MORGAN TELLS WHY AMERICA ENTERED WAR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—John Pierpont Morgan twirled a piece of paper between his fingers today as he told the senate munitions committee the United States entered the World War because of German insults and injuries, rather than because of financial affairs.

The 68-year-old head of the House of Morgan was called as the first witness in the committee hearing into banking practices at the time the United States was drawn into the world conflict.

Morgan testified that German "insults and injuries" made it impossible for the United States to refrain from entering the World War.

Morgan and his partners emphasized that after the "criminal" invasion of Belgium by Germany, the great financial house "found it quite impossible to be impartial as between right and wrong."

"We agreed that we should do all in our power to help the allies win."

Chairman Gerald Nye, seeking information into the causes of America entering the conflict almost two decades ago, had explained to the committee was preparing for the strongest neutrality law on which the house began work today. He sought Morgan's views on affairs which drew us into the conflict and how to keep America out of the next war.

'Terrible Touhy' Terror No More

A palsied wreck, cowering hunched to his chair after arrest in Chicago, "Terrible Tommy" Touhy little resembled the desperado who led a gang that terrorized the Midwest and boasted that he carried a vial of nitro-glycerin to use if cornered by the law. Touhy, seized in his bed, faces federal charges of mail robbery.

AUTHOR OF NEW SERIAL LIKES NIGHT CLUBS, MOTOR BOATS

Nard Jones, novelist and short story writer, believes every person should have a hobby. And two hobbies, according to Jones, are better than one.

The author, whose latest serial, "The Strange Case of Julia Craig," begins Jan. 16, in this newspaper, has several hobbies himself. Among them are boats of all sorts, night clubs, writing poetry, and directing amateur theatricals. He claims these hobbies have given him some of his best fiction ideas.

For instance, when he set to work to write "The Strange Case of Julia Craig," the story of a night club singer, only a few chapters had been completed before the heroine arrived on a private yacht. Later scenes—and some of the most exciting in the serial—take place on a gambling ship.

Of all sports, Nard Jones' favorite is motorboating. He thinks night clubs are entertaining and goes to them when he has the time. It was such a visit that supplied the central theme for "The Strange Case of Julia Craig." Because Jones does most of his fiction writing at night, he's usually working, though, when other people are ready for recreation.

He is the author of four novels and for several years has been contributing to the country's most widely-read magazines. His serial, "Sun-Tan," was one of the most popular newspaper serials of 1935.

Jones makes his home in Seattle where he was born 30 years ago. He is married and has one son. Before settling down to writing fiction he tried his hand at such varied occupations as advertising, selling groceries, running an elevator, operating a motion picture projector and conducting a column in a newspaper.

Nard Jones

"The Strange Case of Julia Craig" tells the story of a pretty ambitious girl, determined to make her living as a singer. She succeeds, after repeated discouragement. Julia Craig becomes a celebrity only to find herself involved in a sensational murder statements that are incriminating. Bitterest blow is Julia's discovery that the man she loves believes she is guilty of the crime. How she convinces him of her innocence, and how he, in turn, discovers the identity of the real murderer, traces this individual and secures a confession gives a whirlwind finish to the exciting story. The first chapter of "The Strange Case of Julia Craig," will appear Jan. 16 in this paper.

NEW PLAN TO AID FARMERS TO BE SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The New Deal appealed to farmers of America today to help plan for the future of agriculture "in the light of the supreme court decision" destroying the AAA.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace invited farm leaders and other spokesmen of agriculture to attend conferences "to discuss plans for agriculture."

Wallace's invitation was the first positive action toward restoring the keystone of its farm recovery program, which a 6 to 3 decision of the supreme court shattered.

The administration sped conferences on the possibility of new legislation, or substitute measures to replace the AAA. Meantime the entire farm program was in a state of suspended animation.

Orders went out to all field offices to cease all activities under the program.

Benefit payments to farmers were stopped, pending instructions.

The question of processing taxes, collected or due, was in abeyance pending the administration decisions on the future.

From congress came challenges to the authority of the supreme court and announcement that the legislators would make every possible effort to find a loophole to restore the program.

FARMERS HAVE VARIED VIEWS ABOUT THE AAA

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 7.—A calamity or a blessing. Such were the views of agriculture today on the supreme court action on the AAA.

From Texas to Minnesota farmers voiced their feelings. The majority said it was a "terrible decision," "a stunning blow."

Demand for immediate legislation to secure the benefits of AAA were made. Agriculture must have something to compare with industry's tariff "which is unjust and a burden."

Bruce Johnson, a Boone county Iowa, farmer, felt the court was right. "No farmer likes to be told how much to raise," he said.

Davis Dammier, wheat grower of Amarillo, Texas, disagreed with the decision and saw in it hard times for the farmer. He said the AAA was "the only safeguard the farmer had." He said there would be a removal of tariff walls or an extension of agriculture of comparable benefits. Some western farmers will support the administration on the issue, he believes.

'Skeleton' Cases Set for Feb. 17

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Henry will answer murder charges in 91st district court at Eastland Monday, Feb. 17, in connection with the death of H. L. McBece.

Identity of McBece was established by a metal tag of the type issued to state highway department workers found in his clothing and recognition of dental work performed by an Eastland dentist.

Venires from which jurors will be selected will be made.

San Jacinto Still Is a Battleground But Another Kind

HOUSTON, Jan. 7.—San Jacinto battle ground was the scene of a new fight today, not for Texas independence, but art.

A volley of words was fired by Julian Muench, Houston artist and sculptor, in an open letter to Gus Brandt, member of a committee of masons in charge of the monument being erected on the historic site.

Muench said the work was comparable to a zoological freak, such as an animal of a donkey in front and a cow behind.

RAILROADS OF NATIONS SHOW BIG DEFICIT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today forecast that even full return to prosperity would not lift America's railroads out of their financial morass unless effective methods of meeting competition of new transport forms are found.

The commission, which is expected to decide shortly on the question of passenger rates, also reported that roads experimenting in low passenger fares showed "encouraging" revenue increases.

Reporting that up to Oct. 1, 1935, eighty-four railroads operating more than 25 per cent of the total rail mileage were in receipt of that activity in the former adjustment programs were being cancelled.

Cancellation of dates this week for receiving applications for allotments on the government's proposed potato control program was made. Producers were advised that the sign-up on final compliance of the corn-hog contracts was also cancelled.

Plans had called for county-wide work this week in all communities by the agent's office on those adjustment programs.

The court's decision affected second rental and third payment checks on the 1935 cotton program.

Ring in New Year for Economic Guessers

Right about now is the time when the prophet gets his rifle down from over the mantelpiece, slips it a bit of oil, and goes out to kill him a bear.

Unfortunately, the business of prophesying being somewhat uncertain, he is more likely than not to come back with a squirrel or Neighbor Jones' tomcat instead.

This, in other words, is the open season for guessing about what is likely to happen during the new year. And to see how risky such guessing is you have only to look back at some of the guesses that were made about 1935.

First of all, we were assured that the slow death of NRA would plunge us into chaos. We had this on the excellent authority of General Johnson himself, with the added assurance of Donald Richberg—remember him?

So the NRA died, in the course of 1935, and chaos came not. Instead, the business community heaved a collective sigh of relief and went out to get some more orders, Mr. Richberg retired to wherever it is that ex-NRA directors retire to, and General Johnson set up a nice business as President Roosevelt's most friendly critic.

Then there were economists who predicted (a) that an expansion of bank loans would certainly follow the pumping of government money into the banks thereby stimulating business, and that (b) the new Securities Act would destroy business by making financing impossible.

Well, the government pumped and pumped all year long, and still bank loans have not risen appreciably; and this has been the best year for new financing, Securities Act or not, that has been seen in some time.

Now there may not seem to be much point in going into all these long-dead prophecies, because most of them lie within the field of economics and that is a field where even the seventh son of a seventh son has to hang on to his rabbit's foot.

But economic prophecies are the kind that interest us most, and they are the kind we hear most often, and it is worth noticing that they don't pan out any better than any other kind.

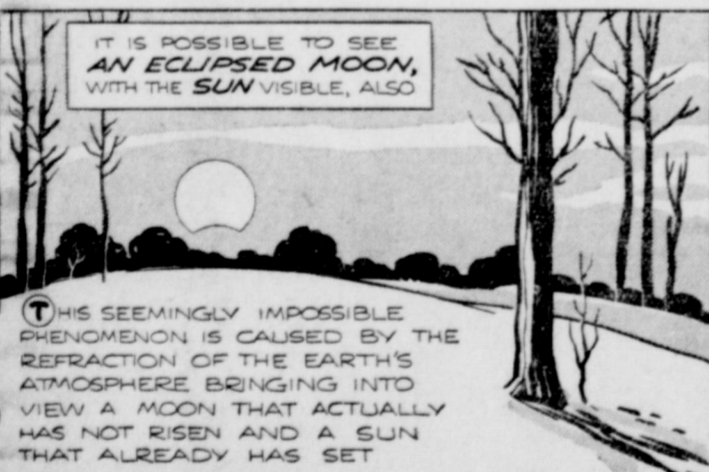

The seers are squinting at the sun right now and making their forecasts for 1936; and if we judge by the past we can only say that very, very few of them know what they are talking about.

We can predict anything we please for our country during the coming year, but none of us knows anything about it; and the one fairly safe bet is that nothing will happen just as we expect it to, but that the country will somehow manage to get through the year—and bring us to 1937, all ready to listen to some new prophecies.

It's unnecessary for legionnaires to parade in scanty attire, says Legion head. Still, it helps suggest the need of a bonus.

IT IS POSSIBLE TO SEE AN ECLIPSED MOON, WITH THE SUN VISIBLE, ALSO... THIS SEEMINGLY IMPOSSIBLE PHENOMENON IS CAUSED BY THE REFRACTION OF THE EARTH'S ATMOSPHERE BRINGING INTO VIEW A MOON THAT ACTUALLY HAS NOT RISEN AND A SUN THAT ALREADY HAS SET

A FEW instances of such an eclipse as mentioned above have occurred although it seems impossible, since it is a cardinal principle of eclipses that the sun, moon and earth must be in a straight line. Due to the refraction of the earth's atmosphere the sun and moon are displaced about one-half of a degree, which is sufficient to bring them into view

Texas Pecans Are More Plentiful Than In Years

DALLAS, Tex.—Texan pecans, which helped fill the nation's Christmas stockings, were the most plentiful in history—and almost the lowest in price.
Because most pecan trees grow wild in this state, no exact figure is available on the number of trees. Experts estimate there are from 80,000,000 to 100,000,000. Federal crop authorities estimated 44,000,000 pounds were produced from those trees in 1935.
Choicest pecans are those cultivated in private orchards, with the quality improved through grafting. Pecans from such "improved" trees, total less than 5 per cent of the state's output. Drought and other bad growing conditions in 1934 cut the state's yields to 13,000,000 pounds, of which 390,000 pounds were from "improved" trees.
This year's bumper crop, exceeding by nearly 2,000,000 pounds the previous record yield of 1926, brought farmers less than five cents a pound. So low was the price that pecan farmers, depending on their crop for Christmas money, asked federal loans to allow them to hold crops until prices went up. Farmers generally received three to four cents per pound for pecans.
Texas' pecan tree has one distinction no other Texas tree can offer—it is the state tree. The 39th Texas Legislature in 1919, adopted the pecan as state tree. Many prominent Texans have made pecan-growing and improvement a hobby. Gov. James S. Hogg ordered a pecan tree planted on his grave. Other pecan seedlings were planted on the capitol lawn.
During 1936, centennial year, seedlings from the present trees will be carried from Austin to other parts of the state.

ARTICHOKEs, generally speak-with Nesselrode pudding in this country—considered quite beyond ordinary housekeeping skill as well as budgeting pocket-books.

It's a pity the idea prevails for French artichokes usually are most plentiful at market when other fresh vegetables are scarce and high. They offer a delicious variety at a most opportune time, too, because they are very simple to prepare and serve and can take the place of a green salad.

Cook in Salted Water
To prepare for cooking, wash
through several waters and cut stem close to leaves. Pull off hard outer leaves and cut off about 3-4 inch down. Let stand in cold water to cover to forty minutes.

Each leaf is pulled off with the fingers, dipped into the sauce and the soft part at the end eaten, the rest discarded. After all the leaves have been pulled away and the thistle-like choke removed,
the heart is eaten with a fork.

Stuffed Artichokes
Four globe artichokes, 1-2 round mushrooms, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 teaspoon chopped shallot, yolk 1 egg, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons oil, 4 thin slices bacon, salt and pepper, 2 carrots, 1 onion, 2 coarse blades
celery, 6 sprigs parsley, bay leaf, 4 tablespoons white wine, 1-1/2 cups veal stock, 2 teaspoons flour.

SCOPE OF LAW ON NEUTRALITY STIRS DESPUTE

By RONALD G. VAN TINE
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—The task of writing permanent legislation to keep the United States out of foreign wars will be placed at the top of the list of major problems demanding early attention of the new Congress.

General dissatisfaction with the existing neutrality law which expires on Feb. 29 has been expressed by administration officials who believe President Roosevelt should be given broader powers to halt the flow of war materials from this country in times of conflict abroad.

The Senate munitions committee planned to start building a foundation this week for drastic proposals to cut share of the war credits to belligerent nations and make it mandatory upon the President to embargo all materials used in warfare.

J. P. Morgan Called
J. P. Morgan, New York financier, and some of his leading partners will testify at the opening of hearings designed to trace the course followed by the United States before it entered the last war. Committeemen contend the ineffectiveness of neutrality legislation in the World War period was one of the influences drawing
this nation into the conflict.

Through Morgan and his associates, the committee hopes to show that Morgan and Co. received the largest share of the war boom trade and that the nation's credit machinery was hinged upon continuation of the war and an allied victory. Investigators will fire questions at Morgan designed to show that financial backers realized they would have been flir-ting with collapse if the Allies had halted or if the Allies had lost.

Other financial institutions,
such as the National City Bank,
Bonbright and Co., Kuhn Loeb
Company, and the Guarantee Trust Company, also may be brought into the investigation at a later date to complete what investigators predict will be a picture of a nation struggling ineffec-tually to preserve its neutrality against the pressure of munitions makers and financiers.

Plans to be Varied
A score of new proposals will be offered soon after Congress gets down to work. Most of them would depart from the language in the existing neutrality law affecting
"arms, ammunition and implements of war" to include all war materials, including copper and oil, in the list of commodities to be embargoed by the President.

Administration officials claim that experiences during the present Italo-Ethiopian conflict have demonstrated the need for a more drastic program. The President said recently that Congress would be asked to give the subject speedy attention, but he declined to reveal what new proposals would be sought.

Sen. Bennett Clark, D., Mo., a member of the munitions committee and a leader in the temporary neutrality program, announced he would sponsor a law so drastic in its provisions that American citizens would find it impossible to journey through a war zone into a neutral country.

"We want mandatory action on both the financial and material angles," Clark said. "We must settle our neutrality policy now. If we change and straddle later, it will involve us in difficulties as some nation might interpret as an act of hostility."

luck. Soon he'll tread the altar

bles, is joining Miss Ryan in Miami for the event.

Scope Not Defined
Chairman Sam D. McReynolds
D., Tenn., of the House Foreign affairs committee, after a conference with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, said the administration had reached no definite conclusion on a permanent program but that it probably would be "considerably wider" than the temporary measure.

Rep. George Holden Tinkham,
R., Mass., veteran leader in foreign affairs legislation, said he would introduce a resolution calling for repeal of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact because it
"means war, not peace."

He charged the purpose of the pact was to "enlist the aid of the

PREMIERE MAY BE 'BREAK' TO THE TALENTED

The Hollywood Premiere at the Connellee Theatre Saturday midnight is described as being in that class of activity which has produced many of the stars of the screen and radio.

In Texas alone numerous names have come from various forms of contests and amateur plays. Ginger Rogers and Joan Blondell won in dancing contests and bathing girl revues. This called them to the attention of the producers and thus began their ascent to fame and fortune. Clara Bow was a contest winner. Studios have conducted organized "search for talent"
shows out of which have come many finds.

Entrants in the Hollywood Premiere have a chance to test their abilities as performers and to gain valuable experience in stage work and personal expression as well as to have a lot of fun along with friends and neighbors.

The Hollywood Premiere is a double show. The front of the Connellee will be brilliantly lighted with flood lights, a microphone and loud-speaker installed, and an outside reception will be held duplicating the ceremonies of the premiere showings of the new pictures in Hollywood. This will occur at 10:30 Saturday night. The next event will begin at 11 p. m.
on the stage, when the entrants will do their impersonations of the stars.

TIME TO 'Take Stock'
It is an immemorial custom of retail business to take account of stock in January. Down comes every bolt of cloth off the shelves—every dress and pair of shoes—
every can of tomatoes—every tube of tooth paste. Busy clerks check inventory. Managers figure their new merchandise requirements.
And then come the sales!
There's an idea in all this for the woman who runs her home on a business basis. No need to spend days at
it. But why not take a systematic peek at the linen closet when you're upstairs? An appraising glance at the medicines and toilet requisites in the bathroom cabinet?
A candid look at the furniture while you're dusting?
It's time to take stock. And when you've made a list of the things you need, sit down with this newspaper
and see how economically you can buy them now—during January's stock-taking sales. You'll be delighted as you read the advertisements, to find how far a moderate outlay will go!

Railroads of—

annual report, "that emergence from the unfavorable financial situation is dependent not only on a revival of business, especially in construction activities, but also on the adaptation of transportation methods to conditions created by competition from other means of transportation."
The financial status of the carriers was depicted in gloomy colors. Although traffic increased slightly during 1935, bringing higher revenues, operating expenses kept pace.
Net Deficit Rises
As a result, the commission pointed out, net deficit of Class I steam railways for the first seven months of 1935 rose to $78,025,038, compared with $29,897,250 in the 1934 period.
At the same time, the commission said, railroads partially met increased wage costs by reducing employment and continued maintenance at the low depression level.
"The operating revenues," the commission said, "have in 1935 continued above the lowest level of the depression, but there has been lacking the pronounced improvement which was necessary to absorb the increased level of wages and material cost."
It reported net railway operating income in the first eight months of 1935 at 12.9 per cent below that in the 1934 months although the operating ratio rose from 74.56 to 77.04.
In an effort to meet this situation, the commission said roads were active in extending pick-up and delivery service, replacing unprofitable trains with bus and truck transport, dominating bus transport lines, experimenting with lighter equipment, increasing comfort and speed of passenger traffic and seeking economies through pooling of traffic.
Fare Decision Soon
The commission revealed that a decision in its long-continued investigation of passenger fares may be expected shortly.
Without indicating the nature of the decision, the commission did advise that southern and western railroads where experimental low passenger fares were adopted showed "steady and encouraging increases in both passengers carried and revenue received."
Meantime, eastern carriers where rates have been held at standard levels "are just about holding their own."
The decline in passenger traffic and revenue, steady since 1923, appears to have struck its lowest level, the commission said.
The commission recommended a brief program of new legislation including:
Further legislation to protect rail employees losing their jobs due to abandonment or unification of roads.
An amendment to the act to permit regulation of minimum rates of water carriers within the I. C. C. jurisdiction.
Provision of a penalty against carriers which fail to make correct responses to requests from the commission for information.
Amendment of the I. C. C. act to provide appellate divisions of five or more commissioners and thus aid the commission's effort

With All My Love by Mary Raymond

lines with a youthful collar and big sleeves. The girl in the blue dress, in the mirror, had bluer eyes and her red lips had a mocking curve. All the touching up in the world could not hide that.
Ronnie was waiting downstairs when Dana appeared he would notice the blue dress Ronnie was going to be one of those husbands who noticed clothes. Scott got only an effect, missing details entirely. Ronnie would notice, too, the subtle change in her tonight. He would not know that everything she had done had been planned. That the invitation in her eyes was as deliberate as her previous efforts to discourage him had been.
"Dana," said Ronnie, as they sped swiftly along in the crisp night air, "I went away last summer because I wanted you to like me. I stayed away hoping you would miss me so much that you'd never want me to leave you again. Child's stuff. But that was the way it was with me. That's the way it is now I guess one place is as good as another. Tell me, will you marry me?"
"Nice of you to want me, Ronnie," Dana said in a husky little voice.
"Dana, say yes."
Dana smiled, and nodded her head.
Ronnie stopped the car. "Make it soon," he pleaded. "I've been so lonely. I want you so much! There isn't any use in waiting, is there?"
"Soon," Dana laughed. "That's the way I always make my marriages."
Even in the gloom, she could see the shocked expression on Ronnie's face. "Ronnie," she whispered, "you'll have to be patient with me."
Ronnie answered ardently. "All I want is the chance, I promise you're never going to be unhappy again." He took her in his arms.
ONE magic word: "Engaged" and a miracle had been performed. It was as though the fairy godmother of forgotten sores had touched the Cameron nose. And lo! the old place throbbed with vitality.
Dana had waited until her grandmother was well, and then one day had broken the news. "We won't tell anyone," she said. "We're planning to go off one night soon, drive to Lakeville and be married. I couldn't bear any publicity. And Ronnie doesn't want to, either. Afterward we will go on a honeymoon. Take a cruise—that's what Ronnie wants."
Lines of care were lifted from Mrs. Cameron's face. Aunt Ellen had tried to smile. Dana saw but couldn't manage it. Sentimental tears!
Sarah's black face shone with excitement. Nothing could happen in the home without Sara knowing about it.
"Not a word of this, Sarah," Mrs. Cameron warned through a long habit.
"Yes Ole Mie! Nobody could drag it out of me."
"There'll be lots to do. Get some cleaners in here tomorrow. I wish there was time to have those draperies taken down and cleaned. Have Jake get in that garden and rake up all those leaves. We'll have the kitchen painted with some of that quick drying stuff they use now."
Dana listened, a faint smile on her face. The news of her plans to marry Scott two years ago had been received so differently. Mrs. Cameron turned her beaming face toward Dana.
"Not yet."
"She's upstairs in her room?"
"I'll go up," Dana said.
Nancy had washed her hair and was sitting before the fire, letting it dry in a Gypsyish tangle. With the wavy locks about her thin face, Nancy looked really pretty.
"I was hard to tell Nancy, though Dana didn't know why," Nancy said quickly. "Ronnie and I are going to be married."
That was the way. No preliminaries. Now it was over.
Nancy's face changed. All the softness was gone. And it was white and queer looking. Her dark eyes blazed.
"Ronnie!"
"Yes," said Dana bewildered.
"You're going to marry Ronnie?"
"Nancy, you're not pleased?"
"Pleased!" Nancy was laughing suddenly, hysterically.
So Ronnie had been right that day Nancy did name him. Dana spoke stiffly. "I'm sorry you feel that way about Ronnie. It's hard to understand how you could dislike him when he's so nice and when he likes you so much too."
Nancy's long lashes swept her cheeks a moment as she lowered her eyes. "I imagine you're going to tell me you're in love with Ronnie. Dana, she said in a low voice. "Well, you can spare the words. But I suppose it doesn't matter. Nobody knows the meaning of the word nowadays."
"I'm terribly fond of Ronnie," Dana said in a low voice. "I'm through with the kind of love you mean. I hope I'll never love like that again!"
"And what about Ronnie?"
"What difference does it make?" Dana said slowly. "Lots of marriages are one-sided."
Nancy said, "I think you are terrible. And I'm afraid I can't wish you happiness. I'm pretty certain you won't be happy."
Her level, scornful voice followed Dana to the door. "You won't need happiness with Ronnie's money."
"I will be happy with Ronnie," Dana told herself wildly. "Happiness is peace of mind and not a fierce hunger. It's having beautiful clothes and a magnificent home and a yacht and high powered cars that stretch from Magnolia to Elm street. It's sitting on a throne with everybody envying you and catering to you."
She was weeping her heart out. Because in spite of the brave words, Nancy was right.
