Michigan Law Is Setting Up Wide Reform For Felons

BY HARRIS COATES
United Press Staff Correspondent
LANSING, Mich. — Michigan is offering its convicts a "new deal" under a corrections commission established by the 1937 legislature.

Enactment of a new penal, pardon and parole system for the state was part of the administration legislative program proposed by Gov. Frank Murphy which was adopted and signed.

"This will be one of the most advanced and outstanding systems in the nation," Murphy predicted when he approved the act.

The law was effective immediately and preliminary work of changing over from the old prison commission and one-man parole commissioner system has been started.

A corrections commission operating under the consolidated state welfare department has taken over the duties of the commissioner of pardons and paroles. This five-member group, appointed by the governor, chooses a director of corrections to have charge of three sub-bureaus—pardons and parole, probation and prisons—and names wardens formerly appointed by the state executive.

A three-member parole board, directly responsible to the new director, took the job which had given Michigan governors many worries. Previously, execu-troupe had followed the recommendations of their parole commissioners in granting clemency, but now this work is handled by the board.

The new system emphasizes rehabilitation rather than punishment. The board has sole initiative to grant paroles and no application can be accepted from prisoners, their attorneys or relatives. Applications will be made automatically when an inmate has served his minimum term or has become eligible under a classification and examination system provided in the act.

Public hearings on applications for pardons, reprieves and commutations of sentence were made mandatory and the board will make recommendations to the governor, who will make the final decision regarding clemency. A division of criminal statistics

Erosion Blasts Farm Tradition

By United Press
LANCASTER, Pa.—The somber clod "Plain People" of Lancaster County, long famed for their farming methods that produced a "garden spot of the world," are to adopt new scientific measures to preserve their land from erosion.

In the past, the Mennonites and other sects of the "Plain People," had believed their land solid and indestructible, but recent tests by the U. S. Department of Agriculture have revealed that their rich, fertile soil was washing away from the fields into creeks and rivers.

Specialists from the department tested woodland areas where trees guard the soil completely. They compared their findings with test soil from sloping cornfields, and the result showed several inches less soil on the cornfields than in the woods.

Erosion control engineers checked dams on the historic Pequea Creek, where the first colony of Mennonite farmers cleared land early in the 18th Century. They found huge silt deposits which proved to be remains of topsoil that for many decades had produced the rich corn, tobacco and other crops which have made Lancaster County synonymous with good farming.

Although slow to adopt any changes from the methods used by their forefathers, the "Plain People" have gradually been influenced to bring into use measures, as wardens of two state prisons.

ures advocated by the Soil Conservation Service in its watershed demonstration project in the county. After watching neighboring farmers adapt their practices to soil and water conservation needs by the use of "round" farming, the "Plain People" are gradually using these methods in their own fields. Leaders of the sects predicted it would be merely a matter of time before their members would adopt the practice of soil and water conservation in the county. They believe the farmers are being convinced that such a practice is an integral part of their age-old philosophy of "good farming or good lands."

Average Citizen Pays as Unions Squabble

No one who has the interests of organized labor at heart can fail to hope devoutly that the rival factions in the field of labor will patch up their guerill war with each other before the cause which they both represent is irreparably damaged.

Already the ordinary citizen is getting more than a little tired of hearing about the bitter fight between C. I. O. and A. F. of L. And when that fight begins to hit him where he lives—as it is starting to do on a whole wholesale basis, here and there—he is apt to express his irritation in a way that organized labor will find extremely inconvenient.

A stand-out example of this sort of thing is now in evidence on the Pacific coast.

The Pacific Coast Teamsters' Union, a militant A. F. of L. outfit, is waging a last ditch war with the C. I. O.'s equally militant longshoremen and warehousemen. The row started when the Longshoremen's Union organized the previously unorganized warehousemen. Immediately the Teamsters' Union claimed jurisdiction over these new recruits, and the war began.

Now a war between two rival unions is not a mere matter of speeches, proselyting and argumentative statements. It is fought with the most effective weapons available—and direct-action people like teamsters and longshoremen can think of some pretty effective ones when they put their minds on it.

So today we find the Teamsters' Union clamping an embargo on San Francisco Bay ports and refusing to move cargoes unloaded by the Longshoremen's Union. A ship comes in and docks. The longshoremen promptly unload it. But—except for perishables, government orders, ship stores, passengers' baggage and mail—the unloaded freight remains on the wharf. The teamsters will not move a pound of it; neither will they take any export cargoes down to the docks where it can be loaded.

In retaliation, the longshoremen threaten to start moving some of this freight themselves. If they do, say the teamsters, the embargo will be extended all up and down the coast; it may even spread to Atlantic coast ports.

Consider, now, where this puts the innocent bystander. Let us suppose that you are a San Francisco business man obliged to import merchandise by water. You may have the best will in the world toward organized labor. You may be scrupulous about dealing with the unions in your own shop.

But this fight leaves you hamstrung. You are in as bad a fix as you would be if you yourself were fighting labor. You have not the faintest interest in the quarrel—yet you are paying for the war.

This sort of thing does labor incalculable damage. If it goes on long enough, it is almost certain to start a public reaction that will leave labor back where it was in the mid-twenties, with all the great gains of recent years canceled.

Old Lead Pit, Once A $50 Mine Now Enriching Many

By United Press
JOPLIN, Mo.—The Oronogo Circle Mine, a 10-acre tract which once sold for $50 and which produced lead ore worth $30,000,000 before it was abandoned 36 years ago, again is pouring money into the pockets of its owners and workers.
The mine was worked first before the Civil War. After $9,000,000 worth of ore was taken from it the Granby Smelting Company, owned by the Guggenheim family, neither company mined it, but leased it on a royalty basis. At times the royalties ran as high as 25 per cent.
The tract, honeycombed with tunnels, collapsed in 1901 and water filled the great hole. Recently however, the government furnished money and WPA labor to drain the pit and now a dozen small partnerships are working the old mine on a royalty basis. Many are making hundreds of dollars weekly.

Sport Glances. By

BY RICHARD McCANN
NEA Service Sports Writer

THIS Alberto Santiago Lovell, who has been called Mike Jacobs for a fistie build-up, is a cantankerous Argentine Negro, a tawny, inhumanly strong, excitement of the Latins, the untamed fury of the prizefighter. He won the heavyweight championship of the world but among them have been Maxie Rosenbloom, Jack Burman, and Andre Lenglet.
The most interesting thing about Senor Lovell is his personality. If you read the record books you will find the only fight he had out there in Los Angeles. Even at least one fight with an official, another athlete, or a crowd.
Once, in a child-like rage, he threw a shotput through a window and threw an official, who complained, right after the sparate for Squire Thomas Paul Fart, who wanted a pound press agent.

THIS is a true story
He was a little fellow—five-foot-two, 115 pounds, to be an athlete, so he wrote to all those don't-take-it-man and lend-me-your-body-for-seven-days fellows of athletic magazines. And he bought all those little building up the back muscles and shoulder muscles. And he put them up in his cellar and worked night and day.
It helped him become a sturdy, strong little devil, mama were short, and so were their papas and grandpas. He grew. Despite his smallness, however, he was able to play a good high school football player. He was named on the team.
Then he went to college, still five-foot-two, still 115 pounds. Too little, kid, I can't take the chance of having you coach said. And shooed him off the field.
The kid changed overnight. He who had admired the big fellows, now as a fraternity brother, he blabbed for a who was brought up for nomination. The boys had to move out of the house.
He went back to the dormitories and there commenced his studies. He became an honor student. And upon his graduation became an instructor.
And pity the poor athlete in his class. He doesn't know how low is on the table-tennis team, he better come to class he'll be flogged for certain.
The coach realizes now that he should've let the kid play.

The little tract was so heavily mineralized that frequently chunks of lead were found that were bigger than the mine shaft. Once 20 mills were operated on the tract simultaneously and $5,000 a week royalties were not uncommon. Lead ore was found on nearly every tunnel bored shaft.
A. J. Cartwright, practicing of keeping two bases on the ball but even his fertile imagination looked the value of enclosures for umpires.

BETTER LIGHT + BETTER SIGHT = BETTER GRADES

Studying Is Easier with a Better Sight Lamp

"I am Reddy Kilowatt, Your Electrical Servant"

● Help your children with their school work—provide them with proper lighting for their studying. When you have Better Light you have Better Sight and Better Sight for students means Better Grades for it is a fact where children study under GOOD lighting of proper intensity (say thirty or forty foot candles) grades average far higher and failures far fewer than where POOR lighting is used.

OUT OF THE NIGHT

CAST OF CHARACTERS
PRISCILLA PERCE—heroine, young woman attorney.
JIM KERRIGAN—Jim's roommate and murderer's victim.
HARRY HITCHIN—Jim's fiance, strange visitor.
SERGEANT DOLAN—officer assigned to solve the murder of Amy Kerr.

Yesterday Dolan finds a note. In Kerrigan's writing, asking Amy to meet him up on the roof after the bridge game the night after the murder. Cilly remembers now that Jim and Amy appeared to have known each other before.

CHAPTER IX
THE apartment bell rang. "That's Martin," Sergeant Dolan said to Cilly. "One of my men. I've had him checking up on the tenants."
Cilly opened the door for him. "Come in, Martin," Dolan called. "What did you find out?"
Martin consulted some notes he had made. "Well, there are 10 apartments in the house. Two to a floor. Johnson, the superintendent, has a place down in the basement. Miss Pierce and the other young lady here in 1-A. Couple named Terry in 1-B. Johnson tells me they left the house about 11 o'clock on Sunday night. He met them going out the door with their bags. Said they were going away on a little motor trip."
"That's right," Cilly agreed. "Mrs. Terry stopped in shortly after 10 and asked if I'd take her gold-fish for a few days. There they are, over on the window-sill. They were going up to Fall River to visit Mrs. Terry's mother."
"Funny hour to be leaving, wasn't it?"
"Mr. Terry preferred to drive all night. There would be less traffic on the roads, he said."
"Well, that takes care of the first floor," Dolan said. "Who's upstairs?"
"In 2-A there's a Mrs. Elliot. Rather an elderly woman, Johnson says. But she's not in. Johnson and I looked the place over and it doesn't appear as if she's been home for a while. Rooms are all tidied up, windows shut down tight. Johnson says she's away a great deal. She's the last tenant that moved in."
"Now in 2-B, there's a family named Smith. Man and wife and 6-year-old youngster. Mrs. Smith tells me they were over in Jersey on Sunday visiting her in-laws. They left the youngster over there for a week. She says she didn't get home until somewhere about 3 in the morning. Didn't know a thing about the trouble here in the house. They took a 1:20 train from Rutherford."

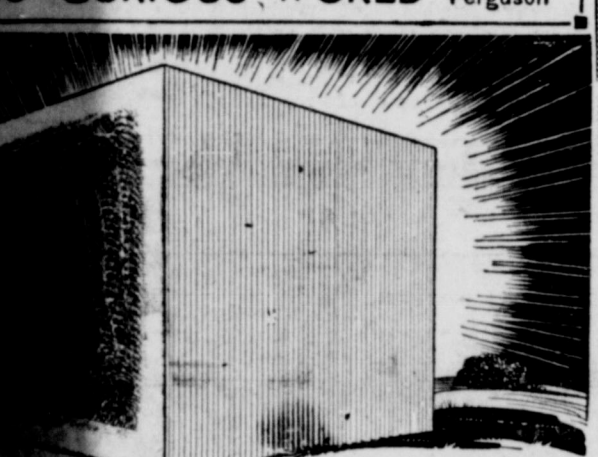

"Check up on that," Dolan instructed. "I'll do that. Now we come to the third floor. Don't think we'll find anything there."
"On the fourth floor," Martin went on in his steady, phlegmatic voice, "in 4-A, there are the Downeys. A mother and daughter. Mother's a woman in her 60s. I should say. Daughter teaches school. The old lady, from the look of her, never could pick up a body and throw it off the roof."
"No," Dolan agreed, it wasn't the work of a woman."
"A Mrs. Wheeler lives in 4-B. Lives there alone, she tells me, and Johnson confirms it. Smart-looking woman, in her 30s, I'd say. A widow. Has a young niece that often spends week-ends with her, but she was all alone this Sunday."
SERGEANT DOLAN shook his head negatively as he listened without comment to Martin's report. Cilly could almost read his thoughts. One by one, he too was dismissing the tenants from consideration. In his hand he still held the crumpled note Jim had written to Amy.
"On the fourth floor, there's nobody we can pin the case on," Martin was saying, "and I'd say we could check off the fifth floor too. In 5-A there's a man and his wife named Hunter, a middle-aged couple. But he's a helpless cripple, paralyzed from the waist down. Sits around all day in a wheel chair. Johnson says he's never been out of the chair in the four years they've lived here."
"That let's him out," Dolan commented. "What about 5-B?"
"Vacant."
"Let's get going, Martin," he said. "We still have several other angles to check."
Cilly rose too. "Just a minute, sergeant," she pleaded, "what about those vacant apartments? Anybody—a vagrant, for example—might have hidden away in them."
Dolan turned to his assistant. "What about it, Martin?"
"We thought of that, Serg. Johnson showed me 5-B. In the first place, the door was locked, and he has the only two keys to it. In the second place, he's getting it ready for some new tenant moving in on the first, and Saturday the floors were scraped and shelled. Anyone coming down from the roof—which is covered with tar and soot, and dust—would have left some tracks on that newly polished floor. There's not a sign of a foot-print."

"WHAT about the other vacant apartment?" Cilly asked him. "The one on the third floor?"
"We found it locked," Martin said. "Johnson is the only one that has a passkey to it."
"Someone might have come down the fire escape," Cilly suggested. "He could have passed 5-B, which is vacant, and 4-B, without awakening Mrs. Wheeler, and climbed into 3-B."
Martin shook his head negatively. "The window from the fire escape was latched. He couldn't have opened it from the outside without breaking a pane of glass. Besides, from what I hear, before the young woman fell, there was a scream—loud enough to awaken Mrs. Wheeler. If any man passed down the fire escape, she would have known it."
Cilly wondered where else a man might have hidden. Nobody came out of the house immediately after the accident, Cilly knew that.

SUDDENLY a new light dawned on the problem, and for the first time the strands of the terrible web of circumstances and coincidence which was encircling her loosened their hold.
Jim must have come down from the roof before Amy fell; if he had come down after the accident, Cilly would have seen him go out the front entrance. Or the police would have found him, still on the roof. Jim couldn't have been up there when it happened!
She almost wept for sheer relief. There was a new ring of confidence in her voice as she turned to Sergeant Dolan:
"Mr. Kerrigan couldn't have been up on the roof with Amy," she pointed out with conviction. "Because he couldn't have gotten out of the house after the accident without all of us seeing him. And he wasn't on the roof, or you would have seen him when you went up! That clears him, in spite of the note, doesn't it?"
Sergeant Dolan grinned. "I'd be a fine detective," he said, "if I were as trusting a soul as you'd like me to be, Miss Pierce. How can I be sure that he didn't come downstairs and slip into Apartment 1-A, where a young lady who believed him to be 100 per cent O. K. could easily hide him until the rumpus died down!"
Cilly gasped. The strands of the web had only relaxed momentarily, to strengthen themselves for a more tenacious grip.

Tea, Shower Honors Recent Local Bride: Mrs. James Turk Pipkin was the honoree at a tea Wednesday from 4 to 6 o'clock hosted by Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins and her daughter, Mrs. C. Keith Beyette, of Fort Worth.

Silver bowls and roses and queen's wreath decorated the reception rooms. Mrs. Carl Springer met the guests at the door and presented them to the receiving line which included the honoree in pink lace frock, made redingote style, Mrs. Clyde Pipkin, Mrs. Jess Pipkin of Breckenridge; Mrs. J. E. Hickman, Austin, and three recent brides, Mrs. C. Keith Beyette, Fort Worth, Mrs. Virgil Brown, Mrs. Kenneth McElroy and the hostess.

The bride's registration book in the library was presided over by Mrs. Art Johnson and Mrs. Clyde Grissom. Red roses in brass bowls and antique vases were used in the registration room. The tea table was lace laid and centered with a low arrangement of Mexican flame flowers and asters in a gold bowl. Turquoise candles in crystal candelabra flanked an oval bowl of roses and queen's wreath on the buffet.

Tea room hostesses were Mrs. T. J. Haley, Mrs. James Horton, Mrs. W. B. Pickens, Mrs. Morris Keasler and Mrs. Tom Flack. Iced frappe and open faced brown bread sandwiches and cookies were served the guests.

A surprise awaited the honoree when she was called to the porch by Miss Dorothy Perkins and to the strains of the wedding march the guests followed to see "Jelle," the Model T Ford, arrive, well loaded with gifts of all description. "Just married" signs, old shoes, gay ribbons and a monkey in a bird cage added to the merriment as the "country farmer," Robert Perkins, and his sunbonnetted "wife," C. Keith Beyette, drove over the lawn to the steps. Ringing a school bell to attract attention, the honoree thanked her friends for the afternoon and her gifts.

Southern Industry Produces Twice as Much as Farmers

DALLAS.—Demonstrating the larger per capita wealth production of industry compared to agriculture, a report of the All-South Development Council today revealed that, although more than half of all the employed persons in the 16 southern states are agricultural workers, the value of their farm products in 1936 was considerably less than half that of southern manufactures.

Quoting the Blue Book of Southern Progress, the report shows that in 1936 agricultural production of the south totaled $3,969,000,000 (40 per cent of the nation's total), while southern manufactures had an aggregate value of $9,500,000,000. Besides, the output of southern mines, quarries and wells was in excess of $1,600,000,000.

The large proportion of total southern goods production which these figures show being contributed by industries is the more notable, the report says, when it is noted that "industry" employs only 21.1 per cent of the 8,708,488 employed persons in the south. Farming employs 4,383,660, or 50.4 per cent of the total, while the other 28.5 per cent are employed in trade and commerce.

Resources of petroleum, gas, coal and iron ores for basic industries are ample. Great areas are underlaid with limestone and there are vast deposits of marble and granite. Immense resources of calcium carbonate for agricultural lime, material for cement as well as feldspar, fuller's earth, clays and phosphates afford opportunities for new industries.

While this description, from the Blue Book, is applied to the South generally, Texas itself encompasses virtually all these natural advantages, the report points out. The continued threat of new or increased taxes on the industries converting this native material into tangible wealth—as for exam-

Soviet Resort Is Known As a Spa For Oil Bathing

By United Press BAKU, U. S. S. R.—Geran, a small station in Azerbaijan, is becoming a popular health resort. It is believed to be the only place in the world where a peculiar kind of oil, naphthalan, is applied as a cure.

This dark-brown, oily, viscous liquid contains neither benzene, kerosene, paraffin, nor water, it has a peculiar aromatic scent which grows stronger when heated. Naphthalan baths are used in the treatment of nervous, gynecologic and skin diseases. The effect of naphthalan is said to be stronger and more rapid than that of medicinal muds and the patients stand it much more easily.

The government has allotted 30,000,000 roubles for the development of the "Naphthalan" health resort under the Third Five Year Plan. The naphthalan cure had been known from time immemorial. A few hundred years ago, patients from India, Arabia, Iran and other distant countries used to take the cure. During the installation here of oil derricks there were found Hindu coins, household utensils and crockery, which, according to archeologists, date back 600 years.

Along with increasing utilization of southern minerals, the book forecasts that the greatest development will come in chemicals manufacturing. Southern forests and cotton will provide an abundance of cellulose, a product of a thousand uses when touched by modern industrial chemistry's magic wand.

"We are just beginning to sound the possibilities of chemicals from salt, sulphur, coal, oil and gas," the book states, "and literally hundreds of products from southern crops such as the once lowly peanut and the unwanted cottonseed are now claiming the close attention of research scientists."

IT'S IN THE News! There are two classes of news in these columns every day: (1) Interesting stories about events all over the world; and (2) The advertisements. Yes; the advertisements are news, and in many ways the most important of all, because they affect you more directly and personally than any other. A new and better method of refrigeration is devised — and you learn about it through advertisements. Improvements are added to automobiles which make them safer than ever — again advertisements carry the story. Styles change in clothing — and advertisements rush the news to your doorstep. A manufacturer finds a way to lower the price on his products — he advertises to tell you about the savings. You'll find that it pays to follow this news every day. Reading the advertisements is the sure way to keep abreast of the world... to learn of new comforts and conveniences... to get full money's worth for every dollar you spend.
