U. S. May Curb Japan's Fishing In Alaskan Seas

SAN FRANCISCO.—The question of Japanese fishing off the Alaskan coast is becoming more acute daily between the United States and Japan.

What makes the situation more difficult is the fact that, legally, the Japanese are within their international rights and there is nothing to prevent them from fishing outside the three-mile limit. But what complicates the situation is that all of the American fisheries concerned, including those of Washington, Oregon and Alaska, as well as those of Canada, insist that the salmon caught by the Japanese are American or Canadian fish and that they ought to have the protection of their respective countries.

All of these salmon are said to come from streams of Oregon, Washington, Alaska and Canada waters where extensive measures for conservation have been taken and the fishing season limited, but nevertheless, as soon as they are cut to sea beyond the three-mile limit they become the legitimate prey for Japanese boats the year around.

To what extent the Japanese are catching these salmon is not known. Tokyo fisheries officials insist that Japan has never had more than two 6,000 ton ships in Alaskan water. On the other hand a group of commercial fishermen who flew over the waters on behalf of the Association of Pacific Fisheries insisted they were able to identify at least four Japanese floating canneries in operation.

To make the situation worse, it is charged by Pacific fisheries that the Japanese can offer their catch of American and Canadian salmon at 3 cents a salmon while the best American plants can do is a price of 14 cents a salmon. According to union spokesmen, the Japanese are able to keep their year-round fishing—always outside the three-mile limit—by establishing camps on shore where they can come and shoot reindeer for meat as food becomes necessary and replenish their supply of water.

While numerous protests have been made by the fishing industry both of Canada and of the United States, the principal obstacle to the Japanese are still within their rights.

Canadian fisheries, in their protests, however, have raised two points. They insist, first, that salmon born in Canadian waters are the same as Canadian citizens and are entitled to the protection of the government.

Their second contention is more broad. They insist that if the three-mile limit is allowed to remain, not only the Japanese but any other nation might be able to start fishing off the shores of Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and any other British Dominion with a long coastline without the possibility of either England or the Dominion concerned being able to take any action.

Protests filed by Canadian and American fishing interests on the Pacific coast envisage two solutions.

The first is an extension of the three-mile limit for fishing and the second is an international conservation program between the United States and Canada for sockeye salmon.

The industry does a $40,000,000 annual business.

Pioneer Days Are Recalled by Twins

MANKATO, Minn.—Mankato claims the oldest twins in the Northwest—Mrs. Clara Hodapp and John Krost, 81. (They'll be 82 next Christmas Day.)

Prison System to Make Changes In Employing Guards

HOUSTON, Texas.—The Texas prison system, harassed in the past several years by convict mutilations and charges of brutalities against guards, will make radical changes in the manner of employing guards within the next two months.

Applicants for positions as prison guards will be given examinations patterned after civil service tests. The policy has been adopted by the state prison board.

Several members of the board, it was learned, complained that an undue percentage of the system's 400 guards were unable to read or write.

It was indicated that some of the guards of lesser experience would be dismissed, but that those of long service, who are unable to read or write, would not be penalized by the new policy.

W. A. Parlock, chairman of the board, has appointed a committee of board members to draft a sample examination, to be submitted at a called meeting before Sept. 1, when 40 or more guards will be employed.

The new guards will be assigned to picket duty and will work in three eight-hour shifts daily. Salary schedules for new guards will begin at $80 monthly.

Heretofore, Donald and Mary Blair claimed to be "about the oldest twins in the Northwest."

Krost says "they're just a couple of youngsters compared to us."

Fires Attacked In Old Coal Mines Near Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH.—Workmen have resumed their battle against stubborn fires that have raged out of control for several years through the tunnels of abandoned coal mines under metropolitan Pittsburgh.

More than 400 WPA employees have been assigned to fire-fighting duty for the next few weeks in an effort to check the flames which have long been recognized as a serious threat to surface property.

Buildings have been damaged in some instances where the undermined top-soil collapsed around their foundations. In other cases the flames have eaten their way through the surface to become an even greater hazard to the neighborhood.

WPA men will concentrate their new efforts on four separate underground fires. One of the four has spread beneath property near the University of Pittsburgh's stadium in Oakland.

Most of the fire-fighting work will consist of blocking off of mine entries and filling operations.

Cost of the project is estimated at $73,392.

Babe Didrickson couldn't keep pace with the men in the Chicago open golf meet, which will lead some cynical men to believe she was using a back-seat driver.

An American Contrast to Egypt's Boy King

The fact that Egypt has a brand-new king would mean little to the average American if it were not for the fact that the new ruler, Farouk I, has become the third of the world's "boy" sovereigns. Farouk, who ascended the throne on his 18th birthday, joins King Peter II of Yugoslavia, 14, and King Ananda of Siam, 12, in this select class.

Just how a lad of high school age could be expected to take over the enormous duties of running a nation is a matter for deep contemplation in the democratic United States.

Because of our rules and customs, such a thing would be impossible here. But in the hands of the kingmakers with which Europe abounds, it's a simple trick.

Little more than a year ago, Farouk was no more fitted to rule Egypt than any American boy in knee pants. Then the death of his father, Faud I, interrupted Farouk's elementary education, and he was started on a new regime of studies, designed to prepare him for early delivery as a full-fledged and competent ruler.

With a regency took charge of affairs at home, young Farouk was sent to Europe, where, within five months, he was groomed for the job of riding back into Cairo in a gilded coach, making the proper responses at the investiture ceremony, delivery a few choice words for the radio broadcast to his subjects, and then settling down to give Egypt a long, fruitful reign.

Americans tempted by the delusion that all this is the glorious fulfillment of a great and wonderful destiny should try to draw a parallel in their own government.

Suppose our method of executive succession brought a 17-year-old youth to the president's chair. Then suppose the cabinet, borrowing power to rule meanwhile, sent the boy-president out of the country for a five-month preparatory course before swearing him in with full powers.

Suppose, also, that two million cheering people then jammed Washington to greet the little fellow as he rode triumphantly to the White House down an avenue festooned with lights, banners and flags.

It is all too preposterous ever to happen here. But the thought is valuable. It provides a refreshing foil for our quibbles over minor details of the American form of government. And it provides an effective tool for deflating occasional amateurs who get ideas about kingmaking on this side of the Atlantic.

Michigan opened a cherry festival with bombs, which may lead some to expect this year's shipments to be ready-pitted.

Speakers at a dental convention criticized useless tooth-pulling, a measure which will meet the approval of every taxpayer.

Finalist Against Fire Girls To Be Determined in Tourney Tonight

The team which will play the Fire Girls of Eastland in finals of the district A. S. A. tournament Saturday night at Eastland will be determined tonight when DeLeon meets Street's Dairy-maids.

The winner of the game, starting at 8:15, will play Fire Girls twice if it is victor over them in the Saturday night event.

Thursday night Cisco was eliminated from the tournament by Fire Girls by the score of 10 to 2. Fire Girls collected 16 hits and Cisco seven hits.

A scoring spree by DeLeon in the latter part of the contest in the second game gave them a 12 to 8 decision over Stephenville. DeLeon sparked in the final inning with two successive home runs.

Also to play tonight will be Killingsworth, Cox, of Ranger, vs. Hi-Y club of Eastland in an exhibition contest.

Oatmeal Is Chosen For the Quintuplets

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the 54-year-old doctor who assisted at the birth of the famous Quins, is very modest concerning his accomplishments. After his training at the University of Toronto he practiced his profession in the mining regions of Ontario and Manitoba, and later came to Callender. The arrival of the Quins brought his record of more than 1400 births to a "new high, and made him world famous.

Although he has constantly shared the limelight with the Dionne babies, Dr. Dafoe is still modest and unassuming. He has been elected honorary member of the Academy of Medicine in Toronto, and of the Canadian and American Medical Associations.

So every day the famous Dionne Quins have Quaker Oats. And every day the thousands who visit the Quins at Callender agree that they never saw healthier or happier babies anywhere.

Love Gets a Lift

"This is pretty slick, Schmatz," he told the dog. He stretched out his long legs with a sigh of satisfaction.

CHAPTER II
"Wonder what that little Irishman meant?" mused McTavish, as he closed the book. "Probably an inside joke like this is lousy with high price groups, and artists and such. I'll make it very plain that I work for my living. Can't you see the neighbors running around with their coats and hunched backs, and looking down at the backs of their heads, and going to work. Schmatz, it's up to us to pack if we are going to that last chapter tonight." Schmatz took off his coat and hung it on the back of a chair, rolled up his feet, and went to work. For several hours of sorting and shifting them around to best advantage, he stood and surveyed his future. It had evidently been the room of the one-time mansion. A large fireplace with a large room. The walls were light woodwork, plain, and the long windows had scalloped blinds and little inside shutters that looked as though they had never been dusted.

would, and settle down to the routine of a small town. She wondered now why she had ever thought she could find a job in the city all by herself.

"Sorry, but we're not putting on any more people," had been the invariable answer, when she had to admit she did not have any experience selling things, or keeping books, or doing stenography.

THEN she had happened upon a firm that wanted rhymes for greeting cards. Yes, she could do that. Hadn't she made jingles all her life just for fun? Why not sell them then? That night she wrote Aunt Hattie that she had taken a job with a big publishing firm, which was almost true. Anyway it was better than Groversville and Joe Williams and Aunt Hattie's fussy dictating of her every move, which was beginning to make her very restless. Though of course she really was grateful to Aunt Hattie and Uncle Henry for having taken care of her since her own parents died.

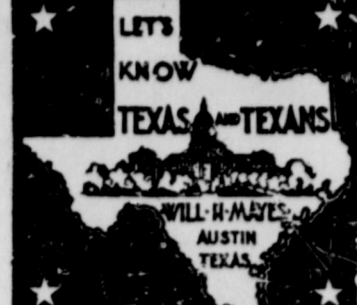

Cher, near her, dear—that dog had had the dearest, brightest black eyes, and such a cute red tongue. Schmatz was what the young man had called him. She wondered why such a queer name. Maybe some girl had given him to his master. Of course there would be a girl. No fellow that good looking could possibly escape. She hadn't seen Pat yet to ask about the new tenant. Oh dear, where was she?

A frown creased her pretty forehead, and she wrote down a line, then attentively inspected the paper on her pen as though it might hold an inspiration. Nothing happened, so she got up and made a cup of tea and poured it into a gay yellow cup which she took from the cupboard in her furnished apartment. What fun it was to be able to drink the other cupful that the teapot held. Her glance strayed about the studio. It was really quite pretty. Gay cretonne drapes and red geraniums in brass pots made bright splashes of color. She certainly ought to be able to bring the duchess and dear—if only that gnawing loneliness would let her.

In the hall outside, Pat's broom kept pace with his thoughts too. That young fellow upstairs did seem a likely prospect as a friend for Miss Kathy, but how to bring him to her notice. She wasn't like the Duchess now, who'd speak to any man if she took a notion. The terrier came scampering through the door just then, and knocked the broom from his hand.

"He's a little devil, where he goes!" He grasped the wriggling creature. "Listen, ye don't need to be rushin' up to yer master's room yet. It's a good turn ye got to be doin' a loidy, see."

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. Is any of Count de Saligny's furniture still in the old French legation building at Austin?

A. Only one chair used by the Count remains there, a French design in carved rosewood, upholstered in American beauty brocade. The hardware and finishings, including ornamental hinges and locks, are the same that were there in the days of the Texas Republic and the house itself remains unchanged except for necessary repairs.

Q. When did the Daughters of the American Revolution begin placing markers at historic spots in Texas?

A. The first boulder marker in the state was placed March 14, 1908 in Sam Houston park Houston, in memory of Alexander Hodge, one of Marion's men engaged in the Texas revolution.

Q. What is the present size of the Texas D. A. R. forest reserve and bird sanctuary?

A. Two hundred acres, the D. A. R. having bought and fenced 50 acres in addition to the 150 donated by Mrs. W. H. P. McFaddin of Beaumont.

Q. Where do the Daughters of the American Revolution own a forest, when and how was it acquired?

A. Mrs. W. H. P. McFaddin of Beaumont, past state regent, presented the D. A. R. a tract of 150 acres in Jasper county, Texas, as a beginning for a forest reserve, erected a fence and ornamental gateway and built a cabin, the dedication ceremonies being held Oct. 31, 1929, this being the only forest in the United States owned by the organization. The Texas Forest Service has added 2,400 trees to those already on the land.

FOR hot nights, a cold buffet makes a hospitable and welcome form of entertainment. Especially when the tableware and food selected combine to create the impression of spacious and interesting living. Martha Logan, nationally known home economist, has a few words on the subject.

"Try this—against a setting of brilliant French provincial pottery in deep royal blue on a white pine table, spread cold meats which come ready to serve," she advises. "In a fish-shaped earthenware platter, place slices of lunar loaf with pistachio nuts (a new trio loaf), a three-toned Neapolitan loaf of beef, pork and chicken, a cheese-meat (cheese and ham loaf), or a cheese and sausage loaf. Include also beef tongue and ham bologna, and garnish all this with little strings of cocktail frankfurters."

Miss Logan is still hungry, it would seem. "In a small match-like meat platter, place an artichoke, and form a geometric pattern with slices of cold meat wrapped around crisp celery. Also have olives, radishes and other garnishes."

There should be potato salad with this meal, ice tea and hot coffee and plenty of rolls and butter.

Sunday's Menu

BREAKFAST: Persian melon, corn flakes, country sausage, creamed potatoes, rice muffins, coffee, milk.

DINNER: Half cantaloupe, broiled chicken, potato puffs, new peas in cream, Parker House rolls, molded lettuce and pineapple salad, huckleberry shortcake, huckleberry sauce, coffee, milk.

BUFFET SUPPER: Cream of corn soup, assorted ready to serve cold meats, potato salad, sliced tomatoes, buttered rye bread slices, chocolate marshmallow cake, canned pear/apple, milk.

Potato Salad

(According to Irma S. Rombauer, in "Joy of Cooking")

Boil potatoes in their jackets until tender. Chill for several hours, then peel. Marinate well with soup stock, chop or slice fine and add hard cooked eggs, onions, olives, celery, pickles, cucumbers. Add some capers and season the salad with salt, paprika and few grains of cayenne pepper. After an hour or more, add boiled salad dressing or mayonnaise. Make the salad very moist, so it will absorb a great deal of liquid. It may be made in advance, in fact, it seems to taste better the second day.

Potato chips, warmed in the oven, and hot baking powder biscuits with jelly can be used instead of the potato salad.

TAKE it from a fellow who tore up the batsman's copybook in desperation himself, Joe DiMaggio is the perfect copybook hitter.

"DiMaggio," Manager Joe Cronin was saying the other day after the young Italian slugger of the New York Yankees had belabored his Red Sox pitchers, "is my idea of the perfect hitter. He has the ideal form."

DiMag, leading both major leagues in runs scored, hitting close to .370, and a sure bat to clutch 40 home runs this season, does everything in the most approved Emily Post manner of the dish, according to Cronin, who admits that he himself does everything wrong.

"Wrong, that is," says Joe, "for anybody else but me. I tried to follow the copybook, after a fashion, but it didn't do any good. Then I resorted to the stance I use now and it helped my hitting plenty."

"That's why I never try to tell a rookie how to hit unless he asks my advice. I wouldn't even suggest that anybody who has been playing the game a long while should imitate DiMaggio."

"But if a young kid, a sandlotter, came to me and asked me how he should grip a bat, set his feet, step into the pitch, and so forth, I'd tell him, 'Watch DiMaggio.'"

"YOU know those books 'How to Bat' that kids buy? Well, Joe is one of those books come to life."

"And he's a rarity in that respect. Hitting a baseball, unlike hitting a golf ball, doesn't demand a certain set form—that is, there's nothing like keeping your left arm straight, your right elbow close to your body, and so forth. "But all the great hitters I can think of lacked the perfect form a coach would try to teach a raw youngster."

"Take Cobb . . . why no kid book on 'How to Bat' would ever come gripping a bat with hands inches apart. And yet Cobb, who was one of the great—if not the greatest—of all hitters, held a bat that way. His hands were separated on the bat handle. I asked him about it once and he told me that he found he could place it much better. His left hand, he said, could direct the bat better that way."

If Aloysius Szymanski had had a coach when he was playing around the sandlots of Milwaukee, the well-meaning tutor probably tried to break Aloysius of the habit of "putting his foot in the bucket."

And yet when Aloysius Szymanski changed his name to Simmons and became one of the greatest hitters in baseball he hadn't changed that batting stance.

The other great hitters have their distinctive little flaws which haven't kept them from being dangerously good. Mel Ott kicks up his right foot against all rules, Walter Berger frequently commits the cardinal sin of taking his right hand off the bat too soon, Heinie Manush looks like he's in the throes of a St. Vitus dance.

"Yep, he's perfect," says Cronin, "and he's on his way to becoming the greatest of all hitters."

WASHINGTON—Mr. Charlie Croasley Radio owns Station WLW, world's most powerful radio station, and seeking a license for the 500,000-watts power it now uses under an experimental permit.

Roosevelt knew about the Croasley job. He told Charlie to use his own judgment. Farley specifically approved.

IN Roosevelt's first administration members of the Democratic National Committee from various states began to coin money by setting up shop here as lawyer-lobbyists "close to the White House." These men wangled many official favors at high prices. Everyone knew what was going on. But the President didn't act until rugged, honest Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska privately promised to expose the racket on the Senate floor if he didn't.

Throughout Democratic ranks today there is resentment and disgust at the tactics of the national committee in selling Roosevelt-photographed souvenir convention books at $250 price in batches to corporations. This was an idea of the late Treasurer W. Forbes Morgan, a Roosevelt relative, who nabbed a $100,000 a year de luxe lobbying job with the whisky distillers before he died.

SEARCH high and low in Washington and you won't find any one who defends that book-selling trick except as a "shakedown" of business and a subterfuge to avoid the corrupt practices act. Many Democrats have the decency to be ashamed about it, but the only word against it has come from a couple of anti-Roosevelt Indian Democrats who demand that the money be returned.

THE likelihood that Michelson will shortly be forced to choose between Croasley and the party rests on the certainty that there will be sustained outcry about his two jobs as long as he continues to try to hold them. Not only from Republicans, but also from Democrats.

ANIMALS OF THE CAT FAMILY SHEATHE THEIR CLAWS FOR TWO REASONS: IT KEEPS THE CLAWS FROM BEING DULLED, AND ALSO ALLOWS THE ANIMAL TO WALK NOISELESSLY.

ANIMALS OF THE DOG TYPE DO NOT SHEATHE THEIR CLAWS! SINCE THEY RUN DOWN THEIR PREY, AND SEIZE IT IN THEIR MOUTHS, NOISELESS FOOTWORK AND SHARP CLAWS ARE UNNECESSARY.

SHARKS ARE KILLED EASILY BY A BLOW ON THE SNOUT, WHERE THE BRAIN LIES CLOSE TO THE SURFACE.

WERE it not for the cat's ability to retract its claws, they soon would be worn down by constant contact with hard ground and stones. Without its sharp, curving claws, a cat would be unable to hold prey of any size. A dog, however, uses its claws only for digging, scratching, and possibly for better contact while running. Its prey is held in the powerful jaws.

Better Business Is Cause of Increase In Damaging Fires

DALLAS.—The general upturn in business has been bad news to fire insurance companies. "It is ironically true that improvement in business has resulted in an increase in fire losses," Robert Miller, southwestern manager of the United States Chamber of Commerce told chamber members.

According to reliable estimates fire losses for 1936 showed an increase of 11.9 per cent over the record for 1935, Miller said.

Fire in business plants are more disastrous in prosperous times than in depression periods, he said, because of the greater intangible losses they cause.

Miller urged all member chambers to observe national fire prevention week, Oct. 3 to 9, with some appropriate program to impress business men with the greater need for precaution.

Engineer Gives Views On the Use of Horns When Traffic Heavy

Editor's Note: Although the automotive engineer's responsibility ends when his designs for a new model are approved, his interest in the satisfaction which his product gives its owner does not cease. Here an outstanding figure in the automotive engineering world offers further suggestions, whose general adoption, it is believed, would tend to heighten the safety and pleasure of motorists everywhere.

BY J. M. CRAWFORD Chief Engineer Chevrolet Division General Motors Corporation

Only a few days ago, the newspapers carried a story about a man who has made a 17,000-mile motor trip without once blowing his horn. This driver emphasized the point that he handled his car in such a way as to obviate the need of warning signals at any time. And in spite of the fact that all cars have horns as standard equipment today, his example is one which the average motorist could profitably study and heed.

Driving, under the traffic conditions which prevail in most places today, is a job which requires the undivided attention of the man or woman at the wheel. The modern car is built to respond quickly to the various controls; but the controls themselves still have to be operated by human agency, and it is just as vital as it ever was that the driver concentrate on driving. He cannot do this best if he maintains a calm state of mind. And it is hard to remain calm and cool when horns are screeching on all sides.

There can be no denial that the over-use of horns runs counter to the interests of safety. For one thing, it is a far-from-soothing influence. It tends to confuse and hurry traffic. It reflects the impatience of the horn-tooter, and communicates that impatience to others. Startled by the sound of a horn at close quarters, a motorist will frequently pull over too suddenly, endangering his own car and others. Or if he reacts in the other of the two most common ways and gets angry, he will probably refuse to get over at all, and you have one of those private feuds which often lead to "cutting around," and frequently end in mishaps.

I have seen a driver, rushed by an insistent horn behind him, pull out into heavy traffic without a proper wait, and damage his own car and another, while the horn-blower took advantage of the confusion and went his merry way. And almost everybody has seen a driver, startled by a blast from the rear, swerve so suddenly as to endanger himself and others as well.

Proper use of the horn would probably be more general, if every driver would remember that other drivers on the streets naturally judge him largely by the way he drives, and especially by his horn technique, since that comes forcibly to their attention, via the ear. The use of a warning signal when about to pass is legal and proper; but there is no reason why it should be an insistent, earsplitting blast that says: "Out of my way! Here I come!" Neither is there justification for that other practice, prevalent in some sections, of leaning hard on the horn button when the light change from red to green, to hasten the starting of the cars up in front. The horn is a useful accessory, and one that should be kept in order. Whether or not it makes its full contribution to the safety and pleasure of driving depends upon the restraint and judgment with which it is used.

The good-will spirit of the camp is dramatized by the opening-day pageant. "Hands Across the World."
