Abundant Life Only for Those Who Pay

The triumphs of the last generation were chiefly concerned with devising new goods and services to make life easier and safer. This generation's problem apparently is to find some way of making these devices available to people who lack the money to buy them.

Nowhere has this been emphasized so strongly as in a speech given before the American Public Health Association recently by Josephine Roche, assistant secretary of the treasury.

Miss Roche revealed that there is a direct and tragic relationship between the death rate and the annual income.

Between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 Americans get along on incomes of less than $1000 a year, said Miss Roche. Their death rate from the 10 major diseases which cause 75 per cent of the deaths in the United States is twice that of the rest of the population.

For seven of these 10 diseases, she said, the death rate mounts steadily as the income goes down.

The death rate from respiratory tuberculosis, for instance, is seven times as great among unskilled laborers as among professional people. Pneumonia's death rate is 3 1/2 times as great among unskilled workers as among professionals; the death rate for syphilis and diarrhea are twice as great; cancer kills at a 50 per cent greater rate.

Nor does it stop there. Illness that is not fatal but that takes a man away from his job is far more common among the low income group. One of 20 family heads on relief is unemployed because of physical disability; among the higher income groups, the rate is one in 250. The unemployed in general have twice the disabling illness that the employed have. WPA workers have a disabling illness rate of 40 per cent above that of other employed persons.

All of this throws into clear relief the knottiest problem of the age—how to make available to all the people the discoveries and inventions which science has turned up for us.

Medical science today is better able to keep people sound and well than ever before. It can prevent diseases that formerly were unpreventable, it can cure diseases that formerly were incurable, it can perform operations previously impossible, it has a far clearer idea of the relation of diet to good health.

Yet all of this does little good to the man who can't afford to take advantage of this new knowledge. If doctors did not in so many cases give their time and skill without thought of fees, the situation would be far worse than it is; even so, Miss Roche's figures show unmistakably the tragic connection between poverty and ill health.

In this field as in so many others, we are on the threshold of a dazzling new era of human happiness. We are kept out of it, not by lack of knowledge, but simply because we can't figure out how to make the more abundant life pay its way.

SISTER MARY'S KIT

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox, NEA Service Staff Writer. WITCHES on broomsticks ride roughshod over formality on Halloween night, and black cats will scratch fancy cloths right off the table. Keep your party gay, more or less rough and tumble, have lots of amusingly decorated food and forget that you or your guests have responsibilities. It's a night of fun for everyone. Individual pumpkin pies with staring faces belong in the picture. Here's a good recipe. Goblin Pies (4 to 6 depending on size of individual pans) One and one-half cups scalded milk, 1-2 cup cream, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 eggs, slightly beaten, 1 cup sugar, 1 1-2 cups canned or fresh cooked, mashed pumpkin, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon salt, small pie pans lined with pastry, 1-2 cup whipped cream. Combine pumpkin, flour, eggs, sugar, spices and salt. Mix thoroughly and add hot milk. Mix well. Pour into pans lined with pastry rolled to 1-3 inch thickness. Place pans on baking sheet and finish filling them in oven with large spoon or cup. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) for 15 minutes, then reduce to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake another 25 to 30 minutes. Test with knife blade. When pies are done they will not stick to blade. When cold, decorate with whipped cream faces. For a surprise salad, try this fantastic recipe. It takes time and patience, but the results will make even an angry cat refuse to leave the party. Witch Night Salad (10 to 12 servings) One and one-half cups cooked unsweetened dried apricots, 2 cups liquid in which apricots were cooked, 2 3 1/4-ounce packages lemon flavored gelatin, 3-4 cup granulated sugar, 1 cup crushed pineapple, few grains drops tabasco sauce, 1/2 cup cream cheese, 1/2 cup cats, ripe olives, raisins, cream cheese. Drain apricots, pulp. Heat liquid, pour in and stir to dissolve cats, sugar, pineapple and gelatin. Place in ice box until not firm. Beat with electric beater until light colored. Pour into mold (as nearly round as possible) and set firm. Unmold and serve with sweet pickles and cat figures. Surround salad with toothpicks. For bodies of ripe olives, use toothpicks. For raisins held in place, use toothpicks. String raisins for legs. Cats, bodies, legs, and skeleton cream cheese make mayonnaise and form pastry gun or paper make cat figures. Impale on one end and stick other end in raw apple.

A.&M. Registrations Show Big Growth

COLLEGE STATION, Tex.—A 19 per cent increase over registration the past year and a 129 per cent increase over registration five years ago is represented in the record total of 4,926 students who have enrolled for the first semester at Texas A&M College, figures released by Registrar E. J. Howell, show. This year's freshman class of 1,946 numbers only 48 less students than the total first-semester enrollment in 1932-33. Jumps from 729 students the past year to 912 this year, the jump in other classes in growth per cent increase. Petroleum production in paced departments with a 47 per cent increase in Veterinary medicine and civil engineering shows of 43 per cent and 33 respectively.

IT'S IN THE News!

There are two classes of news in these columns every day:

- (1) Interesting stories about events all over the world; and (2) The advertisements. Yes, the advertisements are news, and in many ways the most important of all, because they affect you more directly and personally than any other.

A new and better method of refrigeration is devised — and you learn about it through advertisements. Improvements are added to automobiles which make them safer than ever — again advertisements carry the story. Styles change in clothing — and advertisements rush the news to your doorstep. A manufacturer finds a way to lower the price on his products — he advertises to tell you about the savings.

You'll find that it pays to follow this news every day. Reading the advertisements is the sure way to keep abreast of the world... to learn of new comforts and conveniences... to get full money's worth for every dollar you spend.

CHAPTER IV

Like a moment, Jack, looking at Sylvia, her wet hair falling back from her white face, were cuffed in the doorway.

"Somebody get some brandy, quick," Jack commanded. "And a blanket to put around her."

Mrs. Wentworth moved about mechanically, giving orders to the servants. Barry had brought the candy and stooped to hold it to Sylvia's lips. But Jack took it from Barry's hand.

"Drink a little of this," he said gently, as though oblivious of the others grouped about the room. "There, that's fine."

Color was coming back to Sylvia's cheeks. She glanced wonderingly up into Jack's face.

"I was wondering what you would look like," she said. "You were the gamest—"

"You were pretty swell, yourself," came Sylvia's weak voice. "I was on my way here," Jack explained to the others, "driving fairly close to shore. I heard her call for help. The boat had capsized and she was trying to swim from shore."

"It seemed a long distance when you were swimming in with me," Sylvia said.

Tears stung Mrs. Wentworth's eyes. It wasn't fair for Jack to meet Sylvia in the role of a rescuer, with angry elements providing a dramatic backdrop. Jack was good-looking, and girls were romantic and impressionable.

She hoped it would continue raining. Rain would provide an excuse to break up the house party and go into town.

But the next morning there was little evidence of the past night's fury except broken branches on the ground, and rubbish washed upon the shore.

A zephyr-like breeze moved the bright awnings again. The lake was calm as glass, deeply blue. Taking its mood from the serene skies.

In the afternoon, Jack—who had been following Sylvia—got like a constant shadow—out her out in a boat.

Barry, sitting gloomily on the pier, watched them start off.

"You are wise to take your hands off her," said Sylvia. "Barry said, 'Another storm might come along. Maybe that's what he hopes will happen.'"

Sylvia's face flushed. It was poor sportsmanship for Barry to pretend that Jack's bravery was a spectacular gesture.

It was late when they returned. "Everybody will be wondering about you," Jack said. "If it were not for that, I'd keep you out here to watch the moon come over the lake."

"Let's," Sylvia's voice was eager. "They will know no harm could come to me on a lovely evening like this—not with someone who swam the lake with me in a cyclone."

"It was fortunate for me that you came when you did," Sylvia said in a serious tone. "I'm wondering how it could have happened."

"I suspect things are meant," Jack's earnest tone matched her own. "It all seemed to have worked out. I didn't come on the party because I expected a classmate to be in town several days. But he had to leave today, so I drove over here."

"You have gone back," Jack said. "I'm an imaginative chap," Jack answered, trying to speak lightly. "Barry isn't. He never thinks of danger."

"At least you're very loyal," Sylvia said. "There was an edge to Sylvia's voice."

At least two people were glad when the house party was over. Mrs. Wentworth and Jill. The former realized the party had been a failure, so far as her own matchmaking plans were concerned. She was sure, however, that no real damage had been done to Barry's romance. Jack and Sylvia had been thrown together only one day. When they returned to New York and he learned that Barry was seriously interested in Sylvia, he would step aside. Soon Sylvia would forget the exciting rescue, and turn to Barry again.

Meanwhile, Jill was congratulating herself that, somehow, she had successfully forestalled one of Milo's inevitable proposals. She was glad to be back in town. Now, she would brush up a bit on the happenings in the art world.

There was Elise Woodworth, who had sailed the debutante seas with her two seasons back. Elise had turned definitely "arty."

Once, last year, she had accompanied Elise to a one-man exhibition of pictures. The young man—a newcomer—had been sponsored by a rich, elderly woman, whose name meant crowds.

Jill remembered that Elise had said: "When rich old ladies get tired of their Pekingeses, they attach some poor young musician or artist, and pull him around by a leash for a while."

But Jill couldn't picture her cool, proud young artist being pulled about and shown off.

And then, Jill had an inspiration. She would call Patty Ralston. Patty, who had swooned with delight over everything from the newest tennis idol to the latest long-haired idol smasher, in college days, had at last got herself sagged "autho" and was doing a book with an art colony as a setting.

Patty's friends were not only authors, they were designers, decorators, and artists.

She would drive across town and see Patty, who could always be counted upon to speed life up, if it ever ran down.

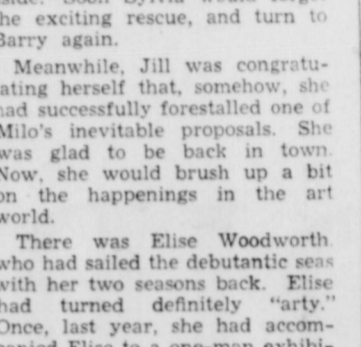

Patty—a thrill chased up and down Jill's spine at the mere thought—might have heard of some one-man art exhibits!

"Why that guy never was in a blacksmith shop before—why do they hafta bring a actor to get a picture fer some ad? Why don't they use one of us guys?"

"What? With our narrow shoulders, an' hollow chests, skinny arms an' thin necks? Don't be ridiculous!"

"That ast stuf is a boon tus guys—why, our social standin' is way up! Th' neighbors think I'm a clerk in th' coal sheds—they never saw a pitcher of a black-smith like me."

WASHINGTON—F. D. R. and his administration are trying to pick their way carefully through an assortment of situations which, there is good reason to believe, finds the President almost as confused about the future as the next fellow.

The future seems a bit muggier than usual, even to the most experienced soothsayers, and one observes a tendency here toward resort to contemplation and prayer rather than glittering generalities and invective.

As to the international situation: Having abandoned isolation and stuck the national neck out into the Pacific, the administration shares the general wonderment over the question where we go from there.

As to the business situation: The acceleration of recovery has temporarily stopped and no one knows just when it will be resumed.

As to the political situation: It is far from certain whether the forthcoming session of Congress will see some snappy action on the administration program or develop into a general dilatory row over foreign policy, the Klan and other issues.

Insiders know now that Roosevelt's Chicago "quarantine" speech was definitely timed not only for the League of Nations' day of the Japanese-Chinese new warfare, but also for the period when England and France were bringing heavy pressure on Italy to get her troops out of Spain. But what the early effect and the long-run consequences will be is as obscure as ever.

STANDBYS need not be household bores. Bananas, grapefruit and oranges stick around all winter. They are delicious with health and are not expensive. But it is possible to give them a "lift" to take them out of the "what, again?" class of daily foods. Try these variations on the familiar theme of standard fresh cold weather fruits.

Banana Royal
 Quick company dessert (4 to 6 servings)

Six small bananas, 1 quart of vanilla ice cream or raspberry ice, 1-2 cup of whipped cream, 6 quick-frozen cherries.

Peel the bananas and cut in half lengthwise. Lay the two halves on a dessert plate and put a ball of ice cream or ice in the center. Top with a spoonful of whipped cream and a cherry. If raspberry ice is used, green cherries for contrast or a half walnut may be used.

Orange Surprise
 (4 to 6 servings)

Six navel oranges (medium sized), 1 quart of orange ice cream, 1 cup of orange juice, 2 level tablespoons powdered sugar, grated rind of 1-2 orange.

Beat eggs very stiff and add sugar and rind. Cut a slice off one end of oranges, scoop out inside and dry. Put in refrigerator to chill thoroughly. Fill with orange ice cream or raspberry ice.

Monday's Menu
BREAKFAST: Cranberry juice, dry Johnny cake, maple coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Hot and tomato sandwiches, na royal tea, milk.
DINNER: Apple pie, steak pie with baked Italian squash salad, grapefruit pie, tea.

ange ice or ice cream in a pan packed in ice. Full of meringue on top in hot oven (425 degrees brown). Serve at once pretty.
 Five tablespoons flour, sugar, 3-4 cup of grapefruit pulp, 1-4 cups of water, pinch of salt, 1-2 orange, 3-4 cup of mix flour well with the grapefruit juice and ter and salt. Cook about 10 minutes in the top of a double boiler, stirring constantly. Cover with a meringue. Beat whites stiff and add 2 tablespoons powdered sugar in a moderate oven (375 F.).

Part Time Classes Urged by the NYA

AUSTIN—J. C. Kellam, Texas Director of the National Youth Administration, told the Annual Conference of Teacher-Trainers Supervisory Teachers, and Supervisors of Homemaking Education in Dallas about opportunities for giving part-time instruction to out-of-school youths by working through NYA work project groups.

He spoke at the invitation of Miss Ruth Huey, State Director, and of Miss Josephine Pazzdra, State Supervisor, of Homemaking Education.

"Assigned to National Youth Administration work projects are groups of out-of-school youth who need work experience and vocational training," Mr. Kellam said.

"The youths on a project will ordinarily have an interest in common. A sewing-room group of a school cafeteria group probably will be interested in a homemaking education class, a group assigned to clerical work may be anxious to receive training in stenography or typing. We welcome your cooperation in providing off-the-job training for these youths."

Mr. Kellam and Miss Pazzdra, told the conference that part time training classes will be set up first by the Division of Homemaking for the benefit of girls assigned to NYA projects in counties in which the project employment total is large, and that the program later may be extended to other counties in which work projects are being operated.

The National Youth Administration seeks to provide work projects on which youths will receive job-training and encourages the youths to take full advantage of off-the-job training courses which have made available, Mr. Kellam said.

Employment In State Shows a Favorable Trend

AUSTIN, Tex.—Employment and payrolls in Texas continue to make favorable year-to-year comparisons, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research has reported.

Records from about 1,900 Texas establishments showed a total of more than 95,000 employees during September, an increase of 7.2 per cent over the like month last year and an increase of 2.3 per cent over the preceding month.

Weekly payrolls for these firms totaled $2,364,000, an increase of 19.4 per cent over September last year but a fraction of 1 per cent below the preceding month.

Cities showing gains above the State average in employment and payrolls over both a year ago and the preceding month were Amarillo, El Paso, Houston and Wichita Falls.

CHRISTIAN RENEWAL

Text: Titus 2:1-11

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance

NO lesson could strike more vitally into the immediate and most acute problems facing large numbers of Christians in the world today than this lesson based upon the letter of Paul to Titus.

Suppose there is a conflict between this subjection and obedience and the readiness unto every good work. In Germany today leaders of the church are in conflict with the government because they believe that Hitler is demanding what the state has no right to ask. In Italy there is no liberty of the individual against the dictates of Mussolini; but can one say that the will of Mussolini is the will of God? Men are being put to death in Russia because they are unwilling to submit to the dictates of Stalin.

Stalin, Hitler, and Mussolini are rulers. They represent authority and they demand obedience. Does what Paul is ascribing to the Christians must, as a matter of right, give obedience to such rulers, or is there a higher law of right affecting a man's relation to rulers and the state?

FORTUNATELY, the New Testament itself answers these questions, and reminds us that Paul's injunctions to obey rulers is to be taken subject to considerations of conscience and reason. There were times when these early Christians said, "We ought to obey God rather than men," when they chose to defy the law or the decree of the state, accepting imprisonment or persecution rather than going against their consciences.

There ought to be no mistake about this. Everyone who teaches this lesson in a Christian church ought to avoid very clearly the attitude that has too often been taken of approving of rule and authority, regardless of its justice and its right.

It is a means of establishing better mutual understandings and larger conceptions of right where men pursue it in the right spirit, but controversy defeats its purpose where it is blind and bigoted and contentious.

The peaceful quest of truth represents far more truly the part of the Christian.

Industries in which the gains exceeded the State average for both comparable periods were foundries, machine shops, mill work, chemicals, cotton textile mills, women's clothing, cotton oil mills, flour mills, meat packing crude petroleum producing, and power and light.

From August 16 through September 15, fifteen establishments employing 1,684 workers, reported

Failures Decline Sharply In Texas

AUSTIN, Tex.—The number of business failures in Texas during September declined sharply below those of the like month last year but the liabilities of these firms were more than double those of the firms that failed in September last year, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

During the third quarter the number of failures was slightly below those of the corresponding period a year ago, but general wage-rate increases averaging 8.6 per cent and affecting 1,676 employees, the Bureau's analysis of the figures showed. From January 1 through September 15 a total of 205 establishments, reporting to the University Bureau and employing 51,499 workers, granted general wage-rate increases, averaging 8.2 per cent and affecting 45,681 employees. Since January 1 only two establishments have reported general wage-rate decreases, with eleven employees affected.

Chestnut season is here again. Whole question is, whose will be pulling out of the fire this year?
