How Would We React To Prosperity, Now?

Daniel C. Roper, Uncle Sam's secretary of commerce, spread himself as the old year died and announced that we are all gradually getting richer.

Mr. Roper had the figures to prove it, too. Factory employment has gone up by such and such a percentage, factory payrolls by some other percentage, retail sales by still a third percentage, and so on.

Add it all up and you do seem as Mr. Roper insists, to get a total which reflects a rising tide of wealth.

But before we get calluses on our shoulder blades from patting ourselves on the back over all this, it might be sound for us to sit down and figure out just what we are going to do with all this money—if, as, and when we get it.

Suppose, in other words, that that feverish condition we recall as prosperity returns. What use are we going to make of it?

Are we, for instance, in our great cities, going to spend millions of dollars building skyscrapers we really could get along without, while we permit thousands upon thousands of our people to swelter in slums?

Are we going to go back to the old fever of land speculation, for another instance, so that we go squirrely over building lots in some seaside subdivision while we permit erosion and bad farming practices to ruin some of the most fertile farmland on the globe?

Are we going to revive the good old custom of building up our foreign trade by loaning money to the foreign customers, always increasing the loans just a little bit faster than the trade increases, so that in the end both they and we go broke?

Are we going to get our feet all tangled up once more in the kind of high-pressure installment selling by which an honest white collar man is induced to mortgage his income for two years ahead to buy things he could really get along without?

Are we going to go speculation-crazy again, so that we ask of any industrial concern, not what it produces or what its balance sheet looks like or how its dividends are running, but what the current quotation may be on its common stock and who has been buying it lately, please?

Questions like these grow tiresome, of course; and, anyway, since we sometimes seem to learn very slowly, it is probably that the answer to all of them is "Yes—to a certain extent, anyhow."

But we might as well ask them, and think about them, just the same. For we did all those things the last time we had prosperity—and look what happened to us. Do we want it to happen again?

Cruelty in Sport

The red-coated ladies and gentlemen of an English hunt club pursued a fox right to the kitchen door of a farmhouse recently. The terrified animal fled into the house and hid in the pantry; whereupon a member of the club went right in after the animal, dragged it forth and tossed it to the hounds—which proceeded, of course, to tear it into pieces.

For this act the huntsman was brought into court by the S. P. C. A. and fined 10 pounds; and the judge who fined him ruled that the fox must always be given a "sporting chance" if hunting is not to become unduly cruel.

As to the imposing of the fine, most readers will heartily approve; but most of them will probably feel, in addition, that it will take more than a "sporting chance" to rob fox hunting of its cruelty.

The sport always has an element of cruelty in it. Its values as a sport may outweigh this element, but the cruelty is there and always will be, as long as hunts end with a pack of dogs cornering and killing a helpless wild creature.

Back to 1930 Level

The revival of the heavy industries seems at last to be getting under way. The monthly business index of The Annalist for December shows that business activity now stands at the highest level since August, 1930, surpassing even the brief speculative boom peak of July, 1933.

This index now stands at 90 per cent of normal—a rise of nearly seven points since October, and a rise of 32 points from the depression low.

Most encouraging of all, as The Annalist points out, is the fact that this revival seems to be based on a slow but solid pick-up of the heavy industries.

If that pick-up continues, the business indicator will continue to rise; and, which is even better, we shall have substantial reason for hoping that the rise will continue until we reach wholly normal conditions once more.

Old Teachers Lose in Rating

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—The young instructor, fresh and vigorous in his pursuits, holds an advantage over the more experienced professors in institutions of higher learning, according to Dean Ferdinand Payne, of the University of Indiana.

The opinion is contained in a new book, "An Open Letter to College Teachers," which Dean Payne co-authored with Evelyn Speith Wilkinson, of City College, New York.

He cites experiments to show that any differences in efficiency between the young and old instructor are in favor of the former.

Score Card Worked Out In one critical analysis, the instructors scored 54.74; assistant professors, 54.15, associate professors, 54.15, and professors, 50.13.

Open Mind an Aid "The young instructor wishes to learn," explained Dean Payne. "He will gladly accept suggestions for the improvement of his teaching."

"The senior men of his own department who are good teachers must assume the obligation of helping him. It is our belief that this is one of the major points to be attacked by the administration."

It must be skillfully and tactfully done to prevent embarrassment and to avoid robbing the instructor of his right of final decision in all questions pertaining to his teaching," said Dean Payne.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER National Service Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON—One of those far-reaching measures which sometimes suddenly develop a fast pair of legs is the proposal for a national referendum prior to American entry into any war.

The idea is embodied in a bill now before the House Judiciary Committee, offered by Congressman Louis Ludlow of Indiana, who says 55 or 60 members of Congress already are pledged to it.

A PROPHETIC VISION Text: Luke 2:25-35, 40 The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 12 BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance

WORDS OF SIMON How Mary's heart must have thrilled as the babe Christ lay in her arms, she said: "Behold, this child is set for the falling and the rising of many in Israel." But what strange forebodings there must also have been in her mother's heart as she heard his father's word, "Yea, and a sword shall pierce through thine own soul."

A PROPHETIC VISION (Continued) DO we not have here a sense of both the glory and the tragedy of motherhood? The mother gives to the world the child of her love but the more completely his life is centered on others, the less is her sense of her own responsibility.

Catalogue Homes Are Predicted for Not Distant Date

DALLAS.—Dave Williams, Dallas architect and head of the rural-industrial communities division of the Works Progress Administration at Washington, has predicted that the day is not far away when Americans will be able to pick their homes from catalogues and show rooms displays in much the same way automobiles are purchased.

"In order to get the price down to reasonable figures for the lower income class, houses must be built on a production basis," Williams said. "The chief objection now is prefabricated houses, that can be delivered to set up, is that they would all be more or less alike."

The farm would have prefabricated buildings. It would show the farmer how he could overcome the changing condition of the cotton farmer. Williams declared that cotton is gone as the chief agricultural product of the South, due to the growth of cotton growing in Brazil, India, Russia and other parts of the world.

"There are 2,000,000 persons without homes in the South who are roaming over the country," Williams stated. "Many of them are tenant farmers left without a place when the cotton acreage was reduced. They must get places to live or there will be a revolution."

Refrerring again to his idea of prefabricated house production on a large scale, Williams said the United States is short 8,000,000 homes, and that 10,000,000 families do not have decent places in which to live.

"The government has been able to reduce housing costs remarkably by using machinery in building housing settlements," Williams continued. "A good five room house can be built for $1,500 in the South and for $2,000 in the North, where machinery is used efficiently on large scale production."

"Prefabricated homes would not mean regimentation, any more than automobiles almost alike in appearance have had that result. Wouldn't a good standardized home at low cost be better than the shacks in which thousands are living today? Each section of the country has to have its type of home best suited to climate and other conditions. Standardization in itself is not offensive, where the object itself is artistic."

Before going to Washington to serve under Harry Hopkins, Williams had gained a wide reputation as a designer of a distinctive Texas type of home. He carried out this idea in designing government housing projects for other sections of the country, using native materials and meeting local conditions. Before coming to Dallas, he was an architect in Tampico, Mexico, designing a number of office buildings there during the oil boom days.

Williams is a brother of Dr. Raworth Williams of Dallas. Another brother, Dan Williams, is a New York dramatic critic. Williams' boyhood home was in Childress, Texas.

Universal Credit Co. Leads Way to New Auto Savings

Eight years ago the Universal Credit Company began its history as an important factor in the commercial, financial, and industrial life of the nation—a specialized financial institution created for the exclusive purpose of providing a stabilizing factor in financing the time sales of Ford cars and trucks. The company has made sound and substantial progress ever since inception.

During this comparatively brief but disturbed period in the economic history of the United States, Universal Credit company has financed the purchase of new Ford cars and used cars sold by Ford dealers exclusively to the motor-buying public of America in the amount of more than one and a half billion dollars, serving a total of more than 2,500,000 Ford customers. Such, in brief, is the history of one of the nation's greatest financial service corporations.

These figures are indicative of the substantial contribution being made by Universal Credit company to improve conditions. This record of volume places UCC among the foremost of American financing institutions.

UCC has been repeatedly responsible for the reduction of finance costs of business developed has made possible constantly improved plans, providing courtesy, safety, and economy for the Ford purchaser desiring to buy out of income.

UCC again follows with the lowest and best plans it has ever offered.

Under the new UCC plans, after the usual low down payment, the Ford buyer can purchase his Ford car anywhere in the country on installments of only $25 a month. The cost of this extension of credit is only half of 1 per cent per month on the original unpaid balance and insurance. Convenient UCC charts show these finance charges which are computed by multiplying the unpaid balance plus insurance of half per cent per month (6 per cent for 12 months—which is not simply interest but a multiplier for computation).

Where the $25 per month plan is not used, and the Ford buyer wishes to vary the terms of his transaction, the cost is figured by multiplying the unpaid balance plus insurance by a multiplier determined at the rate of half per cent per month for the total number of months the transaction is to run.

The insurance provided in the New UCC convenient Payment Plans protects the purchaser's car against fire and theft, collision, flood, windstorm, tornado, cyclone, hail, riot, and other elements of physical damage—complete protection against accidental physical damage to the car itself.

The major factor that makes the $25 per month UCC low cost, easy payment plan possible is the great lasting value and public acceptance of the Ford V-8. More than 2,200,000 Ford V-8's have been sold in a period of four years (including two years, 1932-33, which covered the most difficult period of the late depression).

Ford V-8 performance, economy, and beauty in the past is the guarantee of Ford superiority and value in the future. Greater and greater value with each passing year has brought unequaled dollar value in the new Ford V-8 for 1936.

UCC is happy to have the opportunity to participate in the great Ford sales program for 1936 by providing plans at lowest cost and with lower monthly payments for purchaser who desires to buy out of income. This will make possible Ford V-8 ownership to thousands of new purchasers who were unable to buy in the past because their monthly budgets would permit. There is economy also because the new plans are less in cost to the time buyer and provide more safety for the purchaser's investment because of new features included in the insurance coverage provided with the plans. These lower costs, lower monthly payments on the New UCC Plans should materially increase sales by broadening the base of the Ford time buyer market. Increased consumer credit by Ford buyers will in turn be reflected in increased Ford production and payoffs, all of which means further forward progress in the march to recovery and prosperity. The importance of consumer credit in motor car sales, and what it means to general prosperity, is further emphasized when we recall that one out of every 10 persons employed is connected directly or indirectly with the automobile business.

Every day people are returning to gainful employment. The increasing volume of time buying is evidence of the fact that with the return of employment comes the urge to buy new transportation representing true value in economy and quality.

Families buy Ford cars today as they have for 30 years because of outstanding value. Outstanding quality at low cost has made the new Ford the choice of millions.

"Ours is more than an exclusive credit institution serving Ford dealers and Ford purchaser," the Fort Worth UCC branch manager, O. E. Patty, recently stated. "We look upon the Universal Credit company as an active arm of the Ford sales force, charged with the duty of helping the Ford dealer and the Ford purchaser in any matters where credit is involved and which has such an important bearing on the merchandising of automobiles."

Another important sales function of the Universal Credit company which Mr. Patty brought out in our interview was the very important matter of goodwill.

"The buyer delights in dealing with an organization which gives him prompt and courteous treatment, that deals with him in absolute fairness, ever maintaining the high standard of its service—a service rendered with the thought constantly in mind of making a repeat customer of the buyer. This he becomes as the result of a natural appreciation for the value in the products and the sincerity of the manufacturer and the seller."

A truly helpful credit service with friendly treatment is the business philosophy behind UCC credit operations. The convenient terms and low cost and safety features offer Ford buyers real economy and safety through a company that serves the Ford market exclusively. UCC Plans are available to Ford purchasers at Leville Motor company, of Ranger, who is an authorized dealer in this community.

SCOTT STANLEY divorced from her husband DR. SCOTT STANLEY is making plans to marry rich ROYAL MOORE, who has been in love with her several years.

Dana and her husband, Dr. Stanley, were divorced because he was poor.

After the separation, he becomes a partner of the town's most prominent physician, Dr. Osborne.

Dr. Stanley's Dana's half-sister, Bonnie, but has always loved him and has always loved him and has always loved him.

With her heart in her plans, Dana goes ahead with her preparations to marry Bonnie. At the same time, Dr. Stanley and Bonnie plan to marry that night. Dr. Osborne phones Scott, who is out of the city.

Driving at breakneck speed, Scott's car crashes with another car.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLV

rounds, and any one of them would drive out and bring Dana to him.

He knew, with a sense of deep conviction, that if he asked her to come, nothing could keep her away.

They were driving steadily and fairly fast. But not fast enough for Scott. Minutes in a case like this counted. He wanted to change places with the conservative middle-aged driver. This time with all his faculties alert and sharpened by the experience just past, there would be no danger in traveling fast.

Blood had soaked through the bandage on the boy's head and was staining Scott's coat. There was so much blood on his own clothing it would be hard for an ordinary observer to tell which of the two was most hurt.

They had reached a lighted house. Scott was praying there would be a telephone. He could hear his companion pounding on the door. Then the door swung wide and a flood of light poured through.

"An ambulance is starting to meet us," the middle-aged man reported when he returned.

"What time have you?" Scott asked.

"Six-thirty. I figure you'll be at the hospital at least by seven."

The number had a dark sound to Scott.

Dr. Osborne had not specified any particular time. He had said Dana and Bonnie were to be married tonight. That could mean they had set 8 o'clock as the hour it could mean seven.

course—right on.

He got his hat and went out into the court in the rear of the building to get his car. Two of his colleagues, Dr. Charles Warwick and Dr. Philip Stern were coming in together. They stopped and spoke to him.

"Your busy day over, Robert?" Dr. Warwick asked.

"No."

He didn't relish his mission and some of his distaste was in his voice. "I made a promise to look after something for Stanley. He's all cut up over something he's brought in an accident case. I figure he figured in it some way."

"Probably been drinking," said Dr. Stern. "Suppose you've heard his divorced wife is getting married tonight."

"Good heavens, not!"

"What was it Stanley wanted you to do?" Dr. Stern asked.

"Nothing of any importance," Dr. Robertson answered. "Just a small errand. . . well, good-night."

He went toward his car, waited until the two men had entered the hospital and then slowly retraced his steps.

It was a good thing he had bumped into the two men. It was queer he hadn't suspected Scott was drinking. And sure he had been planning to honor a man who probably didn't realize what a crazy request he was making.

It would have been a pretty come-off if he had walked into the wedding and commanded the bride to accompany him to meet her former husband!

It would have been something he would never have lived down. He got off on the fourth floor. Miss Hazelton, Stanley's anesthetist, was hurrying along the corridor. That meant he was going to operate. You had to admire him for character and cool nerve. Feeling responsible in some way for the smash up and determined to put the boy together again.

Miss Reid, floor supervisor, looked up when he passed her desk and spoke.

"The automobile accident case—pretty serious?" He asked.

"Rather doctor, intracranial hemorrhage. But we'll have a chance. Dr. Stanley's operating."

Dr. Robertson walked on. The hospital staff certainly had confidence in Stanley. Well, he was a mighty keen young surgeon. And after awhile he was going to come out of that operating room and he'd have to tell him something important had come up preventing him from going on Scott's mission. A man had his own professional standing to consider. And it was easy enough to make mistakes. It could be a mistake to antagonize Ronnie Moore.

He was feeling uncomfortable for some reason. It was a feeling that surely had no logic connected with it. But he was worried, logic or not.

Scott's face kept coming before him. There had been something nagged trapped about it.

STATIC SATURATES AUTOS IN BOSTON HARBOR TUBE

BOSTON.—Motorists passing through Summer vehicular tunnel, under Boston harbor, were shocked recently.

The shock was caused by all-steel bodies of automobiles that acted as a Leyden jar in storing static electricity. Thus, when the motorist touched the hand of the toll collector in passing a coin, it completed a circuit and both felt the shock.

Now, attendants have been insulated with rubber-soled shoes and there have been no more shocking experiences.

IN THE DAY OF ANGES

Life is often considered as a game with rules to be learned, such as a game of chess. Isn't education the learning of these rules? If life is a game it is one which is infinitely more difficult and complicated than chess.

It is a game which has been played from the beginning of time, every one of us being one of the two players in the game of our own. The chess board is the world, the pieces are the phenomena of the universe, the laws of nature are the rules of the game.

The player on the other side is hidden from us, however we know that his play is always fair, just, paid for knowing, that he never and patient; but also, we have overlooks a mistake, or makes the smallest allowance for ignorance.

To the one who plays well, the highest stakes are paid, with that sort of generosity with which the strong shows delight in strength—and the one who plays ill is punished, without haste, but with remorse. Education then is learning the rules of this mighty game, or is the instructions of the intellect in the laws of nature, which includes not merely things and their forces, but of men and their ways, and fashioning of the affections and of the will into an earnest and loving desire to move in harmony with those laws.

With this idea of education it is easy to see its usefulness—and "when the one Great Scorer comes, to write against our name, He writes not that we won or lost, but how we played the game."

A cable from the front says that Italians have lost more men in motor accidents than in combat. All Ethiopia has to do now is to lighten the traffic laws.

THE USEFULNESS OF EDUCATION

By Billie Hines

A university training is the great ordinary means to a great ordinary end; it aims at raising the intellectual tone of society, at cultivating the public mind, at purifying the national taste, at supplying true principles to popular enthusiasm and fixed aims to popular aspirations, at giving enlargement and sobriety to the ideas of the age, at facilitating the exercise of political power, and refining the intercourse of private life.

Education cannot be defined by terms of university training for it, in its greatness, is only the toning of education. Again education is not the learning of the very possible fact that two and two make

At 7:30 the members and guests were seated at the table and Tom Nabers returned thanks after which the following menu was served: Comanche stew (containing chicken, beef, pork and many vegetables), saltines, home-made bread, coffee and cherry and apple pies. The stew had been made by Mrs. Tom Nabers, assisted by Mr. Nabers, Mrs. Preston Sparks, and Mrs. W. H. Davis. "Did you know?" questioned the agent, "that the average production of cows in this county is less than five pounds per day. Quality of peanuts and other crops is also low, the speaker stated. Rev. Charles W. Estes, who reported on purchase of a registered Jersey cow for service in Eastland county, said the purchase of milk outside of Eastland by an Eastland dairy firm was a commercial threat to the community and showed the necessity of increase of milk production by producers in this section. H. B. Tanner, chairman of the school board, in a follow-up talk to one by Rev. Charles W. Eastham, who urged operation of school buses to rural districts, stated the Eastland group has had two routes
