Midnight Light is Found by Observer

MT. LOCKE OBSERVATORY, FORT DAVIS, Texas.—Dr. Otto Struve, joint director of the McDonald Observatory on Mt. Locke in the Davis Mountains and the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago, has discovered that the midnight sky is lighted up with infra-red rays that dim the stars. The only trouble is that the human eye can't see the infra-red. A new camera installed at the observatory was responsible for the discovery. The camera has a spherical mirror and a thin lens of ultra-violet glass. "Dr. C. T. Elvey and I used this instrument photographing the sky with infra-red plates sensitive to radiation intermediate between the reddest visible rays and the heat rays," Dr. Struve said. "We found to our surprise that the night sky is constantly luminous in infra-red light so that our eyes were sensitive to these radiations they would see the sky as a luminous surface upon which the stars would appear relatively pale."

Obstacles in the Way of Boycott Plan

One of the most entertaining bits of business this winter ought to be the attempt to persuade the American to stop wearing silk stockings in order that the villainous Japanese may be foiled of their designs on China.

From the shapely legs of American womanhood to the muddy battlefields of Shanghai may seem like a long jump. But there is a connection, spelled simply in the one word: boycott.

The argument runs something like this.

Japan is making war on China in plain violation of all existing treaties. If one nation can treat another nation so, no nation is safe from the threat of force; America, accordingly, must do her part to restrain the Japanese.

But the Japanese don't restrain easily. They have, in fact, shrugged off all protests. And no American cares to see his country go to war to make the protests effective. There remains, then, only the boycott. If all lovers of peace and good-will will stop buying Japanese goods, the Japanese will see the error of their ways and the dove of peace will flutter once more over war-racked China.

Which brings us back to silk stockings.

Japan's principal export to this country is silk. If we are going to boycott Japan, we have got to stop buying silk. And if we are going to stop buying silk, we have somehow got to persuade the American woman to encase her nether limbs in something besides silk stockings—in lisle, in rayon, or perhaps in the plain old-time cotton article.

And that, when you stop to think about it, is going to be something of a job. Never has there been a country as leg-conscious as modern America. The American woman, you might say, struggled for generations to win recognition of her right to wear silk hose day in and day out, regardless of her station in life. Anyone who imagines that she is readily going to surrender that right, even for a noble and altruistic cause, may well have another guess coming.

All of which compels one to wonder just how effective these international boycotts—talked of so freely, these days—are ever going to be.

There seems to be a school of thought which would substitute the boycott for war, which would make of it a padded club by which an erring nation may be clubbed bloodlessly back into good behavior. On paper it is all very simple. In actual practice it may be quite different.

For we buy goods in international trade, not because we admire the people who make them, but because we like to have the goods. It is going to take deep and strong emotion to make such boycotts successful. Is our desire to see Japan restrained, for instance, quite as sincere and universal as our wish to have the American woman continue to wear silk hose?

Maybe it is. If so—watch out, Japan. But then again, maybe it isn't.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox
NEA Service Staff Writer

THOUGH pork comes high it is the darling of most American menu makers. Roasts and chops from the fresh hams and loin are the most costly parts. Smoked ham runs still higher. So, apply intelligence and a little self-restraint to get pork on your menus.

There are relatively cheap cuts of pork. A shoulder makes a delicious roast. When smoked it turns into a smoked butt or cottage ham and can be used cold, for sandwiches, fried with eggs, or served hot.

Roast Shoulder of Pork

(4 to 6 servings)

Six pounds fresh shoulder of pork; 1 cup dried bread crumbs, 2-3 cup boiling water, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon bacon fat, 1 cup shelled peanuts, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon paprika, 1-2 teaspoon grated onion.

Have bone removed from pork shoulder, wash, dry and stuff. Mix crumbs with boiling water, bacon fat and butter, add seasonings and chopped nuts. When shoulder is stuffed season with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 2-2 hours. Serve with spiced apple sauce.

Roast Spare Ribs

(4 to 6 servings)

Six pounds spare ribs, 1 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon salt, 3-4 cup boiling water, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-4 teaspoon powdered sage, 2 tablespoons flour.

Put spare ribs in a pan dredged with pepper, add salt to water and pour in bottom of pan, rub pork with butter. Cook in a hot oven (400 deg. F.) for ten minutes, reduce heat to 350 deg. F. and cook two hours, basting frequently. When done rub with a little powdered sage. Add flour to drippings and make brown gravy.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Sliced bananas, creamed dried beef, hominy muffins, apple jelly, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Lima beans and Vienna sausage casserole, cabbage and orange salad, nut cookies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Roast spare ribs, brown gravy, mashed potatoes, buttered carrots, apple sauce, cottage pudding with hot chocolate sauce, coffee, milk.

Lima Beans and Sausage Casserole

(Serve about 5)

Two and one-half cups cooked lima beans (No. 2 can), 1-2 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, 1 small jar of Vienna style sausage (7 oz.), 2 tablespoons butter.

Combine the lima beans, salt, pepper and mustard. Line a well greased shallow heat resistant glass baking dish—1 quart size—with the sausages cut in halves crosswise. Pour the seasoned beans into the casserole. Dot with bits of butter. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., for about 25 minutes until hot throughout.

Pork Chop Baked with Potato

(4 to 6 servings)

Six shoulder pork chops, 6 medium sized potatoes, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 tablespoons flour, 3-4 cup boiling water.

Peel potatoes and cut in thin slices, wash and drain, lay in a baking dish and season with salt and pepper. Cover with pork chops and season them with salt and pepper and dredge with flour, add boiling water and bake forty minutes in a hot oven (400 deg. F.). At the end of twenty minutes turn chops.

Safety Engineers Meet December 3

HOUSTON, TEXAS — Safety engineers from all parts of the state will assemble in Austin next December 3 for the first annual convention of the Texas Safety Executives association, it was announced here today by R. B. Rooper, chairman of the committee on temporary organization.

The permanent TSEA organization will be created during the convention, and all safety engineers, directors, supervisors and their assistants in the State of Texas are invited to attend, Mr. Rooper said.

Similar meetings will be held later in Houston, San Antonio, Beaumont, Wichita Falls, Dallas, Tyler, Fort Worth, and other cities in the state.

The TSEA is a statewide independent and non-profit organization of safety men with leadership in the hands of trained safety engineers. Its purpose is the planning and conducting of a board and effective safety program throughout the state.

The organization has received the endorsement of Gov. James V. Allred, Carl Rutland, chairman of Governor Allred's traffic committee, and L. G. Phares, head of the state highway patrol.

In a statement issued today Mr. Rooper said that all safety engineers joining the organization prior to the convention in Austin would automatically become members of the original committee and would enjoy the same privileges as those who organized the association.

BATTERED by Navy's powerful attack, Great Lakes Naval Training Station was pushed back to its own goal line in that famous game of 1918. With only a yard to go, Navy's Bill Ingram, later to be Midshipman coach, smashed through center and fumbled! From the pile of players emerged "Dizzy" Ellison, Great Lakes back, one ball in his hands as he dashed toward Navy's goal, 100 yards away. Not a man stood between him and a touchdown. Suddenly, as he reached midfield, an excited Navy substitute jumped from the bench, ran onto the field and brought Ellison down with a flying tackle. Navy's coach, Gil Dolbe, immediately declared the touchdown should be allowed, and Great Lakes kicked goal, winning 7-6.

Sport Glances By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK.—Frank Frisch still carries the program of the Duke-Colgate game in his pocket. With his 19-year-old nephew, Johnny Lucy, playing plenty of guard for the Red Raiders, the manager of the St. Louis Cardinals is a violent Colgate fan. Frisch ran his finger down the Duke roster. "These schools make no attempt to be accurate," said the old Fordham Flash. "Take this fellow here, for example," and his finger stopped at the name of a Duke lineman. "He's listed at 193 pounds and is being 20 years old. Now, anybody who has seen him knows he weighs more than 193 pounds, and that nobody could possibly grow that big in 20 years. Poor Johnny Lucy. All I hope is that he doesn't get hurt." But the Dukes are little more robust than the Colgates, and Bill Edwards, the young coach of Western Reserve, unbeaten in 28 games and perhaps the finest of the second-flight arrays, tells me his line averages 198. From Augusta, Me., to Santa Ana, Calif., few football combinations are underweight.

FRISCH weighed just 145 pounds when he was an elusive halfback for Fordham 20 years ago, and can't understand how the colleges get them so mountainous nowadays. "They don't come in those sizes in baseball," he asserted. "The answer to that is that baseball is a more highly specialized form of athletics. The reason why there are so many young giants on the gridirons today is that there are twice as many boys in college now than there were in 1920. A boy who can play football hasn't the slightest difficulty in going to college. As a matter of fact, he's rushed off his feet. Thus, coaches have vastly more material from which to select varsities. There is a superior grade of talent because practically every high school now has a team, and boys are well trained before they even report for freshman squads."

MANY high school players now attend a preparatory school for an additional year before entering college. There they acquire experience and 15 pounds or so. Many stay out of college a year and work for enough money to start their higher education. Meanwhile, they pick up poundage. The premium on size now is so great that boys make it a point to take on weight that their charges eat the proper food, get the right conditioning during the off-season, etc. Any boy can take on five or 10 pounds throughout the summer if he so desires. Then, too, we're developing a larger race of men. Ten years ago, the average-sized American male stood 5 feet 9. Now he stands about 5 feet 9 1/2. And kids now toss footballs all year 'round, where they formerly tossed baseballs.

THE premium on size now is so great that boys make it a point to take on weight that their charges eat the proper food, get the right conditioning during the off-season, etc. Any boy can take on five or 10 pounds throughout the summer if he so desires. Then, too, we're developing a larger race of men. Ten years ago, the average-sized American male stood 5 feet 9. Now he stands about 5 feet 9 1/2. And kids now toss footballs all year 'round, where they formerly tossed baseballs.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—In Washington, at least, enthusiasm over the coming American tour of those two great lovers, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, falls well this side of the bonfire-burning stage. The great heart of America may go out to these twain in the form of mob demonstrations, society brows over the entertainment and antics of local politicians. But insofar as federal government officials are concerned, the frost is on the pumpkin. There is even a suspicion among them that the fanfare over the royal visit may be interspersed with one or two sour notes. The State Department professes vagueness as to the Duke's status on tour and thus far there hasn't been a peep out of the British embassy. Later, possibly, this will be all fixed up and a happy, cozy time will be enjoyed by all. Just at present, however, there's a noticeable tension in the air at the embassy. The flippant press conference remarks of Secretary Ickes aren't his cool response to the request of Charles E. Bedaux—who has full charge of the Eddie-Wally invasion—for a suggested itinerary of projects appears to have pitched the official key. For the time being, at least, Ickes let the cabled request go unanswered for about a week. Bedaux representatives then put him on the spot by letting newspapermen know he had the cable. Ickes cabled a list of FWA and other projects collect and said to correspondents, among other things: "He will have to work out his own itinerary and handle his own publicity." The reference was to Bedaux, not the Duke of Windsor.

Probably it isn't true that Windsor will try to sell business men the Bedaux industrial efficiency scheme, which organized labor detests, and time clocks for President Thomas J. Watson of International Business Machines, who recently mastered the Hitler salute and was decorated by the Fuehrer. But that's been widely reported. Bedaux is reported to admire fascism no end, and the Bedaux system has been described in an A. F. of L. report as "a method of forcing the last ounce of effort out of workers at the smallest cost in wages." (Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc.)

Quintuplets Need Mother, Declares the Babies' Ex-Nurse

By United Press
NORTH BAY, Ont.—Mme. Louise de Kiriline, former nurse of the Dionne quintuplets, is opposed to their separation from their mother. Referring to her past career as nurse to the famous babies, Mme. Kiriline said in an address here that "I came to understand, as I feel certain that their mother does, too, that usurping certain rights of the babies' mother—albeit most unintentionally—could never bring happiness." "Therefore, a reunion of the Dionne family upon a sensible basis, still under official guardianship for the babies, I am emphatically sure is not only possible, but might save the babies from what tends to be a most abnormal kind of childhood."

JILL BY MARY RAYMOND Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

Twice he stopped to bring coffee and heap more coal on the open fire. Ardath was of that type who knew only one way to get a man. Entrap him with physical weapons. Her lips curved into warm invitation again. But her most alluring expressions were evidently being lost upon Alan. She began to droop in weary defeat. "Wake up," Alan cried out with professional ruthlessness. "Let's quit," Ardath suggested, suddenly. "I'm—I guess I'm too tired to sit still any longer. It's late, and there's tomorrow. You don't have to punch a clock at 8 a. m. do you?" "I'm afraid I've been selfish," Alan said compassionately. "I'm fearfully sorry. I'll make this up to you. Models are well paid, you know." "Oh, skip it," Ardath said. "I don't want any money. It wasn't so bad, really. Let's see what you've done." Alan threw a cover over the canvas. "Wait until it's finished. I'm afraid you wouldn't understand now what I'm trying to do. I'll call a taxi for you now." "A taxi!" Ardath breathed. "I couldn't be walking in on my landlady at an hour like this. She's awfully strict, you see." ALAN did see. She had believed this was one of those cheap adventures. Only it wouldn't be. He tried to keep the contempt out of his voice, to make it sound casual. "You want to stay here, then?" "If you don't mind. I could just curl up in a big chair somewhere." "I wouldn't be comfortable at all sleeping in my bed. I've a better idea. I'm going to let you sleep there, while I go out for a walk." Ardath persisted. "It wasn't silly for you to leave. If you're thinking about my reputation—you needn't. I'm not a conventional person." "No," Alan said, his eyes meeting her's steadily. "I wasn't thinking of that. Besides the night is already over. It's close to 5 o'clock." He went out, closing the door behind him. Ardath went back into the bedroom slowly. The covered canvas turned her eyes, and angrily she tugged back the cover. For a moment she stood regarding it blankly. Her own face, her own features. And yet it wasn't her. The soft, shining radiance on the face of the woman on the canvas bewildered her. Her lips had never curved in the sweet and gentle way this woman's did. Getting a soul, he had said! The arrogant fool! He had used her to paint this silly picture. He had been making fun of her all the time. In a blind fury, Ardath struck the canvas violently. She would leave before he came back. Just as soon as it was light. But she would leave a little reminder of her visit. With quick, savage fingers, she rolled the picture from the easel, rolled it tightly and went over to the fire. For a moment, smoke curled about the canvas. Then, greedy flames leaped up. A TAWNY glow was streaking the early morning sky when Jill drove away from the big, shadow-wrapped mansion. Some of her dark mood began to drop from her like a too-heavy load. She was going to the man she loved. That was all that mattered for the moment. He would forgive her and understand. When big hurts came, petty considerations were washed away, like small ripples lost in the heavy roll of the sea. Here she was turning into 67th street, with its sleepy morning face powdered heavily with snow. And—Jill had stopped her car at the curb with a funny little quiver of nervousness—this was the address Patty had given her. Behind that closed door was Alan. It was natural to feel this frightened clutch at her heart. She couldn't remember calling on a man she loved at this hour before! And she never could again! Inside, Ardath was aroused by the jangle of the doorbell. She came out of sleep slowly, with last night's anger and irritation creeping back with consciousness. It must be Alan coming back to make peace, changing his mind about being so high and uppity. He would be angry about that picture. There was only one thing to do. Brazen it out. She might get farther with crying. She had slipped into her dress, tugged on her slippers and started to the door. The bell rang again and Ardath muttered: "Coming, coming!" Her eyes were a little scared. He really had an awful temper. You could see it. She opened the door a little, and then wider, as she recognized the early morning caller. "Oh, it's you!" Ardath said, smiling defiantly at Jill. (To Be Continued)

War's Tide Turns Settlement Into No Man's Land

Retreat of Chinese troops west and south from Chapel, after heavy fighting around North Station (1), placed Shanghai's International Settlement in new peril as the "No Man's Land" of the war. Drawn up to the west along Soochow Creek, the Chinese "dug in" to halt the Japanese advance southward, directed at cutting the Chinese off from Shanghai. From a warehouse in shell-torn Chapel (2) a Chinese "Lost Battalion" was evacuated, after heavy losses. Japanese precipitated a new "incident" by invading Settlement boundaries (3) held by U. S. marines, to capture a Chinese junk. Japanese machine-gunning of British outposts (4) also drew British diplomatic fire. Latest danger to inhabitants of the Settlement was from misdirected shells of Japanese warships (5), anchored in the Whangpoo which have supported the land attack.

J. C. Matthews, director of the demonstration school and of student teaching, chairman of the Southern Association Curriculum Commission.

The following will present papers or speeches: Miss Nellie Griffiths, professor of education; Dr. Walter Hansen, associate professor of geography; Mr. H. B. Masters, principal of the demonstration school and of student training; Henry G. Shands, associate professor of physical education; Miss Lillian M. Parrill, associate professor and director of music, and Ronald Williams, assistant professor of art. At the banquet for the Federated Ex-Students of Texas at the Houston Club Friday, Nov. 26, at 6 p. m., Prof. J. W. Pender, chairman of the department of government, will pay tribute to Dr. W. H. Bruce, president emeritus of the North Texas State Teachers College.

War planes bombard Shanghai with newspapers carrying Sino-Japanese friendship propaganda. If their aim is as bad with news as with bombs most of it probably landed in the International Settlement.

John Brown has "a cold",

John Brown is usually a careful man. But John Brown, like many others who catch cold during winter months, ignores the dangers of sudden changes of temperature. Some rooms of his house are heated and others are not. Now John Brown has a cold!

And the little Browns are sniffing,

Like their Daddy, the little Brown girls have a cold. Although the room where they play is kept cozy and warm, frequently they go to unheated parts of the house. It doesn't take the cold germ long to strike when the girls go into the cold bedroom to bring additional toys.

And Mother Brown is taking chances . . .

Mrs. Brown hasn't a cold . . . yet. But Mother Brown is constantly taking chances with her health as she goes from the warm rooms into cold ones during her busy day. Wouldn't it be safer for the Brown family to HEAT THE ENTIRE HOUSE this winter?
