CHAPPARAL COCK OFFICIAL BIRD OF CENTENNIAL

DALLAS.—The Chapparral Cock or Road Runner, the only bird which is known to kill rattlesnakes, has been selected as official bird of the Texas Centennial Exposition. Announcement of this was made by General Manager William A. Webb today. The Texas Legislature last summer debated the question of supplanting the Mockingbird as the feathered representative of the Lone Star State with the sturdy Road Runner but no final vote was taken on the matter. The position adopted the idea and pictures, statuary and murals glorifying the Road Runner will feature the $15,000,000 show which opens here next June. The Road Runner's Spanish name is the Paisano, which means "fellow countryman." Mexican residents of the Southwest regard the presence of this bird near their habitations as a harbinger of good luck. "The Road Runner is the most picturesque bird known to the landscape," says Manager W. A. Webb. "It is typical of the Texas pioneer, being wholly individual in habits and characteristics, valiant, swift, cheerful and comradely. He is the friend of man and the foe of man's deadly enemy, the rattlesnake. This bird is celebrated in Southwestern song, story and history and it is fitting that the first great Southwestern World's Fair should recognize his admirable attributes." The Road Runner is common throughout the Southwest states. The name comes from the bird's habit of speeding swiftly along country roads ahead of approaching vehicles. That the Chapparral Cock is the sworn enemy of rattlesnakes is acknowledged by reputable ornithologists. The bird attacks and kills rattlesnakes wherever and whenever he finds them. The speed of a Road Runner is proverbial in the Southwest and they are almost impossible to capture. Legends and folk lore have grown around the border states of Mexico to the Texas Panhandle.

French Logic Throws Country Into A Jam

The French are supposed to be the most logical of all people; but the things that have been happening in Europe lately seem to show that a logical nation is just as apt to wind up in the side pocket as one which follows every whim of the moment.

Ever since 1918, French statesmen have tested every step in foreign policy by asking whether it would promote French "security." If it would, well and good; if not, they would have none of it.

So today, after 17 years of ceaseless effort to make France forever safe from German attack, the nation faces a greater peril of war than at any time since the armistice, and the security so "logically" built up turns out to be nine-tenths make-believe.

The logical French began by trying to cripple Germany permanently. This served to build up such a feeling of desperation in Germany that a revenge-monger like Hitler could gain a huge following.

When the failure of the Austrian Credit Anstalt was followed by the Hoover moratorium in 1931, the French quite logically refused to help bring financial relief to their dreaded foes. And what happened after that?

All that happened was that the German people, driven frantic by misfortune, threw out of office a government that favored a peaceful settlement of the nation's difficulties with France and installed a regime which is hastily preparing new armies and air fleets for a settlement by force of arms.

Then came the fuss in Ethiopia. Caring not a whit about the Ethiopians, the French logically kept looking ahead to the anticipated war with Germany and tried to keep on the good side of both Italy and England.

The result of this effort almost wrecked the League of Nations, on which France relies for defense against the German menace, and so alienated the sympathies of the average Englishman as to make it very improbable that England would again come to France's aid in case of attack.

And so, after 17 years of complete self-interest, the French find themselves in a far tighter position than any policy of unselfish idealism could possibly have brought about.

The ordinary citizen who is forever looking out for Number One generally winds up by becoming so absorbed in his own affairs that he steps into an open mandole. Perhaps the same thing is true of nations.

Perhaps, in other words, a nation can best promote its own safety by lending a helping hand to its neighbors once in a while.

The French very obviously would be better off today if they had worried a little less about their own precious security and a little more about the general health of Europe.

Influence of Work By Home Demonstration Agent Is Much

Significance and the far-reaching influence of the work conducted in Eastland county by the home demonstration agent is not known by all who reside in the larger communities.

A summary of the work of Miss Ruth Ramey, county home demonstration agent, included in her annual report to the extension service headquarters in College Station, reveals that perhaps no other person deals with as many individuals in as many communities as does the agent.

Behind the dryness of the statistics is revealed the fact that the works' value can not be estimated in dollars and cents. Teaching housewives and young girls in the rural communities how to improve the attractiveness of their homes, economy in preparation of foods and teaching of improved methods of canning, among other things, is practical educational work.

The cooperative spirit received in the home demonstration clubs isn't always evident in organizations formed by "city women."

The dependence of America on the farm is unquestioned. The educational work conducted by the home demonstration departments certainly tends to improve and aid those on whom all—directly or indirectly—are dependent.

Continual expansion of the extension work by the federal government and counties is proof that officials and citizens have learned the work pays in more ways than one.

That rooster discovered crowing at midnight in the city hall of an eastern city undoubtedly was just another victim of the daylight saving system.

Food, Industry Spend Millions On Plants

By C. M. Chester Chairman, General Foods Corp. NEW YORK, N. Y. — Improved business in the latter part of 1935 helped to expand sales of food manufacturers as the public bought more and better foods. The food industry accelerated recovery in 1935 by spending $270,000,000 on equipment and plants; maintaining code wages and hours and holding down prices to consumers, thus increasing public purchasing power.

Our costs, like others in the trade, rose as raw materials, labor, and taxes mounted. In addition to the effects of keen competition, prices were kept from advancing considerably due to intensified research and increased operating economies.

Food prices are not up so much as costs or real earnings. They are about 9 per cent up from a year ago, nearly the gain in real earnings—i.e. living costs divided by weekly wages—but they are at bargain levels compared with 1929 when they were more than 21 per cent higher than today.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE NEA Service Staff Writer

I've been doing a lot of experimenting this winter and with the help of a family of most critical testers I've come to the conclusion that my beef roasts have been more tender and flavorful when NOT seared, which contradicts expert advice to keep the oven very hot for twenty minutes to seal in the juices. Searing really never did keep in the juices, yet made it almost impossible to cook the roast uniformly. I've gotten my best results when I put the roast into an oven preheated to 325 degrees F. and allowed thirty minutes to the pound. We like beef best if it's salted about thirty minutes after being put in the oven. Salt tends to extract the juices of raw meat, and the thirty minute period cooks the surface of the roast enough to avoid this.

Roast Without Covering To cover or not to cover: this is another much discussed point. When you cover a roast the steam given off by the meat acts like water. To roast, the roasting pan should be left uncovered during the entire cooking period. Flouring is a matter of choice. Some cooks like to rub flour into the meat because it helps to make a nice brown gravy.

There are certain important factors to remember when you're choosing a cut of beef for roasting, too. If the meat is from high grade beef you can roast the inexpensive cuts very satisfactorily or you can use the same cuts from lower grade beef provided you have them well larded. 1936 Promises

(Continued from page 1) Judge Richard Critz, must also be a successful candidate this year to remain on the bench. Judge Critz is serving by appointment, made after the death of Justice William Pierson. An appointment is effective only until the next election period.

With a majority of the court to be named, there is a possibility that there may be issues in the race. Usually a supreme court election is devoid of issues and is settled on the public's opinion of the candidates and their physical and legal ability. So many close legal problems have risen recently that voters may begin to inquire also into the candidates' leaning toward particular theories of law. Oil prorations is one of these disputed questions—so close that a ruling on it was construed in widely differing manners by different groups. Status of the state anti-trust laws is another important question likely to be ruled upon by the court before next election. On the Court of Criminal Appeals, the expiring term is that of Judge O. S. Lattimore. If a well-defined division of voters develops in court races because of beliefs that candidates are on different sides of legal questions, there is likelihood that in the future judicial candidates may be taken from the state primary elections.

For a number of years there has been strong advocacy among lawyers for a return to the convention system of nominating judges. Ethics will prevent any judiciary candidate from announcing views on legal matters that may come before the court. In fact, to do so might be a disqualification for sitting in judgment on such a case. But it will be no surprise if there are whispering campaigns saying that a candidate is "right" or "wrong" on certain issues.

Against the "ins," a number of opponents are being listed. Sen. Roy Sanderford, Belton; Highway Commissioner John Wood of Timpan; former prison manager Lee Simmons, Sherman, and Former Ranger Captain Tom Hickman have been mentioned as possible candidates for Governor. Some believe Tom Hunter, of Wichita Falls, will make another race. Former State Representative A. E. Harding, Fort Worth, has announced. Former Congressman Joe Bailey, mentioned, told the United Press he is not a candidate, and Speaker Coke Stevenson, Junction, is also said to be adverse to running for Governor, as urged.

Among those who have been named as likely candidates for state railroad commissioner are: Sen. Joe Hill, Henderson; F. W. (Big Fish) Fisher, Tyler, and Sen. Will Martin, Hillsboro. H. O. Johnston, Houston, a former candidate also will run again. Some believe that Fischer will run for the State Supreme Court. Both he and Hill are now campaigning for a 15-cent crude oil tax. East Texas oil likely will be the chief issue in the railroad commission race.

Agricultural Commissioner J. E. McDonald may have a number of opponents in his race for vindication and re-election. It is reported that George B. Terrell of Alto, former agricultural commissioner and a former congressman-at-large, may run for the place. Rep. Stanford Payne, Del Rio, received a petition from many fellow members of the House of Representatives suggesting that he run.

State School Superintendent L. S. Woods of Waco. State Comptroller George Sheppard of Sweetwater and State Treasurer Charley Lockhart of Austin, all will seek re-election.

L. Gov. Walter Woodul is expected to seek re-election as a step to entry into the 1938 campaign for Governor. Sixteen of the state's 31 senators have expiring terms. Sens. Clint C. Small, Amarillo; J.W.E.H. Beck, DeKalb, and E. J. Blackert, Victoria, do not expect to be candidates. Sen. Ernest Felbaum, San Antonio, has not yet announced his decision to run or retire may depend on his health.

G. H. Nelson, Tahoka, advocate of a one-body legislature, will have to run again this year. His recent election was for the remainder of the term of the late Sen. A. P. Dougan, Littlefield. "Gov." Willbourne Collier, Eastland; Tom DeBerry, Bogata; John W. Hornsby, Austin; Will D. Pace, Tyler; Ken Regan, Pecos, and Albert Stone, Brenham, all have expiring terms. Sens. John S. Redditt, Lufkin, and Gordon Burns, Huntsville, are other senators who may enter the race for Congress while Sen. Will Martin, Hillsboro, has not yet announced between a race for railroad commissioner and re-election to the state senate.

Ambition Fails Too Successful Thrill Hunters

By United Press PHILADELPHIA—A mail box and a golf course tee box were not enough for two University of Pennsylvania students and two girl friends in their scavenger hunt. They also wanted a policeman's badge, but that was their undoing.

The quartet just had removed the tee box and the mail box when Patrolman Fink of Cheltenham Township police appeared. Explaining the situation, they told the cop that all they needed was his badge.

Fink showed them his number—13—and took them to a station house. The chief told the four that if they replaced their trophies he would forget the whole matter. And it didn't take long for them to take the mail box and tee box, either. They also forgot about the policeman's badge.

THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON.—Perhaps you have to live in Washington to appreciate the confusion created by the candidacy of Senator William E. Borah for the Republican presidential nomination.

Stories about "the new Hoover" are of but mid interest here alongside the general speculation as to whether now there is to be a "new Borah."

For the capital's conception of the Idaho statesman comes close to the classic and rather mean reference made to him once by ex-Senator Jim Reed of Missouri, when he called Borah "The Great Beginner."

In other words, when you speak of Borah around here you are sure to be told that "he never finishes anything." There is plenty of chapter and verse on that.

But it's something else again when Borah allows his name to be used in the presidential primaries and Borah was never before in any such strategic position as he is today.

First, it is conceded by many political observers that he could get more votes than anyone else if the Republicans might name, if the election were tomorrow.

Second, the fate of the G. O. P. might well be in Borah's hands were he to consider bolting the party in case neither its platform nor its candidate should be satisfactory to him.

Third, the country Borah's name is one to conjure with at all times and right now there's a large hunk of sentiment among Republicans to liberalize their party.

It is possible to imagine Borah becoming the messiah party and it is possible to imagine him darned well being it.

Sport Glances

BITSY GRANT is giving his racket routine a rigid general inspection at Coral Gables in preparation for the defense of his title in the first of the new year's major tennis combats, the fourth annual Miami Biltmore tournament, Jan. 6-12.

Bitsy, whose baptismal handle is Bryan, launched there a year ago the campaign which landed him in the Davis Cup competition for the first time, and which saw him win his inaugural matches from Mexico.

In the Miami Biltmore play, Grant must hurdle such barriers as Sidney B. Wood, the erstwhile precocious darling of Seabright; J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange; N. J.; Marcel Rainville, of Montreal; Ricardo Morales, of Havana; and Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla. before tightening his clutch on the Col. Henry L. Doherty three-year trophy.

The courtmen will be under the watchful eyes of Davis Cup ivory hunters searching for new standard-bearers capable of retrieving that prime goal of the tennis world.

Grant, with his flair for polishing off bigger representatives of the circuit, bowled over a bristling band in marching to the final match with Berkeley Bell a year ago. Not content with an upset victory over Wood in the semi-final, the wee Atlantan registered a stinging straight-set triumph over Bell.

Grant Faces Problems GRANT, whose forte is making returns until the other fellow errs, marched gradually forward in the Miami Biltmore tournament for three winters.

At first the diminutive Georgian destined to become a giant killer was felled about the middle of hos-becoming the messiah party and it is possible to imagine him darned well being it. It is also possible for him to fade right out of the picture and having no influence at all on the political scene.

Uncertainty here as to what the Republicans have both demonstrated as a result of their election.

Touring around turning senators day, this writer for conceding Borah a chance—which may be in view of the fact that the ton generally had had Borah was more radical man the East would.

Mountain Town Marked For Last Stand In Ethiopia

Location Is Strategic
The town seemingly could not be conquered by planes, for even though bombed the wooded mountain offers abundant shelter. It is difficult to see how heavy guns could be brought over the mountains to bear upon it. If taken, infantry must do it, strategists say.
It might be a Quebec again, but it is more probable that its wary guardians wouldn't be caught asleep.
The soldiers somehow have procured tents, and those who have none make them from any cloth, hay, straw, reeds, matting or whatever is available. They are pitched irregularly but the infinite variety of their design and color gives a picturesque touch to the whole.
The meadows all around Dessye are covered with tents. Men spend their time talking, riding sleek mules, dashing madly on wild horses—lances raised for combat. Women do the work and children spend their time gazing at the wonders of the city and looking at foreigners.
Guards On Alert
At night the plains are alight with the "watchfires" of a hundred encircling camps. From

...lessly about the house that afternoon, chased from one room to another by the small cleaning army.
"I'm going to the library and read an hour or two," Nancy said. "Maybe when I get back I'll be able to recognize my own room."
"Is cluttered," Aunt Ellen said sympathetically. "I'll get Adella in your room right away. Maybe it won't take two hours. Your curtains are up and the rugs are down."
"Isn't worry about it," Nancy said. There was a disconsolate slump to her shoulders.
"Let's go to the library and read a while," her aunt said. "If you'll wait while Agatha and Dana will be back and Dana could drive you here."
"No thanks, I'd rather walk," Nancy said.
During the afternoon the phone rang. Aunt Ellen answered. Ronnie was calling Dana.
"Dana's down town. I think she'll be in soon."
"I'll drop by on my way home," Ronnie said.
Aunt Ellen suggested suddenly, dashed by her own boldness, Nancy's at the library reading's getting late. I wonder if you'd and going by for her."
"Mighty glad to," Ronnie said. She had been awfully bold, Aunt Ellen told herself. But then might not have been so awfully bold, Ronnie would be a member of the family in a few days. Why wouldn't she treat him like one?
Dana and Agatha might be late returning, and Nancy might art walking home after dark before she could send them for her. Ronnie hadn't appeared to mind going away. He had sounded real pleased.
NANCY was sitting at a table with a magazine open before her, when Ronnie walked in. He sat down opposite her, inquiring as to the kind of literature you read? And when did you start reading things upside down?
Color mantled Nancy's face. Hello Ronnie, I guess Dana sent you to bring me home!
You're a bum guesser. I haven't seen Dana since I lunched with her at noon. I understood then she was going shopping, and I suppose she's still at it.
Then how...
Little bird told me.
Aunt Ellen! Nancy laughed a little. And that's really a perfect description.
Ronnie helped Nancy into her coat. It suddenly struck him that Nancy was looking thin, and there were shadows under her eyes. The thought depressed him, unaccountably.
They had almost reached home when Ronnie asked abruptly, "You look mighty worried. Is there something on your mind?"
He turned and met Nancy's mournful eyes. Something in their expression shocked him. "Better tell Brother Ronnie," Ronnie decided with a cheerfulness he was not feeling.
"I wish I could. Oh I wish I could!" Nancy's voice was vehement. "But if I did, you'd only despise me."
They were almost home. Impulsively, Ronnie pressed his foot down and the car passed the Cameron house in a burst of speed.
"Shoot," Ronnie said. "I haven't an idea in the world what you are driving at. But it's only fair to tell me now."
"Yes," Nancy said, as though she had arrived at a decision of some kind. "I suppose it is. Well, you asked for it, Ronnie. I hate to see you and Dana marry, because Dana doesn't love you at all. And I don't think you're really in love with her either."
"You haven't an ounce of sense in your head," Ronnie said angrily.
"You're the dumb one," Nancy flamed. "You have a complex. When you were a little boy you were always picking up pencils for girls. When you got back from college you started binding up their aching hearts. Now that Dana's heart is more broken than anybody's heart you know, you start picking up the pieces and putting them together again."
NANCY stopped for breath. When Ronnie didn't speak, she started again. "But you can't do it. Ronnie. It's a surgical job! And there's only one man who could help Dana. She's in love with Scott and you know it."
Ronnie said, hoarsely: "You're out of your head. I loved Dana long before she ever married Scott. And if she loved him so much, why did she leave him?"
"You don't know anything about love," Nancy cried wildly. "You wouldn't know it if you saw it under a microscope. You're so dumb, Ronnie. I never saw anybody as dumb!"
Ronnie had a wild desire to shake Nancy. Shake some sense into that dark, curly head of hers. And, without warning, he was doing that very thing. Shaking Nancy vigorously. And Nancy was crying, crying desperately like a little girl who had been slapped and then put in a corner. Ronnie had another impulse, more kindly—to do something, anything, to check that lonely sobbing.
His arms were around Nancy. Her head was on his shoulder and Ronnie was whispering: "You poor kid, I didn't mean to hurt you, Nan."
He kissed Nancy's tremulous lips. Nancy's sobs ceased. You couldn't sob very well when you were being kissed, when you were kissing somebody back, wildly, despairingly.
And then, Ronnie started the car, bewildered and troubled. There had been something startlingly unbrother-like in the kiss he had given Nancy. Something strangely confusing in her kiss too.
Funny little girl, Nancy. A mighty appealing little girl when she wanted to be. He was wishing, vehemently, that he hadn't kissed her.

It takes to make the rifle know that these words are true to the core. Nothing is easily gained. There are instances when gold strikes are made and oil wells come in unexpectedly making one rich overnight. But even at that it is no easy job to carefully guard what one gets by accident. Gold diggers didn't find it without working hard for it to start, and somebody worked like the dickens to bring in the first oil well. Balancing the budget of government or a business is a most essential thing for any satisfactory results.

TIME TO 'Take Stock'
It is an immemorial custom of retail business to take account of stock in January. Down comes every bolt of cloth off the shelves—every dress and pair of shoes—every can of tomatoes—every tube of tooth paste. Busy clerks check inventory. Managers figure their new merchandise requirements.
And then come the sales!
There's an idea in all this for the woman who runs her home on a business basis. No need to spend days at it. But why not take a systematic peek at the linen closet when you're upstairs? An appraising glance at the medicines and toilet requisites in the bathroom cabinet? A candid look at the furniture while you're dusting?
It's time to take stock. And when you've made a list of the things you need, sit down with this newspaper and see how economically you can buy them now—during January's stock-taking sales. You'll be delighted, as you read the advertisements, to find how far a moderate outlay will go!
