CHINA CHEERED BY PROSPECTS OF SOVIET AID

TOKYO, Aug. 3.—The Foreign office rejected a protest filed today by the Soviet Charge d'Affaires against a raid on the Soviet Consulate in Tientsin. The protest alleged that the Japanese army had some connection with the raid.

TIENSIN, China, Aug. 3.—Japanese airplanes went into action against Chinese troops in the area south of Tientsin and north of Peiping today. Japanese military authorities said the planes had bombed two Chinese troop trains and one armored train.

SHANGHAI, China, Aug. 3.—Encouraged by widespread reports that Soviet Russia will threaten military pressure unless Japan gives her "satisfaction" for Sunday night's raid on the Russian Consulate in Tientsin, China tonight rushed additional troops to the Yellow River and prepared for a showdown fight.

The Chinese based their hopes of Soviet intervention on these factors:
1. Russia would like to regain her dominant position in Manchuria and regain the vital Chinese Eastern Railway, which Japan forced her to surrender following the Chinese-Japanese war of 1931-33.

2. Russian control of outer Mongolia and her penetration of the vast area west of Peiping will be checked and Soviet influence in Central Asia wrecked if the Japanese gain control of all North China.

3. Moscow fears that Japan plans, eventually, to seize Russia's Siberian maritime provinces to complete the Japanese program for "domination of Northern Asia."

Meatline events moved rapidly toward a general war in which more than 500,000 men may be engaged with the fate of 100,000,000 Chinese in five northern provinces at stake.

Chinese took the offensive on all fronts. However, three-engined Japanese bombers roared south, west and north and rained bombs on Chinese troop concentrations.

The Chinese said the air raids were ineffective as their troops were well scattered. Plans to evacuate foreigners from danger zones were hastened.

MOSCOW, Aug. 3.—Soviet newspapers this evening described the raid on the Russian Consulate in Tientsin as a deliberate effort by the Japanese Army to involve Russia in the North China war.

Mid-Week Program At Church Is Listed

The demand among local Presbyterians for a mid-week service became so profound several weeks ago that a program of Wednesday evening meditations was begun. The excellent response from the people has continued to indicate that this interest will be lasting. Accordingly the program is going forward with increasing stimulus and enthusiasm, and the programs for each meditation are prepared with great care and study, leaders state.

At the first of these mid-week meditations the practice was begun of assembling promptly at eight o'clock, and dismissing no later than 8:45. The program consists of a short but pointed devotional service that is built about a carefully selected passage of scripture. Built about this meditation is a song service which includes the singing of choice hymns, old and new, that are appropriate. Much attention is directed to the proper interpretation of our better hymns and becoming familiar with an occasional new hymn of the best quality. The correct singing of good hymns is considered of great importance in the Presbyterian church under the conviction that through singing comes the mutual expression of religious experience, leading to genuine worship.

The program for the meditation this Wednesday is based on chapter twelve of Paul's epistle to the Romans. The hymns that will be studied are:

"Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me," Toplady.
"Love Divine, All Loves Excelling," Wesley.
"The Church's One Foundation," Stone.
"Blest Be the Tie that Binds," Fawcett.
"Lead, Kindly Light," Newman.

The public is cordially invited to attend at the Presbyterian auditorium at eight o'clock, Wednesday evening.—Reporter.

Applications for examination, which will be held at Eastland, must be made to the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington by August 20. The commission will notify applicants of the assembling of competitors on admission cards sent applicants after the date for the close of receipt of applications and will be about 15 days after that date.

MISSING PLANE FOUND SUNK AT CRISTOBAL

By United Press
WASHINGTON, August 3.—A missing Pan-American plane, en route north from Santiago, Chile, was found about 30 miles north-east of Cristobal, today, according to word from the navy in the Canal Zone. The message said the plane was found submerged with no sign of life aboard.

Naval authorities were certain as to the fate of the 11 passengers and three crew members. The dispatch received here did not indicate their fate.

Naval authorities said there was a possibility those aboard the plane were taken off by some other rescue craft.

Sixty-four planes and four surface vessels were dispatched by army and navy forces in the Canal Zone to hunt for the craft, which was lost as it prepared to land at Cristobal.

The ship, piloted by Stephen Dunn, a six-year veteran, was due at Cristobal at 7 p. m. yesterday. At 6:30 the plane radioed it was over Bilboa on the Pacific side of the Canal Zone. It said it was flying in clouds at an altitude of 5,000 feet.

An hour later it reported it was circling over Cristobal in a heavy rain. It had 5,000 feet altitude and reported visibility was good. No more was heard from the plane after that.

Racketeering Unions Play a Smooth Game

No matter how the individual citizen stands on the organizational rights of employes or employers, he will find it advantageous to be aware of the practices and principles—or lack of them—which distinguish racketeering from legitimate activity.

New York City has been going through a stiff course in these fundamentals with Thomas E. Dewey, special prosecutor of rackets, as teacher.

The recent trial of a group of men for conspiracy to put out of business such bakeries as failed to abide by certain rules and prices established by an "association" provides some good examples of complications that may arise.

One witness testified that when a price-cutting baker was to be chastized, the organization put a "black wagon" on his route.

A Bronx baker who suspected, but could not prove that union officials and officers of a bakers' association were conspiring to drive him out of business, told how his shop was picketed and one of his trucks burned.

Now a price-cutting war in itself is not necessarily evidence of racketeering. Nor is the formation of a union of workers, or an association of business men.

A typical feature of the rackets is that their promoters are adept at picking out the right spot and the right time to begin without attracting attention.

Right now, then, when scores of new, legally sanctioned unions are being formed, and uncertainty over industrial readjustment is diverting the attention of a nervous public, the field is perfectly smoke-screened for all shades and varieties of illegitimate organization projects.

The racketeer has been chased down and prosecuted, sporadically, in many communities. But he always comes back, and he always exacts the same toll from the common man, who usually already has had as much expense as his pocketbook will bear.

Therein lies an object lesson which may be painfully administered to any person unless he is forewarned and forearmed. There must be a weeding of the bad from the good, and all the good sense and discernment of everyone will be needed to do it properly.

In fact, besides those who are victimized by the chiseling imitators, many another honest person is likely to wake up some day and find himself actually affiliated with such a bunch of outlaws. That's just how smoothly the game is played.

Best-Dressed Woman

BY HELEN WELSHIMER COPYRIGHT, 1937, NEA SERVICE, INC.

JUDITH IRVING, heroine, America's best dressed woman. PHILIP IRVING, Judith's estranged husband. MARTA ROGERS, Judith's rival. WALTER KNIGHT, another of Judith's old classmates. MILLICENT BAYNE, Bruce's protegee. Yesterday, Phil confesses his love for Marta. And later Judith overhears Marta tell Phil, "Didn't I tell you she only wanted—clothes!"

CHAPTER V WITH a hurt that became a slow rhythm to which she moved, Judith went through the gestures of being a hostess Sunday morning at breakfast, pouring coffee with gay graciousness, slipping into the yellow swim suit that made her hair darker, her eyes gold-flecked; swimming across the pool again and again; presiding at the out-of-door luncheon on the flagged terrace. Then it was 4 o'clock and everyone was piling into cars to have tea at an author's up the road. She hung back. She needed a few moments to examine this strange new experience that had come, to explain it to herself, and make ready for tomorrow and tomorrow, all the tomorrows, without Phil. As dusk turned into darkness and the odor of wet, damp earth came up from the brook, she went out to the balcony that swung along the bedrooms. She did not know how long she had been standing there, in the shadows, when she became aware that someone was on the balcony with her. "Did I frighten you? Bruce and I drove back a little while ago." It was Millicent. "Everyone else is being merry. I don't like laughter when I can't laugh." The girl pulled her chair over to Judith's corner and they sat very still, not talking, not knowing that they didn't. Behind her, in her bedroom, Judith had left one small blue lamp glowing on the dressing table. Its light was dim but when a shadow crossed it, the blur was noticeable. Judith turned her head. Had Phil come back? Did he want to see her, to explain, to take her broken world and put it together with his strong, brown fingers? It wasn't Phil. It was a woman. As her head bent over, just above the blue bulb, her hair was recklessly golden. Marta! Millicent had turned, too. Together they watched. Marta picked up something, slipped it into the pocket of her white coat, and went out. WHEN Marta had been gone fully three minutes, Judith and Millicent stepped back into the room. "You aren't wearing your necklace. Sure it's around?" "In a drawer or something," Judith lied deliberately. "I hear voices. The others are here. Come on, Judy." Marta, yellow-haired, blue-eyed, fragile as a Botticelli angel, was standing in front of the hearth, wearing simple, silken black tonight. The men were talking to her. The women were a little bored, eager to return to town before it grew too late. The maid was announcing dinner, and the odor of a roast came through the air. For a second the two women, descending the low stairway, caught their breath. Marta was wearing a strand of pearls—a strand of pearls like the ones that Judith had worn above her turtle-necked sweater the night before. "It was later, much later that night, when Marta had been deposited at her own door, and Phil and Judith had driven home in awkward silence, that Judith mentioned the matter of the beads to her husband. His face was so cold that it frightened her. "You are implying that Marta, the woman I love—?" He flung out the words like a banner—"could do such a thing." "Perhaps not. The beads are gone. I thought you should know." "Marta probably wanted an aspirin tablet. She asked me for one and I told her to go up to your room—I'd left a box on the dressing table. She came down with the pill and I got her a glass of water. Knight saw me do it. So did the housekeeper. Does that satisfy you?" "Yes, I'm sorry, but the beads could've gone too. . . . "Put on your hat. Even while he gave the terse command she loved him; the narrowed eyes in the lean face, the swift strides that carried him across the room and back again. "Where are we going?" "There are we going to see a 3 with your own eyes that she doesn't have your pearls." (To Be Continued)

Torrid Spell Is a Blow to Philately

LORAIN, O. — Philately has suffered from the heat wave. This fact was made known when Postmaster William J. Moriarty announced the discontinuance of the Lorain post office "special philatelic service." For two years, the Lorain post office had in effect a "hold-back" system for the benefit of slow-action stamp collectors. When new special series stamps were issued, the Lorain office would hold back from over-the-counter sales, hundreds of choice copies. These holdbacks eventually were placed in some collector's album. The postoffice had become a haven for collectors in all parts of the country. As other offices sold out special issues, collectors knowing of the Lorain office's special service would write for copies of the stamps. But no more, Moriarty said. Evertime he opened one of the three special service drawers, crammed full with hold-backs, the stamps would cringe from the heat and cuddle into a sticky coil. Moriarty's policy now is every man for himself and first come first served."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox NEA Service Staff Writer SHERBETS, mousses and ices are among the delights of summer. They really aren't as much trouble as they look, and most people enjoy their pleasant sight and taste. Here's a simple one that comes out as a surprise. Cherry Tapioca Sherbet (4 to 6 servings) One-half cup quick cooking tapioca, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup sugar, 2 cups boiling water, 1 cup strong cherry juice, grated rind 1 lemon, 2 egg whites, beaten stiff. Combine water, sugar, salt and tapioca and cook until tapioca is clear. Add cherry juice and lemon rind. Cool. When it begins to thicken, add stiffly beaten egg whites and beat until mixture is foamy. Serve in sherbet glasses, thoroughly chilled. Garnish each glass with a teaspoon whipped cream. Fluffs are made of whipped cream mixed with as much ripe and slightly sweetened fruit as the cream will hold. Fresh, thinly sliced peaches, raspberries and blackberries, are some of the better choices. Pile the fluff into tall sherbet glasses and chill completely. Garnish the top with some of the fruit just before serving. Another sherbet arrangement is a little ice cream in bottom of sherbet glass, then a layer of slightly cooked or fresh and final—a deep covering ice cream. Blackberry Sherbet (4 to 6 servings) One and one-half cups blackberries, juice 1 lemon, cups cream, 1-1-2 cups sugar, cups milk. Force blackberries through sieve. Heat to boiling point. Stir until sugar dissolves. Cool. Add milk and cream. Add lemon juice. Mix thoroughly and pour into freezing tray. Freeze in refrigerator. Freeze for two hours, stirring every hour for two hours, or until begins to harden. Serve in glasses, and garnish with top of whipped cream with a blackberry in it. Tomorrow's Menu BREAKFAST: Orange juice, bacon rolls, sauce, coffee, milk. LUNCHEON: Creamed corn, lettuce salad, berry fluff, sweet cream, milk. DINNER: Melon cup, cheese Salisbury steak, potato, potato balls, coffee, blackberry sherbet, milk.

How to Catch 8:04 Every Morning

Let's see now—there're 3,689,534 commuters, 267,222 college boys and a couple of million other people who hate to get up in the morning. That means there ought to be a flock of customers for Robert Garden's invention. Think of the precious extra minutes of sleep purchasers could get if they used the automatic toothbrush that works while they shave. Garden demonstrates it above in New York. No more missing the 8:04 train.

Gaelic on Register Puzzles Doorkeeper

AUSTIN—E. R. Lindley, who keeps the House of Representatives, front door closed against visitors during legislative sessions and keeps a register of visitors between sessions, watched in wonderment while a name was carefully placed in the big volume this week.

Lindley looked at the name, scratched his head, lit a cigarette and grinned sheepishly at the smiling youth.

"Well, what is it?" Lindley wanted to know.

"It's Gaelic, b'golly," came the answer.

The youth was John O'Grady, who is just about as Irish as they come. He speaks Gaelic which was adopted as the national language of his native Erin. During his nine years here he has been engaged in various occupations and has attended the University of Texas.

British Cattleman Visits Texas Ranch

DALHART, Texas. — Interested in breeding of cattle and range management, C. A. Murray, range expert of the British government in South Africa, visited the Coon & Culbertson ranch near Dalhart, famous for its Braford breed of cattle.

Murray, studying Texas breeding methods, was interested particularly in the manner in which the ranch develops fine Hereford cattle under ordinary range conditions, without pampering.

The British cattleman was interested also in the Braford cattle, crossed purebred Brahma bulls with registered Domino Beau-Astor Hereford cows. Braford cattle thrive in low, hot coastal pastures where the Hereford and other temperate-climate cattle do no good because of tick fever.

Although John L. Lewis and Tom Girdler were flying west at the same time, they took different routes. They just went in the same plane.

TRACTOR IN IRRIGATION USE VANGUARD, Sask.—Two farmers are foiling nature and drought with a man-made machine. Inebriated Motorist Easily Beats "Rap"

DALLAS, Tex.—One traffic violator here, being tested for intoxication, found a way to "beat the rap."

When asked by Deputy Sheriff J. E. Butler to write his name on a card while taking a sobriety test, the motorist replied, "I can't. I can't spell it."

"What," roared the deputy, "You mean you can't spell your own name?"
