By Grace of Autoists, Cycling Might Return

It was like picking up a newspaper of 35 years ago to read that a young member of the Buffalo Cycling Club won a 90-mile bicycle road race at the Great Lakes Exposition the other day.

Sixty cyclists took part in this cross-country race. The affair was conducted by the field secretary of the League of American Wheelmen, and some 5000 people rode their bicycles up to the exposition grounds to see the finish of the race.

Nothing like that has appeared in the papers since the day when impudent urchins used to yell "Get a horse!" at the be-goggled and linen-dustered occupants of snorting automobiles. The League of American Wheelmen was a prominent outfit in those days, and bicycles went whirring smoothly—or, as the terrain might dictate, not so smoothly—along city streets and country roads.

So it seemed rather good to read about this bicycle revival. For the automobile, which has rearranged our civilization and proved one of the most convenient and usable gadgets that man ever invented for himself, has at the same time deprived us of some unimportant but pleasant little diversions, and the bicycle tour is one of them.

To be sure, you still see plenty of bikes. There has even been a boom in the bicycle manufacturing business in the last few years; shops where you can rent a wheel for an hour's spin through the park have sprung up here and there in cities all across the country.

But that isn't bicycling. How many people, today, have the hardihood to set out on a real cross-country trip by bicycle? It would be a lot of fun to hop on Junior's bike and take a little week-end excursion; there'd be good exercise in it, a sense of adventure, and a feeling of freedom. You could get acquainted with the countryside that way, as you never can on a motor trip.

Yes, it would be fine. But who wants to do it when the roads are full of autos—especially when so many of them are driven by the break-neck fools who infest our highways nowadays? You would spend a quarter of your time enjoying the beauties of nature and the other three quarters looking uneasily over your shoulder to make sure that some idiot in a new car wasn't about to knock you into kingdom come.

There isn't anything in particular we can do about it—unless a paternal government some day decides to web the country with a network of bicycle trails, which isn't likely. It's just one of those things, that's all; one of the numerable little prices we pay for the privilege of having autos.

Having the autos is worth the price, of course. But here must be quite a few Americans who heave a very neek and gentle little sigh, now and then, for some of the homely diversions which the auto has put out of their reach.

THE BRIGHT SHAWL

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. As evidence of good faith inquirers must give their names and addresses, but only their initials will be printed. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. When was the first district court organized at San Augustine and who was the presiding judge? R. B. Tenaha. A. September 25, 1837, with R. M. Williamson presiding as special judge to organize the court. Judge Williamson was popularly known as "Three-Legged Willie," a name given him because he wore a wooden leg, due to a white swelling in early life.

Q. What is the address of Dr. Robert T. Hill, the eminent Texas geologist? R. T. D. Christoval. A. Jefferson Hotel, Dallas, Texas.

Q. How was Santa Anna regarded by the people of Mexico at the time of the Texas Revolution? J. A. C. Edna. A. Generally, as an ambitious self-seeker, an inefficient military leader, and ready to betray his country to satisfy his greed for honors. Mexicans did not hesitate to repudiate his treaty with President Burnet, regarding them selves fully justified in such action.

Q. Why has a 'Rock Salt Palace' been built at Grand Saline? E. T. Putnam. A. Grand Saline is a leading salt producing center and the "Salt Palace" is a novel structure to publicize that fact and to supply tourists with information regarding the town, the State and the Centennial.

Q. Where does Texas provide for treatment of rabies patients? A. D. Richmond. A. At State Pasteur Institute, 410 East Fifth Street, Austin.

Centennial Song Book

In the homes, in the schools, in public gatherings of all kinds, Texans are singing the best known typical songs of Texas—the songs of the range, songs of the Texas home, patriotic songs—songs every Texan should know and delight in singing. Twenty-eight of the best songs sung in Texas have been carefully selected by competent musicians, set to music, and published in a 36 page, 6 by 9 booklet on heavy coated paper with covers in colors. The booklet will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents. Send all orders to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

TO THE CITIZENS of Eastland County

My friends, in the Primary Election last Saturday, you honored me with a splendid vote for the office of County Judge which enabled me to lead the ticket in that race by about four hundred votes.

I wish I could see each of you personally and tell you how happy and grateful I am to you for the confidence you have manifested in me and my ability to fill this important office, and I assure you that if you elect me your County Judge on August 22nd, I shall endeavor to perform the duties of that office in such manner as will merit your utmost confidence and highest esteem.

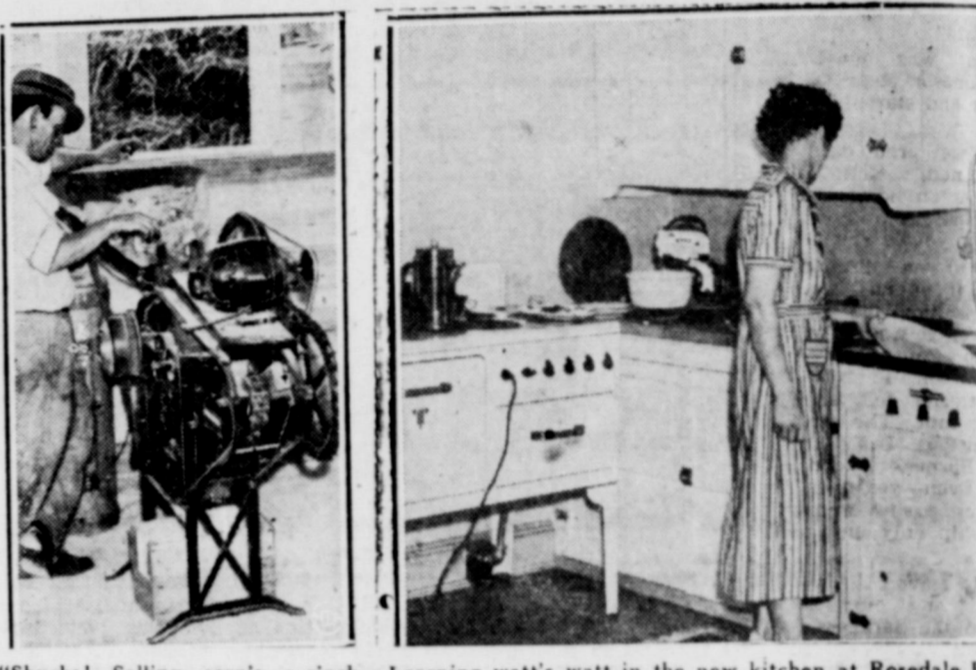

Yours sincerely,

T. L. COOPER.

"Shucks! Selling corn's a cinch with this electric jigger." Learning watt's in the new kitchen at Rosedale Farm. still no substitute for a good cook.

WASHINGTON. — The farmer who comes to the Capital during the next year will find a truly electrifying display awaiting him at Rosedale Farm, across the Potomac in Virginia. Installed under the direction of the Rural Electrification Administration, the display shows how the hard work of farming may be cut down to the simple flip of a switch. It's a free show, with the only charge in the power lines that make life easier for Farmer J. W. Hughes and his family. In the house, the barns, the workshops, the chicken coops—a succession of electrical wonders does his bidding. Even fences, consisting of a single strand through the place, are sent at regular intervals, showing livestock into keeping out of the corn. As they try to crawl through the electrified series, they are instantly electrocuted. Practically all of the tools and machinery on the farm, as well as lighting and ventilation, have been electrified. Electric razors, stoves, curlers had a host of etceteras modernize the farmhouse. Only the hog wallow seems to have escaped the maze of wires.

Much for Love

CHAPTER XII
 In the darkness, with the spot of yellow from the flashlight, Helena's eyes whirled. It was with a gasp that she managed to follow the elevator. Inside, she brushed together for a moment and he caught her arm. She thought you were faintly said uncertainly—and Helena found herself held against him, heard him whisper, "I love you. I've loved you since that first day in the room."
 In an effort that was beyond her strength, Helena shoved free and staggered back to the wall of the elevator. The flashlight clattered to the floor and she retrieved it. She sent its beam full into the man's pale, twisted features. You come near me again, I'll use you as a club!"
 The threat was unnecessary. Jameson stepped to the rail and started the cage upward.
 "Suppose we pretend that it happened," Helena said, rather so on home alone, if you don't mind. And—and I appreciate what you've shown me."
 He hurried on through the knowledge as if pursued by some fearful apparition she dare not name. It was an apparition made up of many facts. The winged Jameson, so lacking in steel that she felt somehow named for him. The cold, delectable, malicious Leah Frazier. The handsome Roger Barnes, pretending to be an ally. Even—yes, even John Lassiter. John Lassiter, who would be a friendship only until it became a pinch.
 "I've got to leave..." he told herself over and over as she pushed on in the darkness. "I've got to get out..."
 As publisher of the town's two newspapers for all of 30 years, Ben Morris had seen a varied lot of people walk in and out of his office. But never in all those 30 years had he seen a more determined one than Helena.
 "Let me get this straight," Morris said gently. "You say you are going to ask Courtney to draw up papers which will make Henderson's an employee's stock company. The salary you have coming you wish given to some worthy town charity. The Henderson house you intend to have sold, and the proceeds turned over to the same charity. Is that correct?"
 Helena nodded slowly. "I'm

Life of the Saint Of the Day

By REV. S. E. BYRNE
ST. MARTHA
 St. John tells us that "Jesus loved Martha and Mary and Lazarus," and yet but few glimpses are left us of them. First, the sisters are set before us with a word. Martha received Jesus into her house, and was busy in outward loving labor, while Mary sat in silence at the feet she had lathed with her tears. Then their brother is sick, and they send to Jesus, "Lord, he whom thou lovest is sick." And taking his time our Lord came, and they went out to meet him; and then follows that scene of unutterable tenderness and of profession of faith. And then once again, on the eve of his Passion, we see Jesus at Bethany. Martha, true to her character, is serving. When the storm of persecution came, the family of Bethany, with a few companions were put into a boat, without oars, and drifted to the coast of France, where through their efforts many of the people were converted to the faith of Christ.

3 PROFESSIONS TOO MANY

By United Press
SAN FRANCISCO—Three professions are too much for one person. A Santa Cruz shack dweller gave his profession as poet when charged by Federal authorities with counterfeiting. He then elected a third profession as attorney for himself but received a year's sentence for the possession of counterfeit 50 cent pieces.
 From the people among whom I have lived for the past 18 years. I shall conduct the run-off campaign just as I have in the first race—on a high plane—contenting myself with pointing out that I have never held public office, that I have never before been a candidate and appealing to the voters on the time-honored Jeffersonian principle of rotation in office.
 To those who saw fit to vote for either of my first primary opponents, I have only the kindest feelings and may I ask that between now and August 22 you inquire about me from those who, through the years, have had an opportunity to know me well and I will abide by their verdict. If you see fit to elect me, I promise you the very best service of which I am capable, based upon 20 years of clerical and business experience.
 I appeal to my friends, who did me so many kindnesses in the first race, to continue their efforts and there will be no doubt as to the outcome.
 Total results in County Clerk's race: Galloway, 2663; Davenport, 1665; Collie, 2923.
 Sincerely,
 R. V. (RIP) GALLOWAY.

Nature Cure

The cause of disease has been a subject of vital interest to mankind since man came into existence. We know there IS a cause. Then if there is a cause the opposite is SURE to be a cure or prevention. You can easily tell a well person from a diseased one by observing them closely. THERE IS A REASON.

By a close study of the laws governing the function and operation of the human body, I have learned that if we comply with these laws, we are able to remove the cause of disease and nature brings about restoration of Health. Come, and learn what your condition REALLY IS, why it is that way, and how to remove the cause, in a natural and safe way. Don't be discouraged because others have failed in your case. I have something you have never tried. It gets results.

 To the Voters of Eastland County:

As I enter the runoff campaign, I want to express my gratitude to the people for the splendid vote they gave me in the first primary for the office of County Clerk.

Making my first race for any office and unfamiliar with campaign methods and practices, nevertheless I received 2663 votes in a three-cornered race. Particularly am I grateful for the vote of my home box which gave me 537 to my opponent's 68. I am proud of this magnificent endorsement

MYRA NORTH, Special Nurse -- By Thompson and Col

Increased Taxes On Gasoline Is Curb On Motorists

Publication by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads of motor vehicle registration data for 1935 has revealed that virtually every state which increased its gasoline tax rate last year either sustained losses in the number of motor vehicles registered or experienced subnormal increases in registration.

While motor vehicle registrations throughout the United States showed a gain of 5 per cent over 1934, the average gain was only 3.05 per cent for the five states which increased gasoline tax rates — Connecticut, Delaware, Nebraska, New York and Pennsylvania.

Nebraska, where the gasoline tax was increased to 5 cents from 4 cents per gallon, was the only state to report a decrease in registrations in 1935. The decline was .1 per cent. New York state, where the gasoline tax was increased to 4 cents from 3 cents, had one of the smallest increases, only 2.5 per cent, or about half the average gain for the country.

Registrations increased over 10 per cent in Delaware, and 9 per cent in Pennsylvania. Connecticut was the only state to increase gasoline tax to enjoy a gain in registrations, the 6.1 per cent being ascertained from the fact that the higher tax rate did not become effective until late in the year.

While the purpose of increased gasoline tax rates was to state revenues, the curtailment of the expected gains in registrations served largely to offset gains in tax receipts.
