with no marriage for college students until their school days are over.

Star in Mountain Saga

Sylvia Sidney and Henry Fonda are co-starred in Walter Wanger's Technicolor version of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," the famous John Fox, Jr., novel of Cumberland Mountain "feudists." The picture opens Sunday at the Connellee Theatre.

LUCKY GAMBLE SETS COLMAN ON LOVE TRAIL

"Lucky in cards, unlucky in love." This adage is subjected to a conclusive test by Ronald Colman, as the suave, debonair prince who gambles at cards and love, in 20th Century's romantic comedy, "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," which comes today to the Connellee Theatre.

Set in the gay capitol of Europe and teeming with the brilliancy and color of the continental smart set, the picture has Joan Bennett, in the female lead. The supporting cast includes Colin Clive, Nigel Bruce, Montagu Love, Frank Reicher, Lionel Pape, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Charles Fallon.

Colman enacts the role of a penniless Russian prince who uses the savings of a number of expatriate friends to run a handful of francs into ten million in the Sporting Club at Monte Carlo.

Miss Bennett has the role of the girl hired by the gambling addict to lure Colman back to Monte Carlo for another session at the tables. She falls in love with the man she is paid to deceive.

She leads Colman on a trail of romance, moonlight and kisses that ends right back in Monte Carlo, while she remorsefully prays that he will win again. A series of surprising episodes brings a happy ending to the difficulties in which the young lovers find themselves.

Stephen Roberts directed "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," which was produced under the personal supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck.

"TRAIL OF LONESOME PINE" IS MOTION PICTURE MILESTONE

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," first natural-color motion picture of the outdoors, opens Sunday at the Connellee Theatre, with Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda in the starring roles, and Fred Stone as the head of the supporting cast.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," based on John Fox Jr.'s famous novel of the same title, marks a milestone in the history of movies. It is the first picture in which the color element is taken as a matter of course, and subordinated to the story-interest.

Filmed entirely at Big Bear, Calif., where the scenery almost duplicates that of the Cumberland Mountain region where Fox's novel is set, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" tells how an ancient hill feud involving two families, is affected by the inroads of civilization, in the person of a young engineer who arrives to construct a railroad line through the region. Color is handled in an entirely new fashion in the film. Henry Hathaway, who won fame through direction of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," revolutionized accepted technique in his direction of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," by insisting that bright colors be eliminated because they detract from the story and characters. He accentuated the realism of the setting by employing only natural shades, with mountaineers' cabins of weather-beaten lumber and rough-hewn logs; costumes of dull shades; and makeup of the players reduced to a minimum. The battles between the hill folk, and the three-cornered romance involving Miss Sidney, MacMurray and Fonda, are stressed above tricky color effects, it is claimed. The picture was made by the new Technicolor process.

NINO MARTINI, NOTED TENOR, IN FILM DEBUT

With triumphs in the field of opera and radio already his, youthful, handsome Nino Martini turns to conquer new fields as he makes his long anticipated motion picture debut in "Here's to Romance," the Jesse L. Lasky production coming Sunday to the Lyric Theatre.

Assisted by Genevieve Tobin and Anita Louise, Martini enacts the leading roles in this picture which describes the tragedy, the comedy and the romance in the life of a man with a golden voice.

The story, which moves from New York to bohemian Paris, is that of a man who is loved by two women, but who really loves only one.

His success, however, depends on the woman whose affection he cannot reciprocate, and there are many amusing and some near-tragic adventures before he achieves success and the romance for which he yearns.

Among the operatic favorites which Martini sings are arias from the work of Mascagni, Leoncavallo and Puccini, supplemented by two new popular songs by Con Conrad and Herb Magidson.

Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink, world famous concert artist, makes her debut in "Here's to Romance." Maria Cambarelli and Vincente Escudero, who have won fame by their dancing, are other notable members of the cast. Alfred E. Green directed the picture.

"Summerizing" for Safety, Economy, Urged by Magnolia

DALLAS.—Drivers of the many new cars on the highways this spring are learning the importance of a semi-annual check-up for summer driving protection, it is indicated by the large number of new automobiles receiving "summerize" service at Magnolia stations, Fred M. Lege Jr., vice president in charge of marketing for the Magnolia Petroleum Company, reports.

"Summerize," the seven-point protective service provided by Magnolia stations and dealers, safeguards new cars, whose long life and economical operation will depend largely on the care given them during the first six months," Mr. Lege said. "This service for cars of any age prepares them for smooth, safe operation all summer and eliminates many expensive hot weather driving troubles."

"Certain simple precautions are necessary to put any automobile or truck in condition for safe and economical summer driving," Mr. Lege said. "Thinner, quick-flowing winter lubricants are not capable of resisting the high temperatures generated under summer heat in the crankcase, differential, transmission and other vital parts of a motor vehicle. Heavier lubricants are necessary to protect the motor in hot weather, and gasoline adjusted for summer use, as Mobilgas is, should also be employed for best results."

"Summerize" service includes seven distinct operations worked out by Magnolia automotive engineers as those most necessary to protect a motor vehicle against the high temperatures of summer driving," Mr. Lege said. "In addition to draining the crankcase of dirty, winter grade oil and refilling with summer Mobiloil, the transmission and differential are drained of winter lubricant, cleaned and refilled with Mobil gear oil for summer driving. A thorough grease job of mobilubrication is performed according to manufacturer's charts and recommendations. The radiator is drained of anti-freeze solution and cleaned. The battery is checked and filled with distilled water, corrosion is removed and terminals greased. The gasoline tank is filled with Mobilgas, which has been adjusted for summer driving."

LONDON.—A new electric train, which stops and starts without any noticeable jerks, is in operation on London's underground system. It is equipped with a new system of controlling electric current, devised by an Italian engineer.

SALT LAKE CITY.—Carola Goya, famous Spanish dancer, whose legs are insured for $100,000, told reporters here she "wouldn't perform for the movies for $50,000 a week." Her favorite American dancer is Fred Astaire.

Pick Out the One Who's "Nerts"

It would be suspected that when people rush about it's because of some good reason. Perhaps going to a fire, or something like that. It has been said that there's a surplus of leisure in America, but that everybody is in more of a hurry than ever before. Automobiles are made faster than ever. People drive faster than ever. They even die faster than ever. Most persons think the dare-devil aerial stuntster plays fast and loose with life. They say, "I wouldn't do that." They shudder when they see a window cleaner hanging by a life belt, high above the street. Most persons say, "I wouldn't do that." They watch with bated breath the structural steel worker walking almost gingerly around on the skeleton of a huge skyscraper. None of that for the average person.

The stunts of the rope walker, the trapeze performer, the high diver and all his brothers and sisters are not pursuits for the mine-run of individuals. Not by a jug full. But few drivers regard in a serious light the hazards of motoring. To most there's nothing to worry about when a car is being driven at high rates of speed, or when a curve or corner is taken sharply, or when another car is met almost head on at the top of a hill. The record of the occurrence of automobile accidents last year—the smashing of cars with trains, against trees and telephone poles and against bridges, the wrecking of cars going off the road, and the collision of cars at innumerable places—all go to indicate that many drivers don't realize the constant risks which only the utmost care makes it possible to avoid.

NATIONAL SAFETY

(By John E. Long, President National Safety Council)

Safety means the saving of human life from accidents. But in approaching the question of accident prevention one must realize that accidents constitute a universal problem, one that involves every activity in which we participate.

This problem confronts every individual. It is everybody's business to see that another Morro Castle disaster shall not take place. But everybody's business must be brought down to someone's responsibility if we are to secure real and lasting results. Accidents will stop only when each individual accepts his personal responsibility for our accident toll.

Accidents continue to occur because many of us evade this responsibility. We do things unthinkingly, but we continue to start fires with kerosene, to shoot off guns that are not loaded; we still try to beat the train to the railroad crossing, we do many other foolish things that frequently end in tragedy.

True, we must never abandon our efforts to eliminate hazards, nor to enact and enforce reasonable laws, rules and regulations, but more than all other things committed do we need to bring our millions of associates, friends and fellow citizens to an appreciation of their responsibility for the avoidance of accidents.

And to do this we must utilize every possible contact. We must strive to influence every habit, custom. We must secure the assistance of our employers at work; fathers and mothers at home; children; teachers, doctors and lawmakers, as well as those selected to enforce our laws.

Now that rubber class has been invented, a Mussolini deft may set monacles bouncing on the floor of Parliament.
