Danger Faces Landon As 'People's Choice'

The completely cockeyed methods of American politics were never better illustrated than by the corrent fact that Gov. Alfred M. Landon is beginning to show too much popular strength for his own good.

For example: after picking up delegates and pledges in a whole series of middlewestern states, the Kansas governor ran far ahead of the field in the Massachusetts Republican preference primary.

The delegates thus gathered, and the evidence of popular backing behind them, have made Governor Landon the target for the combined forces of all the other Republican candidates. And a sage political commentator in Washington summed up the matter as follows:

"Keen political observers who saw this situation defeat Gen. Leonard Wood in 1920, and many another favorite before that, long have seen this possibility as the major peril to the Landon campaign."

Digest that for a moment, and see if there isn't something extremely peculiar about any political system which works that way.

What it means is that a candidate for a presidential nomination gets along fine until the moment it begins to look as if he is the popular choice of the voters. When that moment arrives—when, in other words, the ordinary men and women of the country seem to have decided that he is the man they want—he immediately runs into danger.

As long as nobody in particular wants to see him in the White House, he has a first-rate chance of getting there. As soon as the voters themselves start to go for him, his chances dwindle.

In theory, the great party primaries are designed to let the people themselves nominate their standard bearers. If you didn't know American politics, you might innocently suppose that the man who seemed to be getting the support of the voters would be the man about whom the politicians would twine themselves lovingly. But Governor Landon is about to discover that it doesn't work that way.

Couple this fact with the related fact that presidential candidates are growing more and more reluctant to enter state primaries these days, thus paving the way for the uninstructed delegation and favorite son rackets, and you get a singularly unhealthy state of affairs.

And people wonder why only 50 per cent of the electorate bothers to go to the polls.

President Roosevelt, who received a 75,000 majority over Herbert Hoover in Ohio in the 1932 election, is assured of solid support of the state's delegation. The Roosevelt slate of four delegates-at-large with one vote each, eight delegates-at-large with one-half vote each, and 44 district delegates will not be opposed.

The New Deal, however, faces a somewhat feeble test of strength in the Ohio primary. Col. Henry Breckinridge, representing an anti-New Deal faction, has entered the presidential preference race against Mr. Roosevelt.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—After modestly hiding his head under a bushel for many years, one of the great American industries is being dragged out into the light so that credit may be had where credit is due.

This is the business of industrial espionage, which experts of the National Labor Relations Board say has an army of somewhere between 40,000 and 135,000 men and women whose method of earning a living is to spy on and squeal on those who ostensibly are their fellow workers.

Anyone who likes to read detective stories ought to get a careful of the hearings being conducted by Senator LaFollette. Day after day they are producing fascinating real life stories.

Amazingly enough, some of the "stool pigeons" themselves, now more or less reformed, have come on the witness stand to tell how they infiltrated into the ranks of employees and made reports to agencies which subsequently reported to the boss.

THEIR stories make it easier to understand why the American Federation of Labor has made such a sorry failure of its attempts to organize workers. The labor spy enters a factory or mine and ingratiates himself with employees. He reports the names of any he hears talking union organization and they're likely to lose their jobs.

Sometimes he gets to be an official and helps double-cross his "comrades" from the very inside.

Broken Spine Surgically Aided By New Cure

By United Press

LONDON.—A remarkable operation of surgery will enable a patient with a paralytic spine to walk again, it is believed.

Thornton, 20, a London surgeon, whose spine was fractured in a road collision, to do light work.

He was taken to University College Hospital, where he was operated on by a team of surgeons who kept the spine rigid. But for the operation he would have been bedridden for six months until the cure had set, and it would have cost him another two months for his recovery.

Thornton's broken spine was set for six months.

Other guests at the banquet included Mrs. Ethel Arnold (above) who depends greatly on digestion. "I smoke Camels with and after meals," says Mrs. Arnold.

agency assigns him to make daily reports. He is left almost penniless by the sudden death of her father. H. GARDNER, newspaper editor, helps her get a job writing news. Linda is in love with Pete. When she asks Linda to marry him, she agrees, but postpones the wedding until the summer.

CHAPTER XVII

Linda didn't mean to avoid seeing Pete. There was no reason for it. On the other hand, she didn't want to see him. She had seen him plenty of times in the past few days. She had seen him when he was laughing and when he was serious. She had seen him when he was angry and when he was sad. She had seen him when he was happy and when he was lonely. She had seen him when he was young and when he was old. She had seen him when he was healthy and when he was sick. She had seen him when he was alive and when he was dead.

Linda didn't want to force Dix on Thorne's attention, so she waited until nearly midnight before she asked him to sing. Pete Gardner, distinguished in his dinner jacket and as far apart from the others as he had thought her in those first days in Newtown, came in a few minutes before.

Linda was truly glad to see him. She hadn't time then or freedom of thought to realize that he had been and that the reason was that something was different. That Pete treated her as though she were a stranger. Not as though he were in love with her, she would have said if she'd been honest with herself. But why should that matter when Dix's hour was here?

She sat in the shadows, watching him, listening to him while he sang, watching Thorne's face—for the once, inexpressive. Dix was singing magnificently. How could he help but be impressed?

"Very nice party, Linda," Thorne said, bending over her hand and saying nothing at all about Dix. After that she had each of her guests goodnight, and finally there was only Dix and Pete left.

If Linda hadn't had a job that occupied most of her waking time, she might have filled it to its brimming edge thinking of the social problems presented by the three men in her life.

Each of them took a part of her time. There were the constant reminders of Basil Thorne. His telephone calls intruded on her time at home and at the office. His flowers were a charming daily reminder that she resented deeply. And there was Dix. It didn't occur to her that when she was too tired to see him, he could find other things to do. Dix was necessary to her, and she must be to him. She found time to give him that she needed for her own rest. She found an accompanist and a dramatic teacher for him. He was scrupulous about not permitting her to pay for either, but he used her apartment for his lessons and her company for his audience.

There was also Pete. Pete Gardner did not ask for her time. He didn't call her frequently on the telephone and he never sent her flowers. But, none the less, he did occupy much of her thinking time. Linda was annoyed with Pete. She couldn't have told herself why. Running into him at official functions, seeing him with a girl on his arm, finding him the center of interest at a table not far from her own, she was unreasonably resentful of him.

She might have puzzled over it long, and arrived at a right and quick conclusion, left to herself, but one bright day he telephoned her and asked her if she'd "like to picnic."

Linda would like very much to picnic. It was a form of entertainment so simple, it hadn't reached any peak of popularity in her immediate set in Hollywood.

It was simple, natural and something she had missed and not known it. In Pete's car, they rode out to the seashore. Not the smart seashore, but a deserted stretch of sand where they lay in the sun, dribbling sand between aimless fingers, and talking about Newtown and never of picture making. Linda felt nostalgia for the home she had left two years before. Unexplainably, she longed for all things as they had been then, and caught herself up remembering that now she had Dix, which made up for everything. There were silences between Linda and Pete, and in them Linda's thoughts touched on the changes between them.

$54,000,000 is Paid On Insurance In Effect Few Months

NEW YORK—During 1935 over 78,800 first year death claims for a total of $54,000,000 were paid by American life insurance companies, according to a tabulation issued this week by the "Weekly

Underwriter," insurance newspaper. These are only the claims paid on the lives of those who died while their life insurance policies were less than a year old.

This is an average of 260 claims totaling over $180,000 for each business day on persons who had taken out new insurance during the previous 12 months. They were in good health at the time of examination or they would not have been insured, yet accidents and sudden illnesses took a toll of nearly 80,000 persons, involving insurance of over 54 million dollars.

"This is even more significant when it is realized that one in each 25 persons who died last year owned a policy that was not yet a year old," says the "Weekly Underwriter."

Closely linked with this fact is the report by the publication that one in each 35 persons who died last year had dropped a policy during the previous 12 months, representing millions of dollars lost to their families through dropping the insurance just a few months before death.

RIDERS NAME SURF BOARDS HONOLULU.—Hawaiian surf riders now name their surf boards the same as motor boats or yachts. "Scotch and Soda" is believed to be the most Americanized surf board name to date.

AIR TRIPS LONGER NOW CHICAGO.—Air passengers are taking longer trips these days as well as making them more frequently, a survey discloses. A few years ago the average flight on United air lines was 400 miles. Now it is 611.

The musical tea and reception, hosted by the Delta Kappa Gamma, at the Laguna Hotel in Cisco at 5 p. m., Saturday, had in the receiving line, Eastland members, Mrs. W. D. R. Owen, and Misses Belle Wilson and Vernia Johnson.

Other Eastland members were hostesses to groups of car parties.

Eastland talent on the program, presented the Dragoo Harmony Girls, in a group of songs; the Dragoo violin octette; and from Wilda Dragoo studio, Gloria Graham of Cisco in violin solo, and Mrs. Ora Faye Hefley of Abilene, violin numbers.

All those on program were in full formal. The Dragoo units were directed by Wilda Dragoo, in white satin formal.

Sub Deb Club

Miss Edith Rosenquest substituted for Miss Helen Butler, in the entertaining of the Sub Deb Club Saturday afternoon, on account of the illness of Mrs. Thomas Butler, who is now recovering.

The meeting was opened by Miss Helen Butler, president of the club, with roll call and minutes by secretary, Frances Lane.

Several plans for their programs for the summer were discussed and a short recess taken when the girls visited Parkers, selected a handsome potted hydrangea, and had it sent to their absent club member, Miss Ouida Sanderson, who is ill.

The club will meet next Saturday afternoon with Miss Maxine Coleman.

Mrs. N. N. Rosenquest served a tea plate of sandwiches, olives, pickles, potato flakes and iced tea to Misses Gladys Davis, Doris Lawrence, Evelyn Collum, Maxine Coleman, Frances Lane, Katherine Utz, Helen Butler, Edith Rosenquest, and Katherine Garrett.

Mrs. Wingate Hostess To Sewing Club

The Sew Sew Sewing Club had a delightful afternoon Friday at the home of their hostess, Mrs. G. L. Wingate, 1004 South Bassett street.

Needlework and pleasing stories of mothers, and Mother's Day, filled a happy hour.

The hostess served a 5 o'clock tea plate of potato salad with lettuce and mayonnaise, sandwiches with chicken salad filling, iced tea, and last course of strawberry pie with whipped cream topping to Meses, L. M. Cawley, O. M. Hunt, G. B. Lanier, Earl Throne, Howard Harris, G. R. Pate, G. L. Wingate. The club will meet with Mrs. O. M. Hunt, 3 p. m., at her home, May 22.

Subscriptions to Memorial Library

The Better Homes committee announces that recent gifts to the founding of Frank Evans Memorial Library include $2 from John Burke and $5 from W. H. Taylor, of this city.

There was realized from the recent Better Homes concert $9.16 in cash and 74 books, for library.

Those interested in this project are requested to send or bring their gift of money or books to the Civic League meeting, 3 p. m., Wednesday of this week, at community clubhouse.

The civic League is the Better Homes member-personnel, and the president of the league, Mrs. W. K. Jackson, is chairman for Eastland of Better Homes committee.

Miss Anne Jane Taylor Hostess

The Double Seven Club had a delightful time Saturday afternoon at the home of their hostess Miss Anne Jane Taylor, in guessing names of the musical selections played by their sponsor, Miss Maurine Davenport.

The favor for making the most correct answers went to Norma Mays, presented pretty silk lingerie.

The club was opened by their vice president, Julia Parker, with minutes by their secretary, Patsy Wiegand.

Mrs. A. F. Taylor assisted her daughter and served refreshments of sandwiches, pickles, olives, potato flakes, iced tea, to Betsy Jones, Norma Mays, Reita Lee Barton, Virginia Garrett, Patsy Wiegand, Julia Parker, Betty Lane, Elizabeth Ann Sikes, Doniece Parker, and Anne Jane Taylor.

Eastland Musicians In Fort Worth Sunday

A group of Eastland musicians accompanied by Miss Wilda Dragoo, spent Sunday in Fort Worth for the purpose of attending an audition in violin with the maestro Francis McMillan of New York city.

Those in audition were Wilda Dragoo, John Allan Mouser, Alma Williamson, Jennie Tolbert, Jo Earl Utz; Gloria Graham of Cisco, Mrs. Ora Faye Hefley of Abilene. Accompanying them as guests were Clara June Kimble, and Mrs. Dixie Williamson. The party returned Sunday night.

The Chicago marital mix-up, in which the host's wife scrubbed a guest's back, wouldn't have happened in the dry era, since the tub would have been full of gin.

REMEMBERING AUNT CLEMMIE Great-Aunt Clemmie was brought up to the Spartan life. She enjoyed (she always said) getting up at five on a Saturday morning, hanging her market basket over her arm, and going down town to do the marketing for the week-end. She said, "If you get there first— you'll get the best!" Aunt Clemmie is a fine reminder of her time. Nowadays one needn't rise with the birds to be sure of a full market basket. It's so much simpler and more efficient to spend a few minutes with the advertisements. Marshalled before you, in your newspaper, is all the news that is necessary for your good living. There, in the advertisements, are facts—sound, solid facts—about prices and quality. Advertised, trade-marked merchandise must be honest merchandise. Or it wouldn't be advertised.
