RANGER WINS AS EASTLAND FIELD OPENED

Ranger All-Stars held an Eastland aggregation to one run Wednesday night when the visiting team won 4 to 1 at the opening of the Eastland lighted soft ball field. Many attended.

As a result of the seven-inning game, Secretary H. C. Davis of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce paid off a wager to Secretary J. E. Meroney of Ranger by pushing a soft ball around the field.

A five-inning game between the Hi-Y and Fireman teams was stretched another chapter because of a tie. The game was called after the sixth when the score was 15 to 15.

The Burr girls' team of Eastland defeated an Albany group by the wide margin of 14 to 4.

The Eastland High School Band, directed by G. W. Collum, played for the opening night.

The fire department of Eastland, sponsors of the field, expressed appreciation Thursday for co-operation of the visiting town representatives and to all who aided in the plans.

Texas Officers Are Training Marines For Centennial

QUANTICO, Va.—Under the watchful eyes of three Marine Corps officers from Texas, a hand-picked detachment of sea soldiers are going through their paces here daily in preparation for the Texas Centennial Exposition, scheduled to open at Dallas, on June 6.

The Texans who are supervising the special drills and maneuvers which will be used during the exposition ceremonies are, Capt. A. H. Butler of El Paso, First Lieut. G. H. Cloud of Rogers, and Second Lieut. B. H. Hochmuth of Houston.

In addition to the three Texas marine officers, more than a dozen enlisted men from various sections of the state have been selected to take part in the celebration. The Marines remember that Texas contributed approximately 2,500 men to their ranks during the World War.

Visitors to the fair will have an opportunity to see the company of officers and men comprising the detachment, stage the colorful guard mounts and parades which are a part of the Marine Corps' military ritual. A special marine band will also accompany the detachment to take part in the various ceremonies.

For years the Leathernecks have played a prominent part in the most famous of these exhibitions. In 1878, a company of them attended the Universal Exposition in Paris, and then made a return visit to the French capital in 1889. Since then they have taken part in the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, the Jamestown (Va.) Celebration, the Brazilian Exposition at Rio de Janeiro, the Sesqui-Centennial at Philadelphia, and more recently the World's Fair at Chicago in 1933-34.

An interesting Marine Corps exhibit is being planned for the federal building, depicting the many phases of Marine history and activities, as an added attraction to the complement of sea soldiers who will be in attendance.

U. of Texas Planning A Student Hospital

AUSTIN.—The University of Texas becomes embarrassed when it is called the "richest university" and points out that only a small part of its potential wealth from its oil lands is immediately available. A few years ago part of this potential wealth as drawn upon for a building program. The future income was pledged to redeem bonds that paid for a dozen buildings. Buildings for this department and that department were erected. A campanile towers above everything else in Austin, but the Regents forgot all about having a hospital for the more than 7,000 students. Now the hat is being passed to provide hospital accommodations.

Last winter's epidemics so overcrowded institutions ordinarily used for students, that the officials have awakened to the need of a hospital. The plan now is to have the students agree to a $5 hospitalization fee to liquidate a federal loan. The legislature will be asked to amend the act limiting student fees.

Honey Growers Invited to Attend Bee Transfer Demonstration Friday

Honey growers and bee raising enthusiasts of Eastland county are invited to attend a bee transferring demonstration at the June Hargus home, quarter of mile north of the Texas Electric Power Plant and four miles east of Eastland, at 9 a. m. Friday.

R. R. Reppert, A. and M. Extension insect specialist, will give the demonstration, assisted by County Agent Cook. A colony of bees will be transferred from a home-made, inefficient hive to a modern patent hive. Reppert will prove that profit from sales of honey is greater when bees are given proper housing and care.

Henry Collins, bee enthusiast of Olden, quoted some figures to the county agent which he said emphasize the benefits to be derived from properly housing and care of bees. He sold more than 450 pounds of comb honey in 1935 from nine colonies of bees which were housed in patent hives. His returns per colony were more than $7.50, while the depreciation on equipment was less than 50 cents per colony. "Eastland county is an ideal location for a great honey producing industry," said Collins. "We have an abundance of honey producing plants," he added.

If there is sufficient interest from honey raisers of the county during the demonstration Friday, cooperative buying of an extractor, a machine to take the honey from the comb, will be discussed. Heretofore all honey produced in Eastland county has been sold as comb honey.

Everyone in Eastland county who has one or more colonies of bees is urged to attend the demonstration Friday morning.

Gird to Fight for Farm Debt Bill

Eastland Federal Building Work Will Be Expedited, Blanton Wires

Construction of the new federal building in Eastland to house the Eastland post office is to be expedited, according to a telegram received by Postmaster Frank A. Jones from Congressman Thomas L. Blanton in Washington.

The site for the new building was acquired by the government from Dr. T. E. Payne in February and about 30 days later the lot was cleared and ready for actual construction work. Advertisements for bids to construct the building have been posted and will be opened in Washington at 1:00 p. m., June 4.

The delay in getting construction of the building under way was occasioned by a failure of the Labor Department to furnish wage scales requested last December, the telegram from Congressman Blanton, which was as follows, states:

"Have now gotten all obstacles out of the way and construction will be expedited on post office building. Long delay was occasioned by Labor Department to furnish wage schedules requested last December."

The telegram from Congressman Blanton was in reply to an inquiry from Postmaster Jones as to when construction on the building might be expected to be started.

Horse Race Bookies May Be Subject of Issue In Legislature

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN.—Horse race bookmaking promises to be a live issue in the next session of the Texas legislature. The statesmen are fond of talking of "schools of thought." One school advocates stamping out the bookmakers. The other proposes to recognize and license them.

Both seem much dissatisfied with the existing condition. Either restrictions and a war that will be successful against the bookies, or a licensing system, seems likely.

San Antonio, Houston, Fort Worth and Dallas all have had more or less successful drives against the bookies. There is no difficulty in placing a bet in any of them. Even Austin, in the shadow of the capitol, has had bookie shops running with little interruption.

So far the licensing movement has had little more than general discussion to go on, but it is currently reported that a survey has been made to determine what the state revenue might be from licensed race bet establishments, distinct from the race tracks.

The soviet banner was planted so firmly atop the supreme court flagpole that firemen finally had to burn it down.

Folly of Past Turns Youth Against War

That half a million young American college students could be induced to assemble on one day and declare that they will never don their country's uniform or fight their country's foe is something to disturb the graybeards.

Before we let ourselves get too worked up over it, however, it might be sensible to sit down calmly and try to figure out whose fault it all is.

It don't do to blame it all on personal soft-headedness or cowardice. That answer is too pat; it explains nothing, but merely substitutes one puzzle for another. These youngsters did what they did because they had something on their minds. What was it, and how did it get there?

It is reasonable to assume first of all, that they were thinking about 1918.

As we get far enough away from the World War to obtain a good perspective on it, we can see that it was one of the great tragedies of all history; not because it took such a frightful number of lives, but because those lives seem to have been pored out for so little purpose.

A war to save democracy, which left democracy on the verge of death; a war to end militarism, which left militarism stronger than ever before; a war to crush despotism, which succeeded only in replacing the despotism of divine right with that of brute strength—what young man, collegiate or otherwise, could look back at that without feeling that somebody had sold his elders a colossal gold bricks?

We have had other post-war generations but none of them looked back at any such thing as that. Our other wars, bloody and stupid and avoidable though they may have been, did at least settle things. This one left a worse mess than it found and settled next to nothing.

But that isn't all that may have been on our collegians' minds. They also had the recent munitions trade disclosures to mull over, and the mulling can't have been very pleasant.

If the profits-before-patriotism revelations of the last year have not been enough to set any young man's heart against war, nothing could ever do it.

To ask a young man to give up his life for something bigger and better than himself is one thing; to ask him to do it so that some TNT magnate or armor plate peddler can reap a 60 per cent dividend is something quite different. It's not exactly surprising if collegiate youth choked on it.

In other words, if our young men are swearing off on war, we have only ourselves to blame.

The stupidity which brings on wars that should be avoided, the greed which debases the high ideals for which men are asked to die—these are the real villains behind the students' anti-war demonstration.

"OUT OUR WAY" By Williams

Sport Glances. By Grayson

CHICAGO—Obscure persons and minor incidents frequently start wars, which is what happened when Dizzy Dean referred to Gordon Slade as a cheese hitter. Dean declared that he never would pitch another ball to Virgil Davis as the result of Slade's reply to the pitching celebrity of the St. Louis Cardinals. Dean and Davis fought verbally at long range a good part of the winter and spring. They threatened to punch each other on the nose, and kept the stove league hot. Slade, former Brooklyn and Cincinnati shortstop, tells the real inside story of the row which finally was patched up by Branch Rickey. It seems that Delmar Baker, the Detroit Tiger coach, isn't the only slick sign thief in the majors. Charley Dressen, manager of the Reds, also is adept at the practice. "Last year, with Dean pitching against the Reds, Dressen caught the signs Davis was using," says Slade, now with the St. Paul club of the American Association. "As Davis flashed the sign for the pitch to Dean, Dressen caught it and flashed us Cincinnati batters what to expect. "As we left the field Dean walked beside me, moaning, 'I don't know how in the world a cheese hitter like you could nick a great pitcher like me for three hits in one game.' "I didn't care much for that cheese hitter crack, so I went back at him with, 'Davis was tipping me off as to what pitch to expect.' "And Diz fell for it. "The only thing I'm sorry about is that they didn't go through with it and really punch each other."

FOLLY and FAREWELL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
LINDA BOURNE, 20 years old, pretty, is left almost penniless by the sudden death of her father.
PETER GARDNER, newspaper reporter, helps her get a job writing society news. Linda is in love with DIX CARTER, but he goes abroad to study singing. When Peter asks her to marry him she agrees, but postpones the wedding.

HONEY HARMON, film star, comes to Newtown, makes a "personal appearance" tour. She buys a scenario written by Linda. Linda goes to Hollywood and there, expressing ideas that are really Peter's, she acquires a reputation for being able to discover new stars.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XIV

LINDA refused to accept the threat in Honey's voice. There was no reason for it; therefore it couldn't exist. Smiling and friendly, she said good night to Honey and to Basil Thorne separately, and went to her room. Sunday she pleaded work, breakfasted privately, and spent the morning reading. In the afternoon she gathered up a foursome for bridge and at 5 she left without saying more than the most casual banalities to Basil Thorne.

But, returned to her apartment in Beverly Hills, her gaze wandered toward the telephone and each time it rang, exhilaration lifted her swiftly and left her as swiftly as she heard a voice that was not Thorne's.

For five days Thorne didn't telephone her. That didn't surprise Linda. She expected that he would play his game that way. He knew he had made an impression; now he would let her wonder a bit. He reckoned without Linda's purposefulness. Knowing the situation between Honey and Thorne, she decided she would not see him.

BUT for once Linda did not abide by her own decision. Basil Thorne telephoned her the sixth day of that week and asked her to dine at his house. To her own surprise, she accepted, and spent the next hour in a fever of dressing. Her hair wouldn't behave. The red frock looked too bold, the white one too virginal, the black one too dressed-up. She wore a frosty gray, plumed violets at the waist, and flung a mink cape over her shoulders.

Speeding over the smooth roads to Brentwood and Thorne's palatial "shack," as she called the 18 rooms, she reminded herself that she was a grown woman, capable of handling any situation, and that a man only took advantage of a woman when the woman wanted him. While many men had made love to her in Hollywood, none had presumed to treat her as a woman other than she was. And while she was telling herself these things, her excitement mounted and made her flushed and lovely when she stepped into the great hall of Thorne's house.

He was not there to greet her. Linda was accustomed to bad manners. She had met them frequently in the last year, but she was astonished that Thorne had been guilty of such bad taste. A Chinese butler took her wrap. She touched a lipstick to her mouth, patted her hair and lit a cigaret. Then she strolled into the living-room.

There was an eight-foot lounge before the hearth and, reclining in an ivory splendor, dressed for dinner with a dressing gown in place of his dinner jacket, was her host! He was snoring gently. Not that the "gently" part helped. He might have trumpeted and the effect would have been no worse. Fastidious Linda shuddered, and was lost to him.

He was aware of her then and opened his eyes, shook his head, rose unsteadily to his feet, and spoke thickly. "Sorry, Little Linda. Dropped off to a nap. Be all right in a minute." His words slurred slightly and he roared. "Cock-tails!"

LINDA took one from the tray and sipped it. She was stricken to silence. The evening had gone completely flat. She watched Thorne gulp two of the cocktails in quick succession, saw his hand steady and his eyes closed.

She didn't quite know what to do, but when he pulled her down on the lounge beside him she slipped from his grasp, smiling, and, still smiling, left him. He didn't realize until she was well down the road in search of a telephone that she had gone.

That finished Basil Thorne with Linda, but it did not remove him from her life. And that week had awakened in her a loneliness, a need for affection to have and to bestow.

The next day he telephoned. He called her at the studio, and he called her at home. He sent her a charming note of apology and enough flowers to lend a funeral import to her.

"I'll tell him if you don't mind. I know he'd like to see you."

Linda smiled and walked away. She wanted to tell the girl her telephone number and address, but she didn't dare. Dix would know where to reach her if he wanted to. The girl had said Dix was an extra. That perplexed her, and she tried to forget it. She tried not to want to see him. But the very next morning, when he came, she told her secretary to show him in and take a message to someone four floors away and wait for an answer.

"Hello, Dix," she said.

"Hello, Linda," he answered. "I always thought you were beautiful, but then I thought I had only imagined it. . . but, you're just the way I've been thinking of you every day since . . ."

Linda didn't say anything. She couldn't say, "I still love you, too."
(To Be Continued)

"Miss Bourne, there's an extra, a boy, who lives at my boarding house who says he used to know you," one of them said to her one morning. "His name is Dixon Carter."

Miss Bourne didn't flutter a single dark eyelash.

"Really? Dix Carter? Of course he knew me! We were friends when he was in college. I didn't know he was in Hollywood. I'd like to see him some time."

Linda waited for the next line as though it were not terribly important to her.

"I'll tell him if you don't mind. I know he'd like to see you."

Linda smiled and walked away. She wanted to tell the girl her telephone number and address, but she didn't dare. Dix would know where to reach her if he wanted to. The girl had said Dix was an extra. That perplexed her, and she tried to forget it. She tried not to want to see him. But the very next morning, when he came, she told her secretary to show him in and take a message to someone four floors away and wait for an answer.

ALLEY OOP

By HAMLIN

Library with the notebooks published by Mrs. Hawthorne, Stewart discovered that she not only omitted parts which threw considerable light on her husband, but she "also revised the note books to such an extent that the published version seriously misrepresents his character and literary genius."

Stewart points out that James Russell Lowell, urged by Longfellow to write a biography of Hawthorne, agreed to do so, but encountered an "insuperable obstacle" in Mrs. Hawthorne's unwillingness to allow a free use of the journals, whereupon Lowell abandoned the project.

Many revisions were made by Mrs. Hawthorne, Stewart found.

Where Hawthorne described a woman as a "devil of a brunette," his wife changed the description to "mischief of a brunette"; "quick-tempered as the devil" was altered to "very quick-tempered." Passages relating to sex were revised or omitted. Striving for social elegance, Mrs. Hawthorne changed "store" to "shop," "pantalons" to "trousers," and "supper-time" to "tea-time." The phrase "male and female," which Hawthorne liked to use to round off a numerical statement, was not permitted to stand.

"Again," Stewart adds, "there are editorial temperings, the most unscrupulous of all, which affect the view of life presented in the notebooks. The editor set about removing any suggestions of cynicism or pessimism. In one passage Hawthorne spoke with some boldness of the 'injustice' of our existence; the revised text reads 'apparent injustice.'

"Finally," says Stewart, "editorial alterations include the omission of significant passages which bear upon Hawthorne's religious views, and which were excluded because of their heterodoxy."

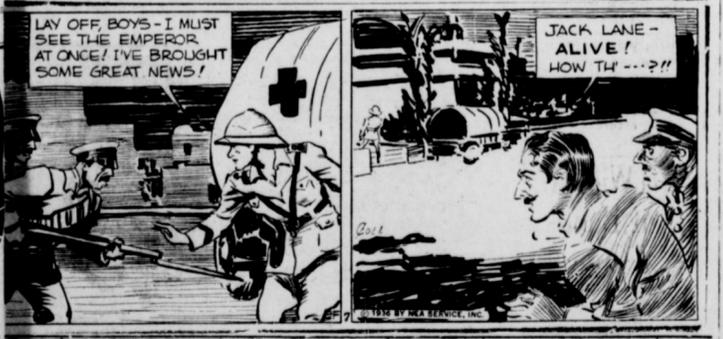

After a domestic quarrel, a St. Louis husband poured kerosene on himself and ignited it. In such situations, men seem to have a habit of getting oiled or lit.

Hawthorne Notes Found Censored By Mrs. Hawthorne

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Evidence that Mrs. Nathaniel Hawthorne wife of the author of "The Scarlet Letter," altered her husband's notebooks to conform to her standards of propriety and morality has been found by Prof. Randall Stewart of the English department at Yale University.

Many revisions were made by Mrs. Hawthorne, Stewart found.

New Instructor Named at Tarleton

STEPHENVILLE, Tex.—Major James J. Bender, U. S. Infantry, was named to relieve Captain George M. Davis as professor of military science and tactics at John Tarleton College in a recent announcement by the War Department.

In special orders of the War Department, Major Bender is relieved from assignment and duty with the 23rd infantry, Fort Sam Houston, to take effect on or about June 15, and is detailed at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas to proceed to Stephenville.

Major Bender received his LL.B. degree from the University of Tennessee in 1916. He is a graduate of Infantry School in the class of 1923.

Major Bender succeeds Captain George M. Davis, who has been professor of Military Science and Tactics at John Tarleton College for the past six years. Captain Davis' time at the college was extended past the customary four years by special consideration for the desires of college officials.

During his term, here, the Aarleton Cadet Corps has consistently rated "Excellent" at the annual federal inspection.

Captain Davis has not yet received his orders from the War Department, but he expects to be detailed for foreign service.

REMEMBERING AUNT CLEMMIE

Great-Aunt Clemmie was brought up to the Spartan life. She enjoyed (she always said) getting up at five on a Saturday morning, hanging her market basket over her arm, and going down town to do the marketing for the week-end. She said, "If you get there first—you'll get the best!"

Aunt Clemmie is a fine reminder of her time. Nowadays one needn't rise with the birds to be sure of a full market basket. It's so much simpler and more efficient to spend a few minutes with the advertisements. Marshalled before you, in your newspaper, is all the news that is necessary for your good living. There, in the advertisements, are facts—sound, solid facts—about prices and quality. Advertised, trade-marked merchandise must be honest merchandise. Or it wouldn't be advertised.

Books About Texas Much In Demand

DALLAS.—Advent of the tennial year has heightened interest in Texas. Among the latest books to be issued concerning the Lone Star State is "Texas," by Norman B. Hensley.

Hensley has written a complete history of the state in 54 pages. He has made an effort at generalizations, saying to attempt would be an impossibility "because Texas is so vast and so varied."

The book is expected to be of general interest to prospective Centennial visitors. It was published by Doubleday Doran.
