Science Prescribes a Design for Living

The role of science in the evolution of mankind is a question on which even scientists disagree.

Some contend that science such as psychiatry will some day be able to control our minds and shape our ends. Others disagree. Certainly there is no unanimity of opinion on whether it would be wise for the human race to submit wholly to the ministrations of science.

Few, on the other hand, will disagree with the contention of scientists that objective reasoning and logical thinking must dominate such emotions as hate, and fear, and rage, if civilization is to continue functioning.

One of the chief contributions of science to the evolution of human thinking has been its ability to reduce generalities and half-truths to concrete statement of fact which will stand up under the light of reasoning.

Thus Dr. Ralph Gerard, professor of physiology at the University of Chicago, comes forward with what he terms three "earmarks" for the identification of "intelligent behavior."

The first earmark, says Dr. Gerard, is "the absence of superstition" the emancipation from fear of nature and the here-and-now prejudices of the group.

Second, the scientist content, intelligent behavior must be marked by "tolerance" in which "the new is neither fatusously accepted nor blindly damned" and in which decisions are reached "after due instruction in and evaluation of the facts, pro and con."

"Third," says Dr. Gerard, "intelligent behavior does not confuse the symbol with the things, words themselves are classes and stand only as symbols which are imperfect and shifting representations of that for which they stand. Even facts are abstractions and, like words, may lead via the machinery of the most impeccable logic to bizarre conclusions."

Dr. Gerard contends that "pure science" is the only hope for the future of civilization. He believes that it would be unwise to eliminate the selfish elements of self-preservation from man's makeup, but that it is "surely desirable to control and guide them."

But the scientist refutes, in part, his own contentions when he says that science, through genetics, could improve the human breed—but doesn't know what to breed for; and could train thoughts, motives and actions along new channels—but does not know what to educate for.

Probably most of us would be content just to accept Dr. Gerard's earmarks of intelligent behavior as a design for present living, and let social evolution take care of the future.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox NEA Service Staff Writer

TRIPE is a slang word for foolishness. But it's also the lining of a cow's stomach and provides a low cost meat without foolishness. If you've never used tripe in your economy menus, begin today. It is easily digested by a person in normal health. Invalids and persons with poor digestion had better avoid it.

To boil fresh tripe, cover with boiling water, add 1-2 teaspoon salt and simmer until tender, about one-half hour.

Spanish Tripe (4 to 6 servings) One and one-half pounds fresh boiled tripe, 1 can tomatoes, 3-4 onion, 1-2 small green pepper, 1 cup white cabbage, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon butter, 4 slices bacon.

Cut tripe in very small pieces, put in a greased casserole dish. Chop onion and pepper fine and saute in butter, add to heated tomatoes, add seasoning and cabbage, pour over tripe. Cut bacon in small pieces and lay on top. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for one hour.

Tripe Fried in Batter (4 to 6 servings) One and one-half pounds fresh boiled tripe, 1-2 onion, 3 cloves, 1 small bay leaf, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 1-2 cup water.

Cut tripe in pieces the size of a large oyster, cover with boiling water, add onion, clove, bay leaf and vinegar, simmer fifteen minutes and drain. Make a batter by sifting flour, salt and baking Blind Woman Sings Ballads of South By United Press PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Blind Mrs. Emma Dusenbury, 74 years old, is one of the few remaining singers of ballads west of the Mississippi river.

Most any day, when the weather is warm and pleasant, travelers who pass her rural home near here may hear her singing the songs that have all but been forgotten. The songs were never written but were passed from one pioneer family to another—old British ballads, ditties and party.

One of the old songs which she says is a favorite is called "Abraham's Proclamation" and begins: "When I was out on Master's farm

Attending to the plantation, I heard a noise, It was the boys, Crying out the proclamation, A Yank stepped up to me and said: "You're in too low a station. Come with me, I'll set you free, By Abraham's proclamation."

Mrs. Dusenbury has been blind 46 years. She was born in Georgia, but says "I just don't recollect where." She has lived in Arkansas since

"I AM ONE OF THE MILLIONS WHO PREFER CAMELS" SAYS RALPH GREENLEAF WORLD'S CHAMPION IN POCKET BILLIARD

"HEALTHY NERVES ARE A MUST WITH ME!"

FOURTEEN different times the news headlines have flashed: RALPH GREENLEAF WINS WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP. In a special interview during his recent championship play in Philadelphia, Ralph said: "I'd say the most important rule in this game is to have healthy nerves. And on that score, I think, Camels have a lot extra to offer. One of the main reasons why I've stuck to Camel cigarettes for twenty years is—they don't ruffle my nerves."

And America as a nation shows the same preference for finer tobaccos that Ralph Greenleaf does! Camels are the largest-selling cigarette in America

Fencing experts, too, appreciate Camel's finer tobaccos. As BELA DE TUSCAN, the famous instructor, says: "Fencing is very tiring, and I welcome the quick 'lift' I get with a Camel."

JAMES L. CLARK, famous scientist and explorer, says: "I always carry plenty of Camels with me into the wilderness. 'To walk a mile for a Camel!' Many's the time I've done it."

"The way these light boats bounce around knocks the daylight out of my digestion! Camels help my digestion to keep on an even keel," says MULFORD SCULL, outboard motorboat racer.

HELEN HOWARD, top-flight spring-board diver, of Miami, Florida, says: "Camels don't irritate my throat—not even when I'm sitting around in a wet suit, a target for irritation."

HE IS COUNTED THE GREATEST POCKET-BILLIARD PLAYER Here Greenleaf executes a difficult masse shot, requiring faultless stroking, and healthy nerves. And the world's two best of the cue—champion Ralph Greenleaf and the 18.1 champion, Willie Hoppe—are both Camel smokers.

they are just doing their jobs, you know. We are 'news,' and so they have to tell the world about us."

BRET said he supposed she was right. Nevertheless he did not think he would ever get used to being public property. He was certain he never would enjoy it. He was glad now that they were going away; they would not be "news" in other countries.

However he was to find that they still were, to the other passengers on shipboard. People stopped talking whenever the newlyweds, whose romance was so strange and thrilling, approached on their daily promenade around the deck; they stared as they made their way across the big dining room to the captain's table. When Bret and Connie played games, or swam in the big pool, or danced, there were whispered, though often audible comments, and always a group gathered as an audience. Once Bret opened the stateroom or suddenly to discover a man eavesdropping outside.

"I almost pitched him overboard," he told Connie violently. "Why on earth should people spy on us and whisper behind our backs and rubberneck? I think, honey, if you don't mind, we'll stay close to our rooms during the remainder of the voyage."

Connie said she did not mind. Poor Bret, he was getting a taste of the gilded cage in which she always had lived. She did not mind the way people behaved as much as usual; not only because she was used to it, but because it was impossible for her to mind anything as long as she had Bret.

They were very happy during this second honeymoon. Perhaps they would never be quite so happy again. It may be that each realized this, in their hearts, and so made every moment a perfect, shining one.

It was fun, as Connie had predicted, seeing and enjoying everything together. In London they played at sightseeing, and the night spots. In Paris they were very gay, doing the rounds of night clubs and the Bohemian quarters; and Connie, to Bret's amazement, purchased trunkloads of gorgeous clothes of which he thought she had more than enough already. In India they obtained an audience with Gandhi, the richest girl in the world sitting at the feet of the poorest man! They ordered an exact replica, in miniature, of the famous Taj Mahal. They stayed a month at Connie's villa on the Riviera, where the white sands were surfed by the blue Mediterranean. In Bangkok and Delhi they browsed in the street markets and bought everything from fruits to ancient hand-woven rugs. In Egypt they gazed upon the carved wonder of the Sphinx.

When they came back, after four months into which so much had been crowded that it might have been several years, they brought more than 50 trunks and boxes and barrels filled with imperial tapestries and brocades, jades and ivories, gowns and jewels and furs, strange, brightly-colored birds in enough cages to house the feathered inhabitants of Manhattan—and even a 10-foot alligator from Hongkong!

"What we'll do with it all is beyond my powers of imagination," said Bret.

"But, darling, we had such fun—and we had to have a souvenir of every single place and moment," Connie claimed. "Oh, Bret, I'm sorry it's ended, our lovely honeymoon. Will we always be as happy as we have been?" She clung to him, her blue eyes pleading, her sweet lips curved in a wistful smile. Almost she was afraid of such happiness as theirs; it was so complete, so perfect. Could it last forever, remain impregnable?

"We'll do our best, sweetheart," Bret promised, his dark eyes grave. "It has indeed been wonderful. I'm glad we'll have such memories to treasure and share. But happiness is something, as I've told you, that money can not buy, that is not even a gift from the gods. It is something one must strive for, work to obtain; something that lies within one's self."

"Then we'll work at it together," Connie vowed. "As hard as we have played and lived and loved. We will really be starting our new life together now."

How could she ever have been afraid when she had Bret? He was so strong and fine and clean. So unutterably dear.

It would be good to be back home again. To make that "home" together.

with much sympathy and raised $60,000 and some supplies in New Orleans but after reaching the East and news was received of the losses at the Alamo and at Goliad, the invasion of Texas by large Mexican forces under Santa Anna, and the retreat of the Texans from Gonzales, found it impossible to obtain money. Austin then appealed to Pres. Andrew Jackson and other officials for government help in "the war of barbarism against liberty," but without avail.

Q. What was President Jackson's attitude toward the Texas revolution in 1836?

A. While generally sympathetic toward Texas independence, he filed Austin's appeal for help without taking any notice of it other than the following notation on its margin: "The writer does not reflect that we have a treaty with Mexico, and our national faith is pledged to support it. The Texans before they took the step to declare themselves independent, which has aroused and united all Mexico against them, ought to have pondered well. It was a rash and premature act. Our neutrality must be faithfully maintained."

Q. What disastrous consequences would have followed defeat of the Texans at San Jacinto?

A. Santa Anna would have become an international hero, with greatly increased powers. All Anglo-Saxons would have been swept from Texas, their property confiscated or destroyed; further help from outside could not have been obtained, and Texas again would have become an outlying, undeveloped Mexican waste land, with few if any attractions or opportunities for development.

Q. Who were offered for election as first president of the independent Republic of Texas and what were the results of the election?

A. Stephen F. Austin, Henry Smith and Sam Houston were voted for at the first election, Sept. 5, 1836, in which Houston received 4,374 votes, Henry Smith 743, and Austin 587. Houston had consented to have his name submitted only 12 days before the election. The vote was not a test of the popularity of the men, but Houston was considered best able to get the Republic out of the turbulence and bankruptcy into which it had fallen.

Sport Glances. By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

TEXAS, long a great developing ground for baseball players, rapidly is attaining the same steady efficiency in golf and football.

Among the Lone Star state's front men of the fairways are Harry Cooper, Ralph Guldahl, Byron Nelson, and Wild Bill Mehlhorn, who will do until you can think of a more able quartet from one commonwealth.

No locality has made such tremendous strides in football in recent years, with Sammy Baugh a striking example of playing skill, and now Texas is sending its coaches to other sections.

JOEL HUNT, who hops from Louisiana State to succeed the veteran Harz Mahre as head coach of the University of Georgia, is a Texas A. & M. immortal, who determined while still in college to make football coaching his life work.

He kept that idea in mind following his graduation in 1928 and during five years of professional baseball as a member of the St. Louis Cardinals' chain gang.

An outfielder who played in every baseball classification and had three trials with the Red Birds, Hunt voluntarily retired after breaking his leg in 1932.

Hunt, blue-eyed, brown-haired, and only 32, likes to hunt and fish, but does little of either as long as he can find someone with whom to talk football.

Hunt, who stands 5 feet 10 1/2 inches and weighs 165 pounds, three under the playing weight of his college days, understands playing and personally is popular with his backs that he knows what he is talking about because he still can outpace and outpass the best of them. He always is in top condition.

He probably will employ the Warner single wingback, which is used by Bernie Moore at Louisiana State, but has very definite ideas of his own.

Hunt applied for the Georgia job soon after Mehre's resignation. He had such fine recommendations that Bulldog officials interviewed him personally, and soon engaged him.

HUNT was head coach at the College of Marshall, Tex., in 1928-9, where his club won the junior championship of the cow country. After three seasons as backfield coach at Texas A. & M., under Matty Bell, he went to L. S. U. in the same capacity under Maj. Bill Jones.

He was All-Southwest Conference quarterback in 1925-6-7, playing hero roles in the championships won by Dana X. Bible's Texas A. & M. team in '25-7. Hunt did such things as punt, pass, call signals, block, run, and kick field goals for the Aggies.

Hunt was born at Texico, N. M., where his paternal grandfather was a prominent government official of territorial days. He is devoted to Mrs. Hunt, the former Evelyn Eckles of Baton Rouge, and their two-and-a-half-year-old daughter, Nancy Joe.

Joel Hunt combines the steadiness of Dana X. Bible, who drilled him, and the backfield imagination and brilliance of a triple threat. Georgia will like him.

Be Natural' No. 1 Commandment to The Glamour Girls

By United Press

NEW YORK. — Be natural if you would be glamorous, advise stylists and beauty experts.

Tight-fitting dresses—the kind that bind at the hipline—are taboo. So are flashy shoes, crooked stocking seams, run-down heels and heavy make-up.

The glamour girl of 1938 is well groomed. She has a weekly hair shampoo and manucure. She wears comfortable, smart shoes. She chooses her accessories with an idea to make them serve for several changes in costume, always bearing in mind that her outfit is as effective as her weakest detail.

Miss 1938 dresses correctly for each occasion. If her escort suggests a jaunt to the countryside, she wears appropriate low-heeled sports shoes. If she's theatre-bound, she wears dainty pumps.

All of these details are necessary to the girl who wants to be intriguing and popular with the opposite sex, say the stylists.

Colors are important, too. Blacks, browns and navy blues are always good. Bright colors are more difficult to wear and never appear quite as smart as subdued, conservative choices.

The glamour girl is careful of her posture. She never slouches or crosses her legs when sitting. Her figure is symmetrical and nicely rounded. Salads—both fruit and vegetable—are a major part of her diet. They help her maintain a good weight, keep her complexion clear and bring lustre to her hair.

And speaking of hair, she brushes her hair at least 50 strokes a day.

SKI DEMON

traordinary large crops last year and increased purchases of American farm products by Europe.

Short crops in 1934 and 1935 resulting from severe droughts gave the United States an unfavorable agricultural trade balance. Huge quantities of corn, wheat, other grains and meat products were imported, principally from South America.

America's principal export item is cotton. In the last five months of 1937 the United States exported 3,227,000 bales, an increase of 281,000 bales over the same period of 1936. This gain was made despite a reduction of 660,000 bales in Japanese purchases.

Cotton Exports Steady.
Japan purchased 1,600,000 bales of American cotton in the marketing year which ended last July 31 to become the leading importer from this country. During the last five months of 1937 it took only 140,000 bales, compared with 800,000 bales in the same period of last year.

If the Japanese purchases increase during the next six months as expected, total cotton exports may aggregate 6,500,000 bales, or slightly more than one-third of the 1937 crop and 1,000,000 bales above last year.

Department figures showed the United States again exporting wheat in substantial quantities. From the crop year 1934-35 through 1936-37 the United States imported more wheat than it exported. Last year's imports totaled 34,000,000 bushels.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace estimated exports from the 1937 wheat crop would total 96,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels.

4,000 Texans Make Loans for Homes In Loan Associations

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — More than 4,000 Texans joined the ranks of home owners during the last half of 1937, through loans obtained from Texas insured savings and loan associations, according to figures just compiled by the Federal Home Loan Bank of Little Rock. In the six months period just closed, 4,409 loans, aggregating $8,215,000, were granted to Texas home owners. Of this amount $4,200,000 was used to build new homes and $2,200,000 advanced to assist 1,175 Texans to purchase existing dwellings. Included in the compilation are the figures of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association at Ranger, Texas, which participated actively in the local home financing field.

Throughout the ninth district, composed of the States of Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and New Mexico, served by Little Rock bank, the total loans for the six months period were $19,495,000, approximately half of which went into the construction of homes, and $6,000,000 was used for purchases. Attention was called to the fact that these loans were made to 10,026 borrowers, averaging $1,944 each, evidencing the service the associations are performing to the owners of small homes. It was also pointed out that this wide distribution of loans and the consequent diversification of the lending risks give the association greater security for the funds advanced.

Officials of the bank expressed gratification at the large volume of home financing business being done by the insured associations, which they attribute to the attractiveness of the loan plan now available to borrowers. They said the long time, monthly amortized loan plan offered by the associations, under which principal and interest payments are about equal to rent, is proving very popular to home owners.

As another indication of improved business conditions, the bank pointed to the increased, continued flow of investment funds into the associations, which during the six months' period in Texas amounted to $5,200,000. Funds placed in the associations are insured against loss up to $5,000 for each investor by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, Washington, D. C.

Exports since the crop was harvested have averaged about 10,000,000 bushels a month.

Tobacco Remains Steady.
Exports of leaf tobacco are expected to total approximately 400,000,000 pounds, valued at $125,000,000. This would be only slightly above last year. Principal foreign markets for leaf tobacco are the United Kingdom and China.

Fruits now represent one of the leading agricultural export groups with apples the leading item. Exports of apples from last year's crop already have exceeded 2,500,000 bushels, a substantial increase over 1936.

The large 1937 crops are not expected to affect the export-import situation of meat and dairy products until late this year. High domestic prices and short supplies have resulted in abnormally large imports of livestock and livestock products during the past three years.

Hogs and cattle fattened from the 1937 crop will begin to reach the export market in quantities during the last half of this year, trade experts predicted. From August 1 to September 30, 1937, the United States imported 132,600 head of cattle and 28,000,000 pounds of canned beef.

King Winter's Northern Palace Fortified in Ice

Frosty guardian of King Winter's realm in the north, this towering block-built palace of ice featured the annual sports week in Montreal. These palaces formerly were a yearly landmark in the Canadian metropolis, but in 1911 they were discontinued until now. Weeks of careful construction are required to build them and at the end of the carnival the ramparts are usually torn down in mock assault.

STOP LOOK. AND LOOSEN

Sandy McHoots knows a bargain when he sees it. He's Scotch through and through—and "doesna like to spend a muckle." Yet he lives in elegance and comfort. How can this be?

The truth is, Sandy reads the advertisements. Where he has to buy, he buys wisely!

Scotch or not, make a point of looking up advertisements in this newspaper. Things you need are spread before you (perhaps reduced!) . . . luxuries you've always wanted are here at prices within your reach. You'll get the values you're after if you'll stop and look before you loosen!
