BRITISH HIGH OFFICIAL SHOT BY JAPANESE

The British Ambassador to China was shot through the spine and liver today by a Japanese airplane machine gun bullet, causing a grave complication in the Shanghai war. The ambassador, Sir Hugh Knatchbull-Hugessen, was shot as he raced by motor from Nanking to Shanghai for emergency conferences with British officials. His car flew the Union Jack. He was given a blood transfusion and surgeons had some hope of saving his life. The blood was donated by a United States Marine. The shooting of the ambassador momentarily overshadowed the war, which reached a peak of fighting north of Shanghai. The Japanese, after early reverses, began smashing the Chinese lines. Thousands of Chinese were retreating on Shanghai and there was acute danger they might fall back into the International Settlement, and imperil the foreigners there. Another international incident occurred when Japanese airplanes destroyed an American-owned diary, though it flew the Stars and Stripes. A complication with Russia was threatened when Japanese charged that signals to help the Chinese were flashed from the Soviet consulate building. A Japanese spokesman hinted that the building might be searched.

Maybe Football Isn't Everything After All

Out of the complaint made recently by Coach Bob Zuppke at Illinois University, that college boys are getting softer every year...

Coach Zuppke regrets that his husky students are not as husky as they once were, and they are not nearly so willing to go out and get the daylight pasted out of them...

Perhaps he's right, but perhaps there is another explanation or two. It is just barely possible that a lot of boys starting to college don't care for the grind which puts them into a football suit six days a week for three months...

Maybe some of them have figured out that football, except to the exceedingly small number of brighter stars, has no future except in fireside tales and after dinner reminiscences when college days are over.

It is barely possible, too, that the young athlete has noticed that, once he has his sheepskin and gets a job, he can't jump into a football suit after the day's work and get a bit of exercise.

Some of the boys may have decided that college athletics might just as easily have a future as college classroom courses. Tennis is hardly a sissy game and a young man doesn't have to be a second Donald Budge to enjoy it.

Golf teams appear to be more popular in college than they formerly were. Golf is a business man's game. It's a distinct advantage to be able to shoot a decent score. As a "contact" pastime golf is almost notorious.

You meet very few business men in football suits on pleasant sunny afternoons. There's no 19th hole on the gridiron, either.

Mr. Zuppke may be right. The modern college boys may be losing part of their enthusiasm for football, some of them, at least. There probably always will be enough to do and die for the Illini, producing Red Grange every generation or two to build up the gate.

And the others, it may be, have changed their notions about college football and the value thereof.

LONG BRANCH, N. J.—They say Squire Thomas George Paul Farr is almost the spittin' image of Freddie Welsh, clever Welsh lightweight and world champion of another day.

Farr is as talkative as Baer, but not quite as amusing or daffy. Like Tunney, he believes that a manager is most unnecessary. They say that he is going to get a divorce from Tod Broadbribb, the old British feather who brought him up from the ranks, as soon as everything's said and done with the Joe Louis fight at Yankee Stadium, Aug. 26.

Farr's disapproval of managers is based on his great respect for money. A manager, he believes, is too expensive a luxury. The squire loves his American dollar. He has spent more time figuring out the monetary system of our realm than he has Louis' left hook.

SQUIRE THOMAS remembers only too well those p'my-scratching, ditch-digging days in Wales. He doesn't want to go back to them. "Conditions," he says, with a surprising show of sympathy, "are terrible there. I wish I could do something for my people."

He wants to make enough money to be able to retire and go back to his native country and live in quiet and comfort. Squire Thomas set his tea cup down, dabbed gently with a dolly at his scarred lips, said excuse me, please, pushed his chair back, got up, and went over to the radio.

He twirled the dial until a clattering jazz band shivered the timbers of the beach house he has taken over here during his four-week training for his one-round fight with Loms.

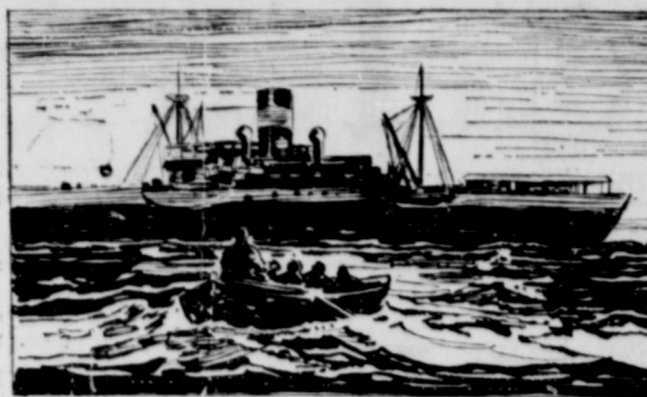

"That," said he, "is my piano over there. The keys are broken right now, however. I have a heavy touch and I was playing the Welsh national anthem with considerable gusto last night and I must have hit the keys too hard because they are stuck down."

MAYBE you were thinking that A sharp and B flat were Joe Louis, huh? "Oh, say, now," said Squire Thomas, "I never let a light worry me. I never think about it during my leisure hours. When I play the piano I think of playing the piano, when I sing I think of singing, and when I play draughts I think of draughts. . . ."

"When I play draughts." "What's that?" "That," broke in Publicity Man Jones, proud to be of assistance, "is similar to our game of checkers. In fact, you might go so far as to say that it is checkers."

Squire Thomas nodded his head. It is a big head—blond and battle-scarred. His nose has been badly gashed. His left ear has evidently been the terminal for many fast-moving fists.

CHAPTER I

ART attractiveness is no longer uncommon in the great, unpredictable world of young women. Nevertheless, it is unusual when three very-looking young women, un- in temperament, choose to the same apartment. On card over the mail box in the downstairs was printed, "Dearborn, Howard, and quite as if the combina- were a law firm. And that was really significant, for the girls were certainly in the re of a corporation.

Perhaps it worked because Kay striking brunet, Melita a ring-headed, and Priscilla a talking blond. Whatever the son, the trio had roomed to- and taken their vacations these for the past four years. Their arguments had been frequent, and their boredom practically nil. Nothing was natural than that the apart- ment, occupied by "Dearborn, and Dunn" be the goal of a great number of young men. Priscilla put it one day, "I don't see how you could be in about equal propor- tion."

Now, none of the three had an interested. Jokersmiths, fic- tions, and movie directors to- contrary, the modern young- ness woman devotes compar- atively little of her serious think- ing to the men. Kay, Melita, and Pris- cilla were not different from the rest. They had found the jobs they wanted. They were inter- ested in them, and in the whole intricate business of liv- ing. Each supposed that some- one she would fall in love, and then nothing much else might bother her. But they weren't forcing it to make the play. Nowadays it was too much fun, too breath- ingly changing, to make clever- ness for escaping into a quiet room. That, they felt, would be in good time. "Today a man can keep youthful in an agency, anywhere this side of so what's the rush?" That was Melita talking, one lazy Sun- day morning when the subject of marriage had popped up over breakfast.

THEIR chief concern at the moment was a seasonal problem where and how to spend their weeks' vacations which they outfit Kay Dearborn appeared alert and zestful. Tall and slender, she held her firm young chin high as she walked.

When she reached the apart- ment she found Melita and Pris- cilla already there. "We've been waiting for you," Melita said. "There's mutiny. We're going to have dinner down town."

"Why didn't you tell me? I didn't need the walk."

"Priscilla tried to telephone you, but you'd left the office. The management decided to defrost the electric refrigerator today, and Priscilla's lovely dessert is ruined."

Kay made a helpless gesture. "How do you always manage to make it on the day they defrost the box?"

"It's a gift," Priscilla said, get- ting up. "Come on, let's go." She stopped suddenly, went back to the table. "Oh, Kay here's a legal- looking letter for you. Melita and I have been expiring with curios- ity."

Kay took the long envelope looked at the unfamiliar name in the upper left-hand corner. "It's from Aurora," she said. "I've at uncle there I've never seen." She unfolded the letter and read hur- riedly.

"What is it?" asked Priscilla impatiently, dropping down beside Kay.

Kay didn't answer at once. She was rereading the letter. Finally she looked at Melita and Priscilla with a comically perplexed ex- pression. "This—this says the Uncle Ben died a month ago. He— he left me a yacht."

"A yacht?" exploded Melita and Priscilla together.

"That's what this says. And it's here. I remember that several years ago Uncle Ben made a cruise from here, but I didn't know that."

"Well!" Priscilla cut in cheer- fully. "I guess I'm psychic. Didn't I say it would be a boat trip?"

Kay shot her a scornful look. "With what would we run a yacht?"

Priscilla looked puzzled. "I'm not sure. I think they run with gasoline, like an automobile, don't they?"

"What?" Melita wanted to know. "Do you suppose it would cost us to use the boat?"

"I haven't the slightest idea. But I remember reading that Mr. Morgan said anybody who had to ask that question shouldn't own one." Ruefully Kay looked at the letter again. "Dear old Uncle Ben! It was nice of him to think of me—but what I really needed was two yachts."

"Anyhow," cried Priscilla, jump- ing up, "let's have a look at the thing. Maybe we could find a nice sailor who'd run it for us—just for the trip!"

"This—this says," Kay explained breathlessly to the girls, "that he—Uncle Ben—has left me a yacht." "A yacht," they exploded.

had arranged to coincide. The question of "where" was not as immediately pressing as the question "how." For one thing, their rent had been raised by an un- feeling landlord. For another, food prices were making a bigger dent in their household budget. Even then, they had to admit ruefully, they might have arranged it if the new summer clothes hadn't been so tempting.

"My mother used to have a joke about being dressed up with no- where to go," Kay Dearborn said. "That's us," mused Priscilla. "What was it?" asked Melita. "Whether it'll be the seashore, a lake, or the mountains. It's just my luck. Last year you two promised me I could do the deciding this year. And I had a sweet idea."

"What was it?" asked Melita. "I was wadding up a sheet of budget figures and taping it into the wastebasket."

"A boat trip," said the blond Priscilla blissfully.

"Of course! On the Queen Mary."

"No, I was really serious about it, Kay. There are some excursions on trips that would be a lot of fun for a change. I had it all figured out."

"Except for the matter of money," mentioned Melita.

Priscilla laughed good-natured- ly. "My budget's no further off than yours and Kay's. And a blond is supposed to be dizzier than redheads and brunets."

In the end they had decided to take their medicine as cheerfully as possible, and spend their vaca- tion period "resting" in town. They even had managed to con- vince themselves that it might be amusing.

TODAY as Kay Dearborn hurried home from the office, she couldn't rid herself of a feeling of disappointment. The lush tone of summer was in the air. It was the season of change, and Kay wanted change, too. She wanted to see new faces and new things. Only her brisk, youthful energy was setting her pace as she strode along this evening. The fact was that she detested the idea of re- turning to the apartment. No casual passerby could have known this. In her cool, smart summer

Blue Laws of 90's Found In New Jersey

By United Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—For- gotten ordinances which WPA workers have unearthed would prohibit persons from leaning against boardwalk guard rails to watch crowds and sun-bathers.

Another law, passed in 1905, bans "loitering, sitting, lounging or idly standing" on streets, boardwalk or in pavilions and parks.

An old 1856 ordinance orders the killing of all Spitz dogs or even dogs with Spitz blood in their ancestry, found roaming the streets. Dancing on Sundays in the pier and hotel ballrooms, night clubs, and cafes, back in the gay '90's, also was forbidden. And woe be- tided those that advertised on any but their own business property.

Commercial Shrimp Nets Are Outlawed

By United Press

ARANSAS PASS, Texas—State fish and oyster commission officials have outlawed commercial shrimp nets from the waters of Red Fish bay until Sept. 1.

First commercial catches in more than a month were made recently, and the crustaceans were so small that the commission ruled the nets out of the water to permit them to obtain a larger size.

Pioneer Women's Club to Furnish Pioneer Room

The Pioneer Women's club held its recent all-day monthly session at the home of the president, Mrs. Anna Townsend.

Bouquets of roses throughout the rooms were in old fashioned vases, and the three tables, prepared for the noon dinner, had the pioneer touch in the lavish food of several kinds of meat, a salad, home-baked cake, and a variety of old-time pies. Coffee and iced tea were served.

The blessing was offered by Mrs. E. E. Wood. After the meal their business session was conducted by Mrs. Townsend. Plans for their project for the Eastland County Fair, discussed in detail, climaxed in the decision to furnish a pioneer home, in some place that will be near the exposition's centralized activities.

Each member is to contribute toward the furnishing, a pioneer piece from her own home.

The general committee in charge of arrangements for pioneer home was appointed in Mrs. E. E. Wood, chairman; Mmes. Sallie Hill, Anna Townsend and W. A. Martin. The ladies stated, in addition to their furnishings, they will have a rare collection of antiques, gathered from various families, that will be on display.

Mrs. May Harris was greeted as a new member of club, and Mrs. R. L. Young, Jr., of Abilene, the guest for the day.

Other guests were Dr. and Mrs. E. Roy Townsend, Mrs. Jessie Ilek, and the hostess' brother, Henry Scott.

A reception and supper under auspices of the local chapter of the Order of Eastern Star, held at City Park Tuesday evening, under general direction of worthy matron, Mrs. N. L. Smitham, was outstanding in the social annals of the order, reports indicated.

A large group from other towns attended. Mrs. Smitham seated all about four long tables, and called for the invocation by J. A. Beard.

The matron of the hostess chapter gave her address of welcome, in which, interwoven, was a history of the founder of the O. E. S., Robert Morris, past poet laureate of Kentucky.

Mrs. Smitham, assisted by Mmes. L. J. Lambert and Karl F. Pace, supervised the service of the tables.

A well-planned basket supper brought a spread of delectable dishes, delicacies, fruits, iced lemonade, ice cream and cake.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MISS CRYSTAL MORGAN, NEA Service Staff Writer

ECONOMY is often a matter of the second time. Particularly today with a roast of beef. It must make several appearances before its high price is justified. And finally it must end in the soup. The following recipes will show you how to subdue beef which has jumped over the family food budget.

Beef Roll Jardiniere (4 to 6 servings)

Meat mixture: Four cups cooked beef, 1 cup tomatoes, 1-4 cup green pepper, 1-2 onion, 1 stalk celery, 1-2 cup stock.

Crust: Two cups of flour, 4 tablespoons lard, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 egg and milk enough to make a dough.

Sift dry ingredients. Using 2 silver knives cut the lard into the flour mixture, add milk to make a soft dough and beaten egg. Roll dough into an oblong shaped strip and spread with meat mixture before baking. Bake 15 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.). Serve with following sauce.

Sauce: Two cups of left over brown gravy, 1-2 cup of canned tomatoes, 1-4 cup cooked diced carrots, 1-4 cup finely cut cooked celery, 1-4 cup diced cooked onion, 1 tablespoon fat. Melt fat, add to gravy and add all vegetables. Heat and serve when well blended.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Stewed fresh plums, scrambled eggs with minced ham, toasted rolls, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Tomato filled with fresh shrimp salad, potato chips, hot cheese biscuit, floating island, chocolate cookie tea, milk.

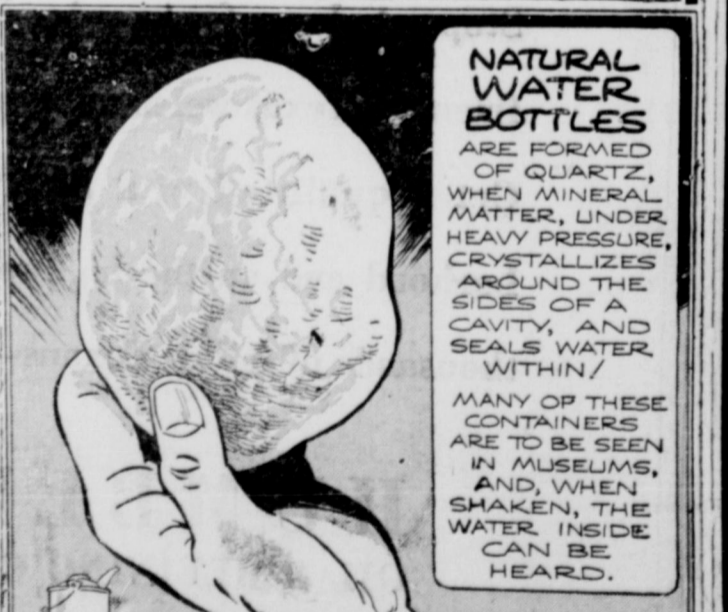

DINNER: Jellied madrilene, beef roll jardiniere, spinach with chopped egg, mashed potatoes, sliced cucumber salad with Roquefort dressing, blueberry pudding with whipped cream, coffee, milk.

Beef en Casserole (4 to 6 servings) Four cups cooked beef, 1 1-2 cups canned tomatoes, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-2 onion, 1-2 cup stock, 2 cups cooked macaroni.

Chop onion and saute in butter, add to tomatoes and add seasoning. Chop meat and put a layer in a casserole dish, then a layer of sauce, then a layer of macaroni and continue until dish is filled. Pour stock over top and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.).

Beef Croquettes (4 to 6 servings) Two cups cold beef, 4 cups hot mashed potatoes, 1 egg. Chop beef very fine, add mashed potatoes which have been well seasoned with salt, pepper and butter, then add well beaten egg. Form into croquettes, dip in egg and cracker crumbs and fry. Serve with catsup or chili sauce.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

NATURAL WATER BOTTLES ARE FORMED OF QUARTZ, WHEN MINERAL WATER, UNDER HEAVY PRESSURE, CRYSTALLIZES AROUND THE SIDES OF A CAVITY, AND SEALS WATER WITHIN. MANY OF THESE CONTAINERS ARE TO BE SEEN IN MUSEUMS, AND, WHEN SHAKEN, THE WATER INSIDE CAN BE HEARD.

A GALLON OF COMMON GASOLINE, MIXED WITH THE PROPER AMOUNT OF AIR, WILL, UPON EXPLOSION, PRODUCE A BLAST EQUAL TO THE FORCE OF 83 POUNDS OF DYNAMITE.

THE WOLVERINE SHADES ITS EYES WITH ITS PAWS WHEN IN GLARING SUNLIGHT, JUST AS HUMANS DO!

MOTHER NATURE'S water bottles are formed when silica-impregnated water filters through rocks and fills cavities. Quartz crystals gradually line the walls of the cavity, and a miniature grooves is formed. So far, not one of the museum specimens has sprung a leak.

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Senator Hugo Black's appointment to the Supreme Court is Roosevelt's latest and most conspicuous challenge to the south's economic-political system and to the southern bloc in Congress which has most persistently opposed his 1937 program.

The appointment was practically decided upon late in the evening of Aug. 11, but not finally until the next morning, when it was sent to the Senate. It was kept a secret because Roosevelt confided a most exclusively throughout his deliberations with Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, who is one of the best secret-keepers in town.

Runners-up in the order named were Solicitor General Stanley Reed, Donald Richberg and Judge Sam Bratton of New Mexico.

STANLEY REED, a Kentuckian, probably would have been selected if there had not been a justice—McReynolds—sitting from the judicial circuit whence Reed comes. Black's judicial district contains six southern states with a population of 16,000,000. The fact that the relatively mild and courtly Reed's appointment would have been more likely to help along the resignation of Justice Sutherland than appointment of the aggressively liberal Black was carefully weighed.

But in the end Roosevelt decided that it would most advance his cause to appoint the one militantly liberal southern senator, to encourage those in the south who want to reconstruct its economic system which some southerners and most New Dealers tend to regard in part as an "economic sweatshop for northern capital."

George gets little help at home. His father speaks little English, his mother none. He attributes his rapid advance to the fact that he is living in a "wonderful country; the land of the free and the home of equal opportunity for all."

A Portland, Me., sailmaker claims to be master of 760 varieties of knots and splices. Think what he could have been as a trial lawyer.
