

Poultry and Egg Shipments Down

AUSTIN, Tex.—As usual at season of the year, interstate shipments of poultry and eggs are light during July, but they are considerably above those of last year on a percentage basis.

Interstate shipments of both poultry and eggs totaled 63 cars, compared with 45 cars last year, an increase of 40 per cent.

These shipments 33 cars were poultry, as compared with 12 cars last year; and 30 cars were eggs, compared with 33 cars a year ago.

Cattle Shipments Show a Decrease

AUSTIN, Tex.—Live stock shipments from Texas to the North and South during July were sharply below those of the like month last year, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

Total shipments of all classes of live stock, 2,655 cars, compared with 3,244 cars during July last year, a decrease of 18.2 per cent.

Percentage changes in shipments compared with July, 1935, varied widely with the different classes of live stock. Cattle shipments, 1,285 cars, were 44 per cent under those of the like month last year.

On the other hand, sheep shipments, 399 cars, were 212 per cent greater than in July last year, when only 128 cars moved.

It is probable that the decline in Texas cattle, calf and sheep shipments was largely due to price depression resulting from distress marketing of these classes of animals in the death region of the state.

Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director of the Bureau of Business Research, said that prices have risen sharply in recent weeks and thus stimulated shipments. Only 53 cars of hogs were brought into Texas from interstate points, against 63 cars in July last year.

Texas cattlemen are obviously in position to hold their live stock in present glutted markets and reap advantage both from improvement in quality and increase in price later in the season.

Water Blushes As It Tests Breath

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—An "Alkometer" which "blushes" a rosy red when it encounters an alcohol breath is one of the latest inventions for detecting secret tippers.

The "Alkometer" is about 14 inches long, almost flat and 4 inches wide. At one end is a tube through which the suspect blows breath and at the other a copper coil to which is attached a vial of colorless liquid.

The colorless liquid is the secret of the invention. If the suspect is inebriated, the liquid turns a rosy red. If he is sincere his penitentiary of innocence remains colorless.

Landon And Unemployment

It becomes astonishing to learn from routine reports the extent to which Kansas under the administration of Gov. Alf M. Landon has refused to cooperate with the other states and the Federal Government in fighting the depression.

In his speech accepting the Republican presidential nomination, Candidate Landon said: "The record shows that in 1933 the primary need was jobs for the unemployed. The record shows that in 1936 the primary need still was jobs for the unemployed. The time has come to stop this stumbling with recovery."

Of course Candidate Landon ignored the summer report of the Alexander Hamilton Institute that showed almost exactly six million of those who were unemployed in 1933 had secured jobs in 1936. But let us look at the record of Gov. Landon on getting jobs for the unemployed.

Throughout 1932 Franklin D. Roosevelt stressed the need for free employment changes, not only to restore employment as quickly as possible but to rid the country of senseless fee-grabbers who for years had preyed on helpless job-seekers.

In June, 1933, President Roosevelt signed the Wagner-Steagall Act, providing for Federal-State free employment changes, locally managed but financed jointly by Federal and State Governments. Immediately States began to cooperate, despite all manner of inconvenience.

But did Gov. Landon cooperate? He did not. The record shows that although Gov. Landon has functioned with Republican legislatures during both of his terms, he pursued in this vital matter the same do-nothing policy that characterized his attitude toward other progressive measures.

Kansas therefore has reaped none of the benefits from these Federal-State exchanges which together with the federally-operated exchanges secured 3,543,124 private jobs for persons up to June 30 this year. Job-seekers in Kansas as far as Gov. Landon is concerned will continue to be at the mercy of private placement bureaus whose general history has been that of practicing extortion.

Carbon 4-H Members Believe Work Well Repaid in Eight Mile Walks

Abraham Lincoln, according to histories, walked sixteen miles to get new books. Billie and Larue Bohannon, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bohannon, members of the Carbon Boys' and Girls' 4-H clubs, walk eight miles every month to attend the 4-H club meetings at Carbon, Texas.

Club Boosters

Billie has become fully convinced that feed when put in a trench silo will not spoil or rot, and that a trench silo on their farm is what they needed, because they have a very small barn on their farm. He expects to start digging his silo within a few days. He expects to show the people of Eastland county what he has done in 4-H club work this year, by exhibiting his year's work at the Community and County Fairs as well as the Texas Centennial show at Dallas.

Recently a business man in Eastland was talking to Billie regarding his 4-H club work this year, and Billie made the following statement: "Since I have joined the boys' 4-H club, I am much more interested in farming, because I have something on that farm that I can say really belongs to me." "I am well repaid for walking eight miles to attend the 4-H club meetings," says Larue Bohannon, fifteen-year-old garden demonstrator of the girls' 4-H club at Carbon. There are six in her family and she planned and planted a garden spot large enough to furnish the entire family with a variety of fresh vegetables and a surplus to can for the winter.

Life of the Saint Of the Day

By REV. S. E. BYRNE

St. Rose was born at Lima in 1586. She was Christened Isabel, but the beauty of her infant face earned from her the title of Rose, which she ever after bore. At an early age she took service to support her impoverished parents, and worked for their day and night. In spite of hardships and sufferings her beauty ripened with increasing age, and she was much and openly admired. From fear of vanity, she cut off her hair that she might no longer be considered beautiful. For further security she enrolled herself in the Third Order of St. Dominic, took St. Katherine of Siena as her model, and redoubled her penance. Her cell was a garden hut, her couch a box of broken tiles. Under her habit Rose wore a hair-skirt studded with iron nails, while, concealed by her veil, a silver crown armed with ninety points encircled her head. More than once when she shuddered at the prospect of a night of torture, a voice said, "My cross was yet more painful." The Blessed Sacrament seemed almost her only food. When the Dutch fleet prepared to attack the town, Rose took her place before the tabernacle, and wept that she was not worthy to die in its defense. All her sufferings were offered for the conversion of sinners, and through her mind always ran the thought of the multitudes in hell. She died in 1617, at the age of thirty-one.

Softball Growing Because Almost Anyone Can Play

By Richard M. Morehead United Press Staff Correspondent

FORT WORTH, Tex. — Softball is Texas' fastest-growing sport because it is strictly amateur, inexpensive and has fewer aching muscles "the morning after." That is the opinion of Harold E. White, Wichita Falls, state commissioner. Business men find softball a game to reduce 40-inch waistlines without developing athletic hearts. They don't need a hundred dollars worth of equipment and it doesn't interfere with work, since games are played after business hours, at night, or Sunday afternoons.

This season found 1,000 or more organized teams in 350 Texas leagues. White estimated that 2,000 teams were formed in 1935. He attributed the decline this summer to a warning that softball was hurting America's national past-time—baseball.

Many teams were persuaded to delay organization this summer. The state commissioner said he knew personally of 50 leagues organized since July 1, each with four or more teams.

"One of the outstanding reasons for the popularity of softball is the speed of the game," said White. "People have become accustomed to amusements run in rapid fire order. With the limiting of the pitching this year, much hitting and faster fielding has contributed no small amount to the revival of the game."

Last year, a good pitcher would strike out from 15 to 21 men in a game. This year, the very best pitchers rarely get over 12 strikeouts.

Interest of women, both as players and spectators, is another factor listed in the popularity of softball.

"There is nothing spectacular in the game played by our feminine teams," White said. "Taken as a whole, however, their scores are closed. Women have gone into the sport because it is not violent and does not cause staleness due to excessive training."

When softball was first played by adults in Texas, it was considered a "sissy" game by many who later became star players. Only the catcher and first basemen wore gloves on their receiving hands. The ball was an over-sized, over-stuffed 14-inch outdoor affair that most anybody could handle with a little practice, and the bat was a "baby" compared to the heavy willows used by baseball batters.

From these incongruities grew the sport that today threatens to steal the affections of Texas' baseball, golf and tennis adherents. Antics of the local Rotary team, perspiring and joking while they played the blue-denimed boys from across the tracks—possibly workers at the cotton gin—has appealed strongly to home towners.

If the same homely appeal can be maintained, softball may become one of the great sports that Americans invented, perfected, watched—then played.

Right Kind of Food Important For One's Health

AUSTIN — That vigorous good health depends not alone upon freedom from disease, but upon the proper amounts and kinds of foods eaten is stressed in a statement from Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer. "The human body," he said, "may be compared to a steam-engine burning fuel for the steam, which furnishes power. The food we eat is fuel and when digested and absorbed gives the energy necessary to live and go about our daily activities."

"In considering the proper amount of food for our individual needs, we should take into consideration the kind of work our body will be called upon to perform during the day. When more food is taken into the body than is needed to carry on its activities extra work is thrown on the organs that carry off waste. This is especially true of the kidneys, and often results in serious after-effects."

"The growing child will need more tissue-building food than older people, but must also have the foods which supply heat and energy, and minerals to regulate the body. The foods which contain vitamins, such as fruits, vegetables and milk are necessary to old and young alike."

"The various kinds of food needed by the body are: Tissue building foods—meat, fish, milk, beans and nuts. Energy and heat giving foods—bread and cereals, fats and all sweets. Foods containing minerals—vegetables, fruits and whole wheat. Foods rich in vitamins—milk, vegetables and fruits."

"An important thing to remember in our food problem is the fact that it is not necessary to eat until we feel 'filled up.' Take plenty of time eating and do not follow food fads or eat certain things because they agree with some friend who has recommended them to you. If your food does not agree with you go to your physician and let him find out what is causing the trouble."

Retrial Nears For Mother In Her Killing for Mercy

ALBANY, N. Y. — Granted new trials by New York's highest tribunals, 27-year-old Mrs. Dorothy Sherwood, charged with the "merciful" drowning of her infant, and Manning Strewel, charged with participating in the O'Connell kidnaping, will fight for acquittal in mid-September.

Coincidentally, both trials will be in session simultaneously along the Hudson River within a distance of 55 miles. At Newburgh, Mrs. Sherwood, a former showgirl and Salvation Army lassie from the West, will face a new Supreme Court jury. She was convicted at her first trial, and although the jury recommended mercy, was sentenced to death in the electric chair. She was to have been executed at Sing Sing prison last month.

The Court of Appeals came to her aid after it was shown the jury was not aware of mandatory death despite a recommendation for mercy.

Strewel, who was convicted of her aid after it was shown the jury was not aware of mandatory death despite a recommendation for mercy. Strewel, who was convicted of participating in the abduction of John J. O'Connell, Jr., a nephew of the powerful Albany political leaders, in 1933, will be given a new trial at Catskill. At his first trial in Albany, he was sentenced to 50 years in prison. He failed to convince a Supreme Court jury that he acted only in the capacity

TODAY IS OURS

by NARD JONES

BEGIN HERE TODAY JUDITH HOWARD has been engaged to STEPHEN FOWLER for four years.

Judith turned. "There's no need of your running away, Steve," she said.

AT the sound of Virginia's voice, Judith and Steve sprang apart.

"Damn!" said Steve in a low voice. "She'd naturally choose this time to come popping in here. I'll skip along, Judith. I can see you tomorrow."

Judith turned in the hallway. "There's no need for your running away, Steve. Please stay a little while."

Stephen stayed, finding it impossible to do anything else. Into the little apartment, as if on the crest of a typhoon, came Bob and Virginia Bent—with Tony Lynch.

"Hel-lo, Steve!" exclaimed Toby, extending his hand. Without enthusiasm Steve shook hands with him, returning his greeting with an unenthusiastic, "How are you, Toby?"

The two were as unlike as possible. Steve Fowler was tall and solid and thoughtful. Toby was small, almost rotund, and apparently had never possessed a continuous train of thought in his life.

Virginia shot a glance toward Judith. "You and Steve didn't plan on going out, did you? We thought we'd just drop in for a five-cornered chat. That thing Bob is holding behind him isn't his hat. It's a bottle of cocktails."

"And what cocktails," mentioned Toby. "The Bent Special!" With an effort Judith tried to project herself into a lighter mood. She held out her hand for Bob's container of cocktails. "I'll chill them in the refrigerator a while."

There are cigarettes on the little table there. Steve followed her into the kitchen. "What's the idea of encouraging them to stay?" he whispered. "You know I wanted to talk to you."

Not looking at him, she opened the refrigerator door and set the bottle of cocktails against the icy pipes. "I can't send them away," she said quietly. "And I think everything was clear, wasn't it, even before they came?"

"You mean we're finished?" "I mean we're friends. And that's all." Steve was about to speak when Toby's raucous voice carried into the kitchen. "If you two don't get away from that refrigerator those cocktails will have no chance at all to chill!"

RESIGNEDLY, Steve returned with Judith to the other room. He looked at Toby, his eyes clouded with ill concealed contempt. He had never cared much for Lynch, and he liked him even less.

now. More than once he had suggested to Judith that she should have nothing to do with him.

"But he's perfectly harmless," Judith always defended. "And he's a good friend of Virginia's and Bob's—so what can we do?"

Steve said nothing to Judith around it. It was one of those stories which a man will hide from the women of his acquaintance, no matter what he thinks of the protagonist of the story.

Toby Lynch was supposed to have persuaded a girl to share his apartment with him in lieu of marriage. Part of the story was that they were very much in love, and unable to marry—but this failed to condone the matter in Steve Fowler's mind.

He had never seen Toby Lynch in the company of a young woman, and this lent credence to the story rather than not.

The conversation, chilled a little by Steve's silence and Judith's obvious preoccupation, went rather badly. Finally, in desperation, Bob went to the kitchen and brought out his cocktails. They warmed the loquacious Toby into a running fire of comment, and succeeded in mellowing the Bents. But Steve drank little, and Judith always limited herself to one cocktail.

Yet Virginia made no move to leave, and Judith realized that she intended to keep herself and Toby and Bob there until Steve Fowler had departed. Plainly Virginia wasn't going to leave Judith alone with him again.

At length she set down her glass and got up. Steve looked relieved—but he was to suffer disappointment. "Judith," she said, "let's you and I go over to my apartment and scare up some sandwiches. These males look hungry, and I can tell they're dying to discuss the baseball scores."

Toby grinned at Bob. "The perfect wife," he complimented. "How does a mug like you manage to keep her?"

VIRGINIA met this with a pleasant laugh, and steered Judith out the door. When they had gone, Bob said, "I don't keep her, Toby. She keeps herself. That's one of the advantages of having a wife who's self-supporting. She knows she can leave any time she wants to. So she doesn't leave, and she's perfectly happy."

Toby laughed. He turned to Steve speculatively. "I've been expecting you and Judith to take the leap any day now, Steve."

Thoughtfully Steve twisted his pipe in fingers. "Well . . . you see, I don't agree with Bob exactly. I suppose Judith and I could marry if I were willing to have her keep her job. But I'm not. I've always had an idea that a man should support his wife."

"I had that idea, too," Bob said, grinning. "But Virginia convinced me that I was wrong. I've always been a weak-willed person."

Steve and the husband working. Toby insisted. "It's the solution to modern conditions. Or at least, it's been the solution for the past five or six years. This guy Dan Cupid never heard of a depression. He just goes around raising the devil as if there were no such thing as a salary cut. I think Bob's dead right, Steve."

He paused and looked at Fowler. "You can carry pride too far, you know."

"It's not entirely a matter of pride," Steve told him. "I've never believed a married woman should work—not when there are thousands of single girls looking for jobs and not finding them."

"That's a specious argument," Bob put in. "Oh, I'll grant that there are some married women working in offices—married women who could get along on their husband's salary."

But mostly those women who are so well trained that their job couldn't really be filled by the average single girl looking for a job. Let's take Virginia and myself as an example. Suppose I hadn't married her? She'd be working at her job, just as she is now. So what difference does it make to the unemployment situation whether we're married or unmarried? No, Steve. I think you're trying to work up a logical, economic argument to justify your pride."

Steve smiled slowly. "Maybe so."

"WELL," put in Toby, twisting impatiently in his chair, "I'd even go one step further than Bob."

"What do you mean?" asked Steve, raising his head.

"Bob and Virginia took a big chance when they married."

"With due respect to Bob, I can't see that they did," Steve argued. "Both have jobs. Either job would probably support the two of them, if they were careful and willing to make sacrifices. I can't see that they took any chance at all."

"You're wrong Steve," said Toby, rising and walking toward the box of cigarettes on the little table. Carefully he took one up, lighted it. "Look here. It's a well known fact about human nature that people want what they can't have. Suppose Bob and Virginia had wanted to marry only because it looked as if they couldn't? Then discovered afterward they'd made the wrong move. That would have been bad, wouldn't it?"

"I'm afraid I'm not following you very well," Steve said.

"There's only one sensible solution to the problem of two people in love who can't marry for economic reasons," Toby Lynch went on. "They should simply share an apartment together, split all the expenses. Then when business returns to normal, when all the salary cuts are restored and the birds start singing in the trees, these two can look at each other and decide whether they should really marry."

"It's a nice idea for the man," Steve said quietly. "But what happens to the girl? I know it's a very modern world—but most people still think a lot of the marriage rite."

Toby snorted. "You'd be surprised at the number of such young couples right in this town today. And as for the girl—any woman who's really in love is willing to make the sacrifice. I tell you, Steve, it's the only way. You won't lose any of your real friends, and the others don't matter. That's the thing for you and Judith."

Toby Lynch did not finish. In what seemed to be one uncontrollable movement, Steve Fowler leaped from his chair and knocked Toby sprawling against the table.

News From 4-H Clubs of County

My Short Course Trip Loraine Byrd—Flatwood Club I left Eastland Sunday morning July 19th, for College Station. We stopped in Waco and ate our lunch in the Park and arrived at College Station at 3:30. We soon found our rooms. Each morning at six o'clock a whistle blew for us to get up. All the 4-H Club boys and girls met in Guion Hall where Mr. Walton, president of the College gave us a welcome address. Miss Onah Jacks made a talk on "Furnishing the Yard," in which she suggested to not put too many artificial things in our yards. She also states that it is best to use only the colors that blend well. Lawn chairs and a hammock add to the comfort of the yard as well as attractiveness. Miss Myrtle Murray, District Home Demonstration, made a very interesting talk on "Once upon a Time in Texas." She told us about Texas Missions and the great men of Texas. She told us what a hard time the first people who came to Texas had to look for water, grass and protection from the Indians. The cattle thieves stole the settlers' cattle by changing the brands on them. There were many things such as quilts, bedspreads, pillows, canned products and numerous other interesting things. A demonstration was given on revarnishing old woods. We were shown how to arrange furniture and how to select and hang pictures. We attended the Bedroom Contest. There the girls had the bedspreads and pillows that they had made on exhibit. The prizes were awarded to the winners and each winner told how she had improved her bedroom by giving the cost. Each night all the boys and girls gathered at the Stadium for various entertainments. One night the Gainesville Community Circus

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY NEA Service YOU can beat an omelet—yes, indeed—but you'll try a long time to find any other dish that beats it for the number of ways in which it can be varied. Think of the list: plain omelet, mushroom omelet, Spanish omelet, bacon omelet, cheese omelet, jelly omelet. With its many variations, the omelet is equally appropriate for breakfast, luncheon, dinner or a late supper. It has the added virtues of being palatable and nutritious. Omelets have just one drawback, and that is that they must be served as soon as they are prepared. You can't cook an omelet and expect it to wait 10 or 15 minutes before it's eaten and remain the tender, fluffy thing it was when it left the pan. Here is the recipe for plain omelet, the foundation for all the others. Plain Omelet Use one egg for each person to be served and one egg for the pan. Use 1 tablespoon of hot water for each egg. Water makes a more tender omelet than milk. So for four people you would use: Five eggs, 5 tablespoons hot water, 1 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper. Separate yolks from whites of eggs. Add water to yolks and beat until thick and lemon colored, using a rotary beater. Beat in half the salt and all the pepper. Beat whites of eggs on a platter with a wire whisk, beating in remaining salt. Beat until stiff. Fold in yolks of eggs and pour gently into a well greased omelet pan or spider and cook slowly until the underside is a delicate brown. Then put the pan in a moderate oven (325 to 350 degrees F.) and bake until firm to the touch. Then fold and slide onto a hot platter. Bacon Omelet Cook bacon until crisp and break into tiny pieces. Add to omelet mixture before cooking. One slice of bacon to an egg is a good proportion to use. This is good for breakfast or it makes an excellent luncheon dish for children. Serve with a milk and apple sauce and cookies. Cheese Omelet Serve this with grilled tomatoes, cauliflower in cream sauce or broccoli with Hollandaise sauce. It is good for dinner with a hearty dessert, or, without the vegetables, you will like it for a late supper. When the omelet is put in the oven to finish cooking, sprinkle the top generously with grated cheese. Fold and serve as usual. Cottage Cheese Omelet Before you fold the omelet spread with a generous layer of rich cottage cheese. Sprinkle with minced chives. Fold and serve. sister-in-law, Mrs. W. C. Brooks and family. SHOOTING THE MAVERICK

MAVERICK

A Ranger sportswriter who types his news with accuracy got a laugh the other day when he told him Eastland's team would average 165.

"That's a mighty big team," he declared. He dug into the clippings and showed us the Ranger team of 1934 averaged only 161. And on the team were many who tipped the scales over 170. That was the year Ranger won the district and had satellites like Britt, Anderson and others. Even when Abilene had the team whose members were dubbed "elephants" the average wasn't much more than 165, the Ranger writer stated.

On second thought the Maverick team won't average what was first reported. The exact weights haven't been ascertained, as far as we know, Trantham probably is the heaviest man in the squad.

Gorman school board members last week hired Roy Dillon as the successor to Coach Spraberry. Dillon taught in Anderson county five and a half years. A graduate of Trinity University, Dillon will start his "B" team Sept. 5.

The cancellation of plans for Eastland's annual golf tournament should contribute heavily to the success of Cisco's Sept. 5, 6, and 7. Having the Labor Day date, the tournament at Cisco should attract many from here and Ranger. And Ranger, too, has not announced plans for its annual tournament.

It seems strange that Eastland should not plan a tournament. One was presented for 15 consecutive years, even during the years when finances were admittedly bad.

The tournament was one of the oldest in the Oil Belt and West Texas.

One reason for the local golf tournament's decline was the purchase of the Prairie Oil Company by the Sinclair several years ago and the resulting transfer of many of the former firm's employees. The Prairie had many employees who took an active part in the tournament. When they moved it hurt the registration list. However, many of the former employees came from Fort Worth to participate in the tournament each year.

Still, it occurs to us, its shame Eastland won't have a tournament. Eastland will lose lots of sports publicity.

Installation of kleigs is fast being completed in the district. At Sweetwater installation of all equipment except the underground cable, leading from the highline to the control is completed.

In characteristic style, Coach Dewey Mayhew wept on Reporter Proxy Anderson's shoulder at Abilene last week. After their names were cleared and tears wiped away, it was apparent:

Four lettermen were on hand and only one squadman from last year was missing, Roland McAdams, an end. McAdams probably will report.

Veterans from the 1935 campaign are Odell Herman, all-district end; Leonard Joeris, 205-pound tackle; Norman Crompton, hard hitting ball carrier, and R. B. Galbraith, a blocking back.

Those reporting: Odell Herman, J. T. Bell, Pete Simpson, Cecil Haddox, Charles Harber, Richard Fry, ends; Leonard Joeris, Zolus Motley, Phillips Hefley, J. B. Morrison, Donald McKnight, tackles;

License Bureau For Auto Drivers Functions Nicely. AUSTIN - The Drivers' License Bureau, newest branch of the State Department of Public Safety, is functioning smoothly, Chief L. G. Phares of the highway patrol announced here. Since operations were begun on Feb. 14, the bureau has filed approximately three million drivers and chauffeurs licenses. Two files are kept. County clerks who issue the licenses make three copies. One is given to the driver, and two are sent to the bureau to be filed by county and by number. Of greater service, and a boon to the men who must supervise highway traffic in a state as large as Texas, is the accident map and file kept by the bureau, Chief
