GARRETT OPENS CAMPAIGN AT ANNUAL PICNIC AT BASS LAKE IN SPEECH BEFORE LARGE CROWD

In his first speech since the primary, County Judge Clyde L. Garrett predicted at the 16th annual Bass Lake picnic near Gorman in Eastland County Thursday afternoon that he will win the runoff over Congressman Representative Thomas L. Blanton by 10,000 votes... The prediction was made following the candidate's introduction by Frank Judkins, Eastland attorney and former supporter of Fred O. Jaye, defeated Townsend candidate who has announced he will stump for Congressman Blanton... "Representative Blanton has vilified and insulted the Townsend followers, Judkins stated... He charged the leader of the Townsend program, Dr. Townsend, had pointed out Blanton as his followers' worst enemy... "Garrett isn't a Townsend man. But he hasn't misrepresented the men and women who followed under the Townsend banner. The reaction that followed Jaye's announcement to support Blanton couldn't have been as great as an elemental disturbance," Judkins asserted... Judkins branded as "untrue, a dream and a fable," the charge that Jaye had offered $2,500 to withdraw from the congressional race before the primary. If that had been true, Judkins charged, the revelation would have been made previous to Jaye's defeat... The DeLeon attorney can deliver five per cent of Townsend's votes for Blanton, Judkins said as a conclusion in his remarks... Judge Garrett ridiculed the charge that $25,000 had been sent from Washington to elect him in Congress. The "only slush fund I used was obtained from cashing one of my son's insurance policies, Garrett said... Blanton's alleged intimidatory methods drew criticism from Eastland County Judge. He marked that business interests Eastland had to act to save the of Robert W. Fisher, regional supervisor of the Resettlement Administration, who had been reported as working against Blanton... "If there ever was a time when the character of our people need strengthening, now is the time to think our people are self-respecting and honest. I believe they are entitled to jobs in which they are self-respecting." This was in connection with Garrett's endorsement of "more jobs and more jobs..." The present representative denounced for his alleged discriminating postmaster-selection methods. He claimed elections were held in some towns and in other appointments were made. At these elections, Garrett claimed, rural citizens were discriminated and non-Blantonites allowed to participate... Garrett charged one of Blanton's foundations for the campaign was obtained negro parents on a train which he rode with several members of the County and Commissioners Association of Texas, who pleaded for revision of WPA requirements Washington... "Don't be surprised what of campaign will develop," Garrett promised. He said a visit had been obtained from gro porters who falsely swore a woman accompanied him Washington... J. W. Cokerill, Gorman police, was another speaker... H. L. Capers, owner of picnic grounds, stated Representative Blanton failed to keep a sn engagement Thursday morning.

Farmers Urged To Prepare For Leafworm Raids

Leafworm damage is expected to spread as far as the Panhandle by September 1st, according to R. R. Reppert, Extension Entomologist and the county agent is urging in Eastland County farmers to be ready to poison their cotton in the event there is a heavy infestation of leafworms... Calcium arsenate is recommended for use in poisoning leafworms for any other poison is either more expensive, likely to burn the plant or dangerous to the person doing the poisoning... If dusted on the plant, use 4 to 8 lbs. of calcium arsenate per acre, depending upon the size of the plant. The dust can be applied with dusting machinery or by putting it in cheese cloth bags and jarring them over the plants while the dew is on them to hold the dust. Several bags can be tied to a long pole which is laid crosswise of a planter, cultivator, or other vehicle. Blocks should be wired to the wheels to jar the poison out of the bags... The calcium arsenate can be sprayed by mixing 3 lbs. with 50 gallons of water and wetting the stalk with the spray. The mixture should be kept stirred as the poison will soon settle to the bottom... Lead arsenate can be substituted for calcium arsenate but is usually more expensive. Paris green or London purple can be used but are likely to burn the cotton. To use either, mix one pound with 4 lbs. of hydrated lime applying this amount to 1 acre as a dust... Any mixture containing white arsenic usually burns the cotton and is dangerous to the person handling it.

New Advanced Sailor Takes His Station

The sailor in Uncle Sam's fleet used to be a gnarled and shaggy person who could lay out on an ice-coated yard in a howling winter gale...

He was rough and he was tough, and his officers ruled him with brutal hands of iron because they knew that they didn't, he was apt to pitch them bodily out of the cabin windows.

This old-timer has gone off to oblivion along with the square-rigged sailing ships that were his home, and the modern generation of sailor is as unlike him as the air-fighter carrier Earatoga is unlike Old Ironsides.

An order went out the other day from the U. S. Navy's Bureau of Navigation, in Washington, announcing that, due to a shortage of officers, a great many battle stations on the fighting ships traditionally filled by commissioned officers hereafter would be taken by enlisted men.

"The intelligence and competence of the enlisted personnel of the navy," remarked the order, "is higher today than it ever has been before in the history of our navy, and is confidently felt that utilization of chief petty officers and other petty officers... will permit the navy to carry on without reduction in efficiency."

All this would seem to leave the modern sailor about a lap ahead of the fabulous old-timer.

Now the old-timer was just as good a man as the colorful traditions of the sea say he was. He could reef and knot and splice, pull his weight in a small boat, and his 50 lashes with the cat without uttering a whimper.

For with all his seamanship and his sturdy self-reliance, the old-timer was usually pretty much of a loner. The waterfront and the fore-castle were his only world, and the teachers in those institutions believed firm that to spare the rod was to spoil the child.

at home among intricate technical devices that would have had the old-timer tugging his forelock in helpless bewilderment. At sea he is a skilled craftsman; ashore, he is a gentleman.

We often indulge in a great deal of silly talk about the glory and romance of the sea in those old, departed days—the days of iron men and wooden ships, as the old saying has it.

s about time we realized that the modern sailor is really a better man than his predecessor. The Navy Department knows it, and is trusting our national defense reliance on the fact.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people.

Q. What was the total expense to Texas of the war for independence? V. N., McKinney.

A. Commissioners Austin, Archer and Wharton, in charge of war finances, reported the entire cost from the beginning to the battle of San Jacinto as $345,000, which covered all supplies and expenses of the government and its commissions.

Q. What is there ever a Fort Griffin in what is now Bell county? A. T., Bartlett.

A. There was a Ranger fort of that name, also known as Little Rover and about six miles from the present town of Belton. It was used as a protection against Indians, first by Rangers and afterward by colonists.

Q. I notice that Texas has a treasury deficit of some $9,000,000. How does this compare with other states? W. W. C., Paducah, Ky.

A. The deficit mentioned is in the general revenue fund. Other funds have surpluses. In Arkansas, a much smaller state, the deficit is about the same as in Texas; in California it is about $85,000,000.

Q. For whom was the town of Post named? G. F., Crockett.

A. For C. W. Post, the cereal manufacturer, who once lived there.

Q. Who is the State Racing Commissioner, and when does his term expire? R. B., Water Valley.

A. Guy L. Waggoner, Fort Worth; term expires in 1937.

Grand Old Man of University of Texas Campus Writes of His Experiences During 50 Years With The School

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex.—A large typeset book was placed in the State Library this week. It is "Fifty Years on Forty Acres," the memoirs of T. U. Taylor, retiring Dean of Engineering of the University of Texas.

At 78, he is giving up active service on the University's forty-acre campus (now enlarged) after a half century of teaching there.

In his memoirs, Dean Taylor says he has made a "violent effort to tell the truth." A sketch of his life and his public speeches follow the memoirs but "Each has been labeled fully as a stop signal to the public."

The typed pages of the autographed volume offer a rare mine for a publisher. Beside intimate stories of the founding of the University and events in its official career, there are anecdotes of B Hall; water tower class numeral rivalries; a chapter on the code of duello, telling of famous fist fights at the University, and a priceless facsimile of the original draft of "The Eyes of Texas."

A picture of the old main building when it consisted only of the West wing, which stood against a barren skyline, and a picture of the University as it appeared when the state capitol was being erected are included in the volume.

From Dean Taylor's memoirs it is learned that the cornerstone of the University Main Hall has two errors. The date carved on the stone is Nov. 16, 1882. That was the date intended for the ceremony. A "norther" caused delay and the laying took place Nov. 17. The other is spelling the name of Regent E. J. Simkins, Simpkins.

Dean Taylor traced the University's birth to a remark of Prof. O. H. Cooper of Sam Houston Normal Institute at a dinner given in Sam Houston's former home, Huntsville, at the opening of the institute. Cooper complimented Gov. O. M. Roberts on the founding of the school and said: "I think you should have the credit of starting the State University during your term." Roberts became interested, requested Cooper to write about the plan, and submitted it to the legislature. Location was by election held Sept. 6, 1881.

The fights, concerning which Taylor at great pains obtained first hand versions, include notable battles between men now famous in public affairs. Watt Gregory and Bob Henry, both later to become famous Texans in Washington, fought in the cedar brakes west of Austin over a dispute now uncertain, though attributed to rivalry over a senate committee clerkship.

Class fights between the Laws and Engineers and the full story of Peregrius, patron saint, are given in detail. C. E. Scoggins, author of The Tycoson, is photographed in a molasses and feathers costume he received during one of the class frays.

Increase Shown in the Vocational Classes of the U.S.

By United Press
WASHINGTON.—The Department of Interior announced a enrollment of vocational educational classes throughout the United States and its possessions during 1935 totaled 1,248,000 persons, an increase of 128,000 over 1934.

The office of education revealed that of the total number enrolled, 411,000 were farmers, trade and industrial workers; 281,000 were employed youths enrolled in part-time classes; and 555,000 were boys and girls in full-time attendance in agricultural, trade and industrial courses.

Enrollment in various classes reflects, to a considerable degree, the trends of employment opportunities during 1935, the department said. Workers who have sought additional information and skill in their respective occupations have enrolled in increased numbers in evening classes, and young persons, formerly unable to find employment because of preference given to adults, have been employed in larger numbers during the past year.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN HAMILTON, pretty young secretary in a large business office, goes to a travel agency to make plans for her two-week vacation.

BILL WARE, travel bureau employee, who has arranged other vacation trips for her, tries to persuade her to go to Lake Racine. Ann thinks she prefers the seashore.

For the first time Ann notices that Bill is a good-looking young man. Because she is rushed for time she asks if he can come to her home that evening to finish planning the trip. Ann agrees. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

WILLIAM WARE, the travel agent, called at the little apartment Ann shared with another girl at 8 that evening. The girls had scarcely put the dinner dishes away when he rang. They still had their aprons on.

"Oh!" Ann breathed. "I'd almost forgotten. Alice, you'll have to run on alone to see the movie. That young man from the travel bureau is going to try to change my mind about going to the seashore. He thinks I ought to go to Lake Racine."

Alice eyed her knowingly. "Are you sure this hasn't all the marks of a budding romance?"

"Of course not!" Ann said. "It merely saves me time. He's only the clerk there. No romance about him. I'm going to the seashore to catch my knight in shining armor."

Alice let William Ware in. Ann could tell by her glance that she approved of him. But young Mr. Ware was very business-like with his satchel. He went to the desk and started taking out folders and leaflets, arranging them in neat rows. His manner was brisk.

He didn't see Alice go out of the room, so zealous he had become in his efforts to sell Ann a vacation at Lake Racine. His talk abounded with enthusiasm and salesmanship.

But when he turned he saw Ann smiling at him. He looked around and saw that the other girl had gone. Then, suddenly, his whole manner changed. The salesmanship vanished, and he was laughing with her.

"After the day's work is over it's hard to get out of harness," he said.

Then he talked less glibly, less like a salesman.

His manner became almost awkward but it was an attractive awkwardness because of his clear-cut good looks. His blue eyes held a curious light in them.

"Mr. Ware, must I really go to Lake Racine?" Ann said, eyeing him askance. "I had planned to go to the seashore, but if you insist--"

SHE was laughing at him. He flushed deeply, and she was sorry for having hurt him.

"Call me Bill," he said. "All day long in the office nobody calls me anything but 'Mr. Ware.' I'm human, too. I like to be with pretty girls."

Bill helped her into her coat--his efforts to please her a little jerky.

"Oh!" Ann said archly. Somehow she hadn't been considering him in a romantic light. Out of sheer curiosity she let her eyes meet his again. She found it hard to escape his impetuous regard.

Perhaps he was lonely. Ann had known loneliness in a city teeming with millions. It was truly hard to meet the right people--the people who wouldn't use you, or consider themselves used by your intrusion into their lives. A city, she knew, can be the loneliest place in the world.

"I haven't had much time for dates," he went on, still flushing a little. "Too busy at my job. I've always had to be on my toes, better than the guys who were working under me. Besides, I had a kid brother in high school. Supported him for six years." His eyes held a glow of pride.

"Now he's through school and has gone to work. I have more time for frivolous things."

"You think girls are--frivolous things?" Ann said, smiling at him. For some reason she wanted to tease him. "By the way, are you trying to sell me a trip to Lake Racine or are you trying to sell me--yourself?"

He flushed again, and began to apologize. "I'm sorry. You know, I'm not at the office any longer--" you're a pretty girl--I almost forgot--"

She eyed him sternly again. "Oh! Well, let's get down to business."

"Yes!" he said hastily. "Yes!" He began fingering expense sheets and travel folders. "I suppose you want the regular all-expense vacation. It's the simplest way. Pay it all in one lump, and then enjoy your vacation."

"It will have to be less this year," Ann told him. "We had to take a cut in the office."

"Oh, I'm sorry!" he said. He looked at her for several moments. "Gee, that's tough! I mean--just last week I got a raise. When I get back from my vacation--it's my first in six years--I'm to be advanced to the position of travel consultant." He smiled a little wearily. "It's just a title in the office, but it pays more. I can begin to think about--"

She smiled again. "Frivolous things?"

"You're making fun of me," he said, and his look fell.

SHE was sympathetic and sorry for him now. He really wasn't trying to be slip or take advantage of this business engagement. Ann had known young men who would have used every specious advantage like this to further romance on the fly. Now she began to see Bill Ware in a new light. At least he was sincere.

"I think I will go up to Lake Racine again," she said. "Your talk has been very convincing." His voice was eager now. "Your vacation does come the first two weeks in August, doesn't it? That's when I take mine there."

"When I went back to the office this afternoon," she said, "I found that my vacation comes in July. I'm sorry."

He seemed almost intolerably hurt. All his efforts seemed suddenly to have no meaning. He fingered the folders abstractedly. "Oh--I'm sorry, too. I thought maybe you and I--"

She couldn't bear to witness his disappointment. He looked crestfallen, unhappy, like a small, frustrated boy.

He was a nice boy, once he cast off the aura of the business office. But he was only the boy who worked behind the desk in a travel agency. She saw him almost every day in the year, as she walked up the street at lunch hour. She would never have let him enter her romantic dreams.

Ann had in mind a vacation romance--not the swift, heady kind, but the real thing. A romantic love, something that would last. Her eager mind conjured up scenes on moonlit mountain lakes. The men one met on vacation had a very special aura about them, like knights in shining armor.

But now she said, "I'm sorry--Bill."

His eyes lighted up. He and Ann seemed no longer to be miles apart. He began to talk about himself again.

"All these years I've planned other people's vacations. I've enjoyed their trips--in my imagination. I suppose I have a good imagination now. My idea of a swell vacation always included a girl--"

ANN put out her hand with a low boyish swing, and said, "There are lots of girls! You draw up the papers and I'll drop by your office tomorrow noon to pay the full amount. You know what I can afford--a little less than last year."

Bill stood up, his eyes wide, because he was afraid she was putting him out of her life forever. He fairly blurted out, "Say, I don't want to take up your time but if you're going to a movie, why won't you go with me?"

She looked at him closely, taking his measure. He was too naive and sincere to embarrass her. His abrupt manner and awkwardness rather pleased her.

"All right," she said, shrugging her shoulders. "Sold again! Gre Garbo is right around the corner. I like Greta, too," he said eagerly. "I like to see her in the big parts--classical roles."

Ann was already putting on her hat. Bill Ware reached for his coat and helped her into it--efforts to please her a little jerky. When she was ready to go she put her hand again in a friendly gesture. He took it and she felt hungry, almost incredulous response. For an instant, before opening the door, they looked each other with the understanding look that old friends have.

"Gee, you're swell!" he said. Ann softly laughed.

Once at the movie, during a scene of despair in the heroine's life, Ann let him close his hand over hers. It pleased her to know that he cared a little. He was just plain Bill who wanted to hold her hand at the movies.

Pueblo Exodus Traced by Utah

By United Press
 SALT LAKE CITY.—Discovery of ancient Indian dwellings of a type hitherto unreported has cast new light on the history of early inhabitants of Utah, according to Prof. John P. Gillin, University of Utah archaeologist and anthropologist.

The dwellings, found in Nine Mile Canyon, 50 miles east of Price, Utah, were reported by a university archaeological expedition headed by Gillin. The houses were located on low buttes from three to four hundred feet above the canyon floor. They were constructed with adobe brick foundations, slanting log beams and a fat log roof thatched with willows.

Rock-lined fireplaces found inside the houses were another previously unreported feature of dwellings of that age. The houses were built by Pueblo people about 1,000 years ago, Gillin estimated, and the type of house indicates that the builders were well advanced.

Simple rock "lookout" houses were found on almost inaccessible pinnacles 2,000 feet above the canyon floor.

Gillin advanced the theory that nomadic tribes, possibly Utes from Utah basin, forced the Pueblos from the canyon floor up to their butte homes and that the "look-out" houses on the pinnacles were built for sentries and as impregnable fortresses in case of attacks. All the houses found had been

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

BETWEEN THE DATES OF MARCH 26 AND SEPTEMBER 18, THE SUN SHINES CONTINUOUSLY ON UNITED STATES TERRITORY.

A GOOSE HAS ABOUT 12,000 MUSCLES UNDER ITS SKIN THAT DO NOTHING BUT CONTROL THE ACTION OF THE FEATHERS.

COCKLESBURS SOMETIMES ACT AS BIRD TRAPS, BY ENTANGLING THE FEATHERS OF SMALL BIRDS.

THE sun never sets on the British Empire, but Uncle Sam must be content with about six months out of each year of continuous sunshine. When the sun's northern declination exceeds two degrees, or between the dates given above, some portion of United States territory is bathed in sunlight.

ATTACKERS OR DESTROYED BY LIGHTNING

One of the unsolved mysteries in the archaeological study of Utah is why the Pueblos disappeared after developing a fairly high state of civilization.

Leon Blum's New Deal should be worthwhile, if its AAA pays Frenchmen for not planting underground forts.

STRIKEOUT BY LIGHTNING

BUTTE, Mont.—Le Roy Burns, 14, insists he would have won a local ball game if he had not been struck out by lightning. FUN BEGINS WHEN STORK DROPS IN

The first kiss was thrilling, the first year was fun, but the first baby really started things bubbling!

Telling a robustly real story about a couple of sweet youngsters and their adventures in parenthood, the new Fox picture, "The First Baby," comes Tuesday to the Connellee theatre.

Featuring Johnny Downs, who was recently seen in Irvin Cobb's "Everybody's Old Man," and Shirley Deane in the leading roles, the new picture is a true-to-life love story about young newlyweds, whose smallest worry is a baby boy, and whose biggest is "in-law" trouble.

Married on Johnny's five-dollar raise, they acceded to the nagging of Marjorie Gateson, the girl's mother, and set up home with her. After the baby arrives, conditions become intolerable, so with the aid of Taylor Holmes, the girl's father Johnny sets up a separate apartment.

Before they can occupy it, however, Johnny and Miss Deane break up because she believes he has been attentive to Dixie Dunbar.

Johnny sneaks his little son out for an airing one afternoon, and in a sudden rainstorm, the baby catches cold. In the touchingly human climax, the baby's illness

FRISCO LOCALE IS POTENT WITH STIRRING DRAMA

O. Henry once remarked there were only three cities worth writing about—New York, New Orleans and San Francisco.

Comes now another authority on interesting cities, a world-traveler, who declares there are only six cities worth writing about—New Orleans, San Francisco, London, Cairo, Shanghai and Washington, D. C.

He is W. S. Van Dyke, film director who has led motion picture companies to all corners of the earth and who has visited and lived in most of the interesting cities of the world. His latest picture, "San Francisco," opens Friday at the Connellee theatre with Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald and Spencer Tracy starred.

"San Francisco ranks among the most colorful cities," he said, "because of its exciting past. It was born on the mud flats in the days of the gold rush. It is today the only real cosmopolitan city in the west.

Finally unites his parents and prepares them to resist "in-law" interference forever.

Lamar Trotti authored both the original and the screen story for this picture, which was directed by Lewis Seiler.
