Constitution Reflects Nations Faith, Ideals

Perhaps the most encouraging thing about the Constitution of the United States is the fact that after living under it for 150 years we are still arguing about its precise meaning.

That means that the document is flexible. Being flexible, it is adaptable to changing times. Because this is true, it can obey that inexorable law of nature—"adapt or die."

That fact is a good one to keep in mind this fall, as we celebrate the Constitution's sesquicentennial.

We might save ourselves a good deal of argument about "horse and buggy days" and the fact that the founding fathers did not foresee this era of sea-to-sea highways, giant corporations, mass production and so on. For while it is quite true that the country for which the Constitution was devised contained none of those things, it is equally true that that does not necessarily make any difference. They gave us a Constitution which is not rigid and inanimate, but supple and alive.

It is easy to lose sight of the goal which the founding fathers sought to reach. Fundamentally, they were simply trying to make certain that their America would continue to be a democracy, a land of freedom and of equal opportunity, where men could live without butting their heads against the injustices and stupid cruelties inseparable from authoritarian regimes. They had a pretty clear idea about the things that had been fought for and won in the American revolution, and they wanted those things preserved.

During the century and a half since they finished their work, the Constitution has done its part nobly. Those goals of freedom, democracy and equality have in large measure been attained, not perfectly, perhaps—for perfection is rare in human undertakings—but very substantially. And the very fact that the country has existed for a century and a half under this Constitution is the best guarantee that it will continue under it in the future.

A Charter of freedom like our Constitution does not go on living of itself. It lives because it expresses ideals which are dear to the people who live under it. Our Constitution is rounding out 150 years of service because the American people are and have been determined to remain free. The Constitution is merely the instrument through which they make their determination effective.

It is no blind subservience to the written word that makes us revere our Constitution, nor is it an unthinking obedience to the dead hand of the past. It is a reflection of the ideal that animates us, of the faith by which we order our society. As long as we are true to that ideal and that faith, we need not fear for the Constitution's continued good health.

Fiesta Enters Its Last Week With Good Attendance

FORT WORTH, Sept. 21.—Realizing that only a few days remain in which to see the magnificent Casa Manana Revue, the largest crowds of the season ushered in the closing week of the Fort Worth Frontier Fiesta.

An all-new 30-minute jamboree, a feature of the second performance of Casa Manana each night, is being presented, starring Everett West, high note tenor of the California Varsity Eight; Al Galodoro, hot saxophonist of Paul Whiteman's band; Gomez and Winona, greatest of ballroom dancers; Harriet Hector, the lovely ballerina, the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, and Art Frank, eccentric dancer, who turns serious for once to give a touching impersonation of a Confederate veteran as he hears Civil War tunes. There is no increase in admission price for the second performance of Casa Manana with the jamboree.

Not only are the crowds filling the huge cafe-theater, but Pioneer Palace, Firefly Garden, the Astor House and other attractions are playing to throngs. The recent abolition of the 50-cent charge for entrance into the grounds has helped stimulate attendance. The Frontier Fiesta closes Sunday night, Sept. 26.

By United Press

ABILENE, Tex.—A sun-browned, sandy haired youth of 22 stalked into the office of County Judge Lee R. York and asked: "Can you issue me a license to brew beer?" "For what?" demanded the surprised judge. "To make home brew," explained Penn Gilbreath, the judge's secretary. "I've never heard of such a thing," Judge York answered, after considerable pondering. "No, I can't issue such a license and I doubt that anyone else could." "Thank you," said the caller. "I just wondered," and stalked out again.

Wrong, Well, yes—and no. The arithmetic of your school days taught that "If Mary had five dollars and spent two..." three dollars remained.

But that is mathematics—not shopping! In managing a home... guarding a limited family income... we've simply got to do better than Mary did. We must sharpen our buying wits... ascertain where the dollars of extra value lurk... take five dollars to town and get much more for the money spent.

Fortunately, there are ever-willing guides right at hand—the advertisements in this newspaper. Advertised merchandise is often exceptional value merchandise. It makes dollars S-T-R-E-T-C-H.

How long did you tell me you've known Miss Kerr—Amy Kerr, that right? "Yes," Cilly repeated what she had told the night before. She met Amy some six months previous, in the canyon building, where they both worked. "We frequently met downstairs in the tea shoppe for lunch," she added. "Amy spoke of the difficulty in finding a nice place to live in New York. She had been staying at a girls' residence club and did not like it very much. Finally I suggested that she share this apartment with me. That was two months ago."

IN his book, Sergeant Dolan wrote: "See Harvey Ames." "What company did you say you were with, Miss Pierce?" he asked. "Crowell and Burns, attorneys," "Secretary, I suppose."

"No, junior attorney. I was admitted to the bar two years ago," Sergeant Dolan raised his eyebrows. He looked Cilly over with a new respect dawning in his eyes. "You don't say! Quite a youngster to be a full-fledged lawyer, aren't you?"

"I'm 27." "Twenty-seven, eh? Well, you don't look it. Just a bit of it. And how old was Miss Kerr?" "She was younger than I. We celebrated her 25th birthday together only a few weeks ago."

Sergeant Dolan nodded. His eyes never quiet for a second, were still roving about the room. They saw everything and they saw through everything, it seemed to Cilly. He went on: "Was she unhappy about anything? Worried?" "Not at all."

"Had she quarreled with anybody? Was there anybody, as far as you know, whom she particularly hated or feared?" "Nobody that I ever heard of. Of course, she didn't speak of her past very much."

"Wasn't that unusual?" "Not with Amy. She was naturally a reticent person; she never
